THIEF RIVER FALLS TIMES

Volume 75 (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Wednesday, July 2, 1986 Number 53

NANCY JO HESSE, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Hesse, is one of nine candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title this year. Nancy has a rural Red Lake Falls address and St. Hilaire telephone number but considers Plummer her home community. She is a 1986 graduate of Pershing high school in Plummer as valedictorian and just relinquished her Miss Plummer title at the pageant last Friday evening.

Nancy Jo Hesse In Miss TRF Pageant

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

(This is the second in a series of interviews with candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title at the annual Miss America preliminary scholarship pageant to be conducted Saturday, August 2, at the Lincoln high school auditorium.)

After giving up a crown and title she held for two years just last week, Nancy Jo Hesse of Plummer will be seeking a new crown and title August 2. Nancy Jo held the Miss Plummer title in 1984 and 1985 and is one of nine candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls crown.

Eighteen-year-old Nancy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Hesse of rural Red Lake Falls but considers Plummer her home community. She graduated from Pershing high school in Plummer in 1986. A brown-eyed blonde she is five feet five inches tall and weighs 110 pounds. Her pageant talent number will be a song and dance routine to a medley of "Make Your Own Kind of Music," "All That Jazz" and "Step to the Rear."

Music has been very much a part of Nancy Jo's active school participation. She was in band for eight years, marching band and pep band member, school chorus member for five years and took piano lessons for two years. She also attended dance classes in the Miss Teen of Minnesota and Miss Plummer programs.

She earned star ratings in district and state vocal and flute solo and ensemble divisions for several years and was selected for participation in the Bemidji state university honors band. She is church organist at Redeemer Lutheran church in Plummer where she has also been a Sunday school superintendent and Bible school teacher.

Not one to let one area of interest occupy all her time, however, she was involved in the Plummer school basketball program for six years (recognized as most improved player in 1985-86) and a football cheerleader for three years. She has been a co-captain of the basketball team and also enjoys softball, football, tennis and volleyball.

An "A" honor student and valedictorian of her graduating class, she was also selected as a Governor's Scholar and made educational trips to St. Paul, originated a peer tutoring program at Pershing high school, was class president for sophomore through senior years, was a junior honor guard for commencement in 1985 and a member of the community education advisory council.

Nancy Jo has three older sisters: Mrs. Milt (Diane) Grinde of Plummer, Mrs. Pat (Bonnie) Wichterman of Plummer and Vickie Hesse of Moorhead. Her hobbies include snow skiing, snowmobiling, ice skating, water skiing and other water sports, motorcycling, bicycling and photography. She will attend Bemidji state university this fall to obtain a bachelor's degree in business administration with additional training in teaching and counseling.

All Class Reunion Among Goodridge Weekend Events

Fourth of July and all class reunion celebration will be held in Goodridge Friday through Sunday and is being sponsored by the Goodridge Area Historical society, Inc.

On July 4 the society will have tours of museum buildings and the Goodridge Jaycees will sponsor horseshoe and softball tournaments starting at 9 a.m. That evening the society will have a dinner theater starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Goodridge school. The theater production, "Mama's Quilting Party" and the sit-down dinner require advance ticket purchases.

The all class reunion celebration will be held July 5 with most of the activities being held at the Goodridge school. Open house starts at 10 a.m. and will conclude at 4 p.m. There will be tours of the school during those hours.

The all class reunion parade will start at 1:30 p.m. and the entries will line up on the school football field. Dale Hanson of Goodridge is chairman of the parade. Any class having an entry may register with Hanson by calling him or registering at the school. All participants in the class reunion are asked to pre-register at the school on July 5. Refreshments will be served at the school during the tour and registration hours.

A reminiscing hour from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. will be held at the school with the banquet and program to follow.

Following the banquet there will be a special party for all participants in the class reunion and will be held at the city hall. This will include a dance band.

A souvenir button designed by Ethel Wiseth will be provided to all class reunion members who paid their $10 registration fee. Anyone wanting to purchase a souvenir button and who plans to attend only the special party may purchase a button for $2.50 at the school during the day or from the historical society later in the evening if unable to pick up the button earlier in the day.

On July 6 there will be ecumenical church services in the city park in Goodridge starting at 10:30 a.m. A potluck dinner will be served following services at the senior citizen center. In case of rain the services will be held in the school.

To Meet Monday

Pennington county fair board will meet Monday at 7 p.m. at the county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls. Department superintendents are also urged to be in attendance to assist in reviewing readiness for the 76th annual fair to be presented July 16-20. Grandstand at the fairgrounds was recently painted and the seats numbered in preparation for this year's fair.

Conservation Reserve Sign-up Delayed To Nov.

Initially, sign-up for the conservation reserve portion of the RIM program was expected to begin in June, but due to regulation and procedure development delays, a November sign-up is now expected, according to the Pennington soil and water conservation district.

Purpose of Minnesota conservation reserve is to encourage farmers to retire marginal land from crop production and reestablish grass or tree cover. Establishment of vegetative cover will reduce erosion, protect water quality and improve wildlife habitat.

A farmer may receive up to $75 per acre to establish a permanent cover of grass or trees. If eligible, the farmer will have two options for retiring the marginal land. One is a 10-year easement and the other is a permanent easement. The payment rates for the 10-year easement is based on the federal CRP. The permanent easement is based on average market value of agriculutral land for your township. These figures are available at the Pennington county soil conversation office.

Payment will be in a one-time lump sum after contract is approved.

Anyone wishing more information on the Minnesota conservation reserve can stop by the soil conservation office on highway 59 south or call 681-3348.

Klamar And Skaar Elected To Area FmHA Committee

Roland Klamar of Gatzke and Andrew Skaar of Thief River Falls were elected to membership on the Farmers Home administration (FmHA) committee for Pennington, East Marshall and northwest Beltrami county area in a mail election completed Monday.

Voter turn-out was light, according to county supervisor Randal E. Hemmerlin, and both of the candidates received the same number of votes. As a result, advice is being sought from the state office to determine which of the two candidates will serve for a one-year term and which for a two-year term. The longer term was to have gone to the candidate with the greatest number of votes.

A third board member will be appointed for a three-year term to complete the three-member committee. In the future, one member will be elected each year for a three-year term. This was the first year an election has been held rather than having the committee designated by the agency.

Klamar and Skaar, who have served on the committee for one year and two years, respectively, were nominated by petition as candidates for the election. The 1985 farm bill calls for two elected and one designated member on the county committee.

The county committee assists the county office in determining the eligibility of applicants for certain types of FmHA loans. Farmers who live in the Pennington, east Marshall and nothwest Beltrami county area, have their prinicipal farming operation in the area and derive the principal part of their income from farming are eligible to vote and to nominate candidates for election to the committee.

150 Donate Blood At Recent 2-Day Drive In TR Falls

Clarice Collins, blood drive coordinator, reports a large turnout for the recent two-day blood drive held in Thief River Falls at the Northwest Medical services chapel. A total of 165 people volunteered to donate their blood to help patients in this area, and 150 units of blood were actually drawn during the drive. There were 18 first time donors.

Jan Gallagher, donor resources manager at United Blood services, commented, "this is a clear example of concerned people in this area responding unselfishly to the need for blood. You can all feel pride that these volunteer donors are your friends and neighbors."

Richards And Jorgenson Won't Seek Reelection

Two veteran Pennington county elected officials with a combined service of 58 years will not be on the ballot for 1986 elections. Sheriff Charles Richards with 30 years in office and treasurer Ellsworth Jorgenson with 28 years of service have both announced they will not be candidates for reelection.

Filing for county office opened Tuesday and will continue through July 15. If there are more than two candidates for any one office, the number of candidates will be reduced to two in the primary election in September. General election will be held November 4 with officials elected to take office Jan. 2, 1987.

Several filings have been received early in the filing period and at least two contests are already assured. James Haugen, a Thief River Falls police officer, and Robert Wold, deputy sheriff for 12 years, have filed for the vacated office of county sheriff. Incumbent David Olin and challenger Richard Sather have filed for the office of county attorney.

William Penning, a former Thief River Falls city council member, has filed for county commissioner in the Fourth District currently served by Otto Stenberg. Incumbent office holders Eugene Prestegaard, county recorder and Kenneth Olson, auditor, have also filed for reelection. Second District commissioner Donald Grabanski has not filed for reelection but has indicated he will do so soon. The other county office to be filled by election is that of county coroner, currently held by Dr. E.O. Thorsgard.

Sheriff Charles Richards was appointed to the sheriff's position in 1956 and first elected in 1958. He was elected to office seven times, including four times without opposition.

Sheriff Richards said he was announcing his decision not to seek reelection early in the filing period in consideration of others who may have an interest in seeking the office. He said he has greatly appreciated the support of the voters in Pennington county in past elections and the cooperation the sheriff's office has received from the public and other law enforcement agencies during his years as sheriff.

Whoever is elected as Richards' successor will be only the fifth sheriff to serve Pennington county since it was established in 1910. W.J. LaBree served from 1910 to 1922, O.L. Ihle from 1923 to 1934 and Arthur J. Rambeck from 1935 until 1956.

Cheney And Tverstol Will Retire From Marshall Offices

Two Marshall county officers with a combined service of 40 years will retire from their offices at the end of the present terms and several candidates have already filed for the positions.

Auditor Charles Cheney with 24 years of service and county recorder Sanford Tverstol with 16 years in that office have announced they will not seek reelection.

Filing for the office of auditor are Gwen Schmidt of Stephen, deputy auditor, and Wayne Bendickson of Warren, presently serving as county assessor.

Seeking the county recorder position are Marion Halvorson, Warren, a clerk in the recorder's office; Dwight M Peterson, Rodney L. Erickson and Lonnie Stauffenecker, all of Warren, and James L. Clark, Stephen.

Incumbent sheriff Dennis Brekke of Warren has filed for reelection and Bruce Erickson of Warren has also filed for that office. Incumbent county commissioners Calvin Melgard of Warren, District 1, and Delray Larson of Gatzke, District 5, have filed for reelection and so far are unopposed.

In Red Lake county Sheriff Kern Knutson, who has 16 years in that office, has indicated that he will not seek reelection. Allan Morken has filed for the office of sheriff.

Incumbent office holders who filed for reelection include Dave Kanke, auditor; G. W. (Jerry) Thiber, county recorder; and Dan Gelle, county attorney. Treasurer Jo Guillemette is out of town on vacation but intends to file for reelection. Office of coroner in Red Lake county is appointive rather than elective.

Interest In 1986 Wheat Poll Here Running High

Although the deadline for voting in the 1986 wheat poll on mandatory limits for production has been extended to July 14, about 150 ballots have already been cast in Pennington county, according to Phillip Bergland, director of the Pennington County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation service. Original deadline for voting in the poll had been announced as July 7.

In a letter to county extension agents and others on June 9, extension economists Fred Benson and Steven Taff at the University of Minnesota pointed out, "Mandatory controls are being talked about increasingly around the country, but the major commodity groups have yet to take a firm stand in favor, perhaps due to recognition of the potentially serious economic implications of controls."

The econimists also provided a summary of analysis of the wheat poll and its implications as prepared by personnel at Texas A&M University. Contributing to that analysis were Edward Smith, extension economist in grain marketing and policy; Mechel Paggi, extension economist in international trade; James Richardson, professor at the Texas agricultural experiment station; and Ronald Knutson, extension economist in policy and marketing.

"Although this poll is non-binding, it should not be taken lightly," the Texas researchers report. "Its inclusion in the farm bill reflects a growing demand for mandatory production controls by producers in the wheat industry as well as other producer groups frustrated by surplus production and low farm prices. Producers, therefore, must consider the many consequences before answering this simple question.

The question on the ballot, taken from the language of the 1985 farm bill, states: "Do you favor imposition of mandatory limits on the production of wheat that will result in wheat prices that are not lower than 125 per cent of the cost of production (excluding land and residual returns to management)?"

Some of the questions and answers posed by the Texas analysis (which applies equally to Minnesota) include the following:

"What does the Secretary of Agriculture consider to be the cost of wheat production?" Based on previous USDA cost of production estimates, we estimate the national average cost of producing wheat (excluding land and residual returns to management) to be about $3.23 per bushel. The objective of a mandatory production control program, therefore, would be to raise the price of wheat to $4.04 per bushel (1.25 times $3.23 per bushel).

"What quantities of wheat would be sold if prices were increased to 125 per cent of this cost of production?" "The answer to this question is vital to our analysis since it determines the level of production necessary to sustain a $4.04 per bushel price. Unfortunately there is no simple answer. The quantity of wheat sold at $4.04 per bushel will depend on a myriad of factors affecting the domestic and export sectors. For the purpose of the analysis, anticipated sales were pegged at 650 million bushels for domestic food, 70 million bushels for seed, 90 million bushels for domestic feed and 1.56 billion bushels for export.

"How much will production need to be cut to maintain the price at 125 per cent of the cost of production?" Assuming use quantities listed above 57 per cent of the wheat base would need to be removed from grain production to support a market clearing price of $4.04 bushel.

"What mandatory supply management options are available?" Under conditions of a sufficiently overwhelming favorable vote, marketing quota authority in the 1985 farm bill might be utilized by USDA. Alternatively, Congress could enact new legislation authorizing acreage allotments or providing legal interpretation of marketing quotas as a tool for controlling production.

Area Interest Is High In Wheat Poll For 1986

The remaining portion of this article is taken verbatim from the Texas A&M report:

Mandatory Acreage Controls

Mandatory acreage controls or allotments would allow wheat production on a specific number of acres allotted to each farm [illegible] on its share of the national [illegible] necessary to meet the Administration's supply-management objectives. Acreage allotments were used extensively in the 1950's and 60's and still exist in tobacco.

Experience has shown that when acreage allotments are used, in the absence of marketing quotas, the program is ineffective in limiting production to the desired level. Farmers select their best acreage and farm the allotted acreage more intensively. The result is increased production per acre, requiring further tightening of the allotment in future years.

If the Secretary determined, as in our analysis, that 57 per cent of the wheat base would have to be removed from grain production to meet the needs of the market at a price of $4.04 per bushel, farmers might only be allowed to plant wheat for grain on 43 per cent of their allotted acreage. The question that immediately surfaces is, "What can we do with the idled acreage?" Allowances for use of the idled acreage become extremely important to producers in determining their preference for this type of mandatory program.

The rules for transfer of the allotment are also very important. If the allotment is tied to the land and non-transferable, then the price of land tends to be bid-up. If allotments are transferable, then any profits resulting from the allotment will be quickly capitalized into the allotment's value. Is the landowner better off? The answer depends again on what he can do with his idled acreage. If the idled acres can be profitably farmed, then the producer would gain from the capitalized value of the allotment as well as from the earnings on wheat. If the idled acres cannot be farmed, the capitalized value of the allotment must be offset against the reduced value of land that cannot be farmed and the cost of controlling weeds and erosion on the idled land.

Allotments tied to a specific crop tend to restrict the farmer's ability to adjust crop mixes in response to changes in relative crop prices. If idled acreage is allowed to be planted to alternative crops, furthermore, it could result in surpluses for non-allotment crops, thus tending to force these producers to elect allotments for their crops.

The bottom line is that farmers are not automatically better off from mandatory acreage controls. Whether they are better off depends on the rules of the game and each specific situation. At this point, we do not know the rules under which mandatory controls would operate.

Marketing Quotas

It is not surprising that the 1985 farm bill, under its wheat title, has a marketing quota section immediately following the section requiring the "Wheat Poll." A marketing quota is a mandatory mechanism which determines the quantity of a commodity that can be marketed. The national quota, set by the Secretary of Agriculture, is based on the quantity of wheat necessary to meet the expected market needs, taking into consideration domestic and export requirements as well as emergency food aid needs and adequate carryover stocks.

After the establishment of the national quota, the Secretary would assign a marketing quota for each farm on which wheat was planted or considered planted for harvest during the 1981-1985 base period. The marketing quota would be equal to the product derived by multiplying the farm's base acreage by its farm program yield and reduced by the appropriate percentage necessary to bring national marketing down to the level of national quota. Penalties would be assessed to producers who marketed wheat beyond their assigned quotas.

The Secretary has the authority to announce a marketing quota for wheat to cover the crop years 1987-1990. To implement a quota under the 1985 farm bill provisions, the Secretary must proclaim the national wheat quota by June 15, 1986. He must also conduct, by mail ballot, a marketing quota referendum by August 1, 1986. This referendum is separate from the non-binding poll conducted in June, which is the topic of this paper. The Secretary may proclaim that marketing quotas are in effect for 1987-1990 if he determines that 60 per cent or more of the eligible producers, voting in the referendum, approved marketing quotas. According to the 1985 farm bill, the national quota could be terminated or adjusted in any marketing year the Secretary determines there exists a national emergency or there has been a material change in the demand for wheat. Our analysis indicates that a reduction in export and feed use demand would be likely.

Previous experience with supply control programs indicates that marketing quotas are the most effective means of controlling production because there is virtually no slippage. Quotas are, however, hard to maintain because of political pressure to increase the national quota once it is established.

As was the case with acreage allotments, the use of idled cropland is a big factor in a producer's decision to favor a marketing quota. Many of the same consequences may apply.

In the case of mandatory acreage controls or marketing quotas, the incidence of government involvement in agriculture is high. In terms of taxpayer dollars, however, mandatory programs are relatively inexpensive supply-management alternatives.

What Are the Consequences Of Continuing the Current Program?

The current program calls for voluntary compliance in announced acreage reduction programs in return for direct government income support (deficiency) payments and access to price support loans. In addition, authorization exists for a 45 million acre conservation reserve.

Voluntary acreage limitations call for different levels of idled acreage each year, depending on the projected carryovers. If carryover stocks are expected to exceed one billion bushels (highly likely for the next few years), the annual acreage reduction requirement will be between 20-30 per cent (20-27.5 per cent in 1987) of base acreage. If stocks are expected to be less than one billion bushels, the acreage reduction requirements would be not more than 20 per cent.

The conservation reserve program provides for up to 45 million acres of land being taken out of production for a 10 year period. Available USDA data suggests that about 25 per cent of this land (11.3 million acres) would have wheat base. This is about 22 per cent of the land that would be taken out of grain production under a mandatory control program that was designed to raise the price of wheat to $4.04 per bushel. The main question surrounding the conservation reserve program is whether the money is going to be appropriated to remove 45 million acres from production. With potential Gramm-Rudmann-Hollings budget cut restrictions on funding, this program could suffer.

Continuation of the current farm program would likely result in farm level prices being determined by the loan rate for the next few years. In addition, the presence of large carryover stocks would likely lead to further reductions in the loan rate based on the loan rate formula in the 1985 farm bill. It would be difficult for the market to absorb the expected 1.88 billion bushels of stocks on hand as of June 1, 1986, with the acreage reduction requirements called for in the farm bill. Voluntary acreage reduction programs have never been a very effective tool for controlling production due to slippage.

A policy scenario which could lead to different price results involves the implementation of a wheat marketing loan by the Secretary, which is authorized in the 1985 farm bill. Initial indications are that in rice, where the marketing loan is currently in effect, exports increase as market prices fall to the world price level. Government payments initially rise sharply, offsetting the fall in market price. Once stocks are drawn down, however, market prices should rise above current levels. Regardless of whether the marketing loan is used, the current program will be relatively costly to the U.S. treasury.

Conclusions

The "Wheat Poll," although non-binding, could have important implications for future wheat programs. The market says we have overproduced. Effectively managed mandatory production controls provide an orderly way to get resources out of agriculture.

The decision to vote in favor or against mandatory production controls is multi-faceted. Producers must consider the short- and long-run consequences of mandatory supply controls versus the current program. The basic choice is between the current voluntary program with relatively high government costs and lower market prices and a mandatory program that costs less but could result in relatively higher prices, lower export and fee demand, and considerably lower production. In any event, as in any political issue, it is important that farmers make their preference known.

450 Attend Rindal Church Anniversary

About 450 people attended the 100th anniversary of Rindal Lutheran Church, located on Tryall Ridge in New Solum Township, Sunday. Perfect sunny June weather added to the enjoyment of the memorable occasion with the overflow crowd hearing the service under a tent erected next to the church. Rev. Silas Erickson, who served as pastor from 1944-1947, returned from Minnetonka to preach the sermon, accompanied by his wife.

Rindal Lutheran Church merged with Our Savior's Lutheran Church in Thief River Falls in 1976. The Rindal Sunday School had already joined in 1974. The Ladies Aid was the last organization to join and did so in 1980. Before joining with Our Savior's or other churches, many of the Rindal members held services in homes, as it was very hard for them to see church services being discontinued.

In order to keep the Rindal Church as a landmark, the Rindal Cemetery Corporation was organized Nov. 25, 1975, to take care of the upkeep of the building and cemetery. In the church history booklet, on sale for $3.50, the history of the New Solum Cemetery Association and the formation of the Rindal Cemetery Association is recorded, as well as the history of the church.

"It is good to have memories and reflect on the past," reminded Rev. Erickson, who is now serving Calvary Lutheran Church in Golden Valley. "Rindal isn't just Rindal today; it has spread out over the area and the entire country. It is this ministry of the past which still exists wherever you are, as you witness. We thank God for the opportunity to be together today, the work and the expense, into a church abandoned. Here is a monument to the ministry of those who believe in Jesus Christ and all the souls brought into fellowship with Christ. The church was built on conviction. It is that faith which is so important.

Rev. Erickson told of his trip to the Holy Land, where he said he did not see Jesus nor the Disciples in person, and compared that experience to Rindal on their anniversary Sunday, saying, "Today we don't see the early pastors or pioneers but Rindal is not dead. We want Rindal to continue wherever the Gospel is preached. Rindal means 'you' and it will continue as you witness and proclaim Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior."

Rev. Erickson reminisced about his recent visit to the Rindal Church in Norway, from where the roots of the New Solum Rindal Church originated with 23 pioneer families organizing on Feb. 28, 1886. He reminded former members that when we confess, "I believe in the Holy Christian Church," it is the fellowship of believers any place in the world who can say "Jesus is the Son of the Living God and my Savior."

Special recognition was given Mrs. Ida Gustafson for being the oldest known confirmand. She will celebrate her 100th birthday July 11. She responded by telling a few memories.

Vocal solos were sung by Rev. Erickson, "The Holy City," and Mrs. Lonnie (Janice) Nyflot, "The Old Rugged Cross Made the Difference." Harvey Dyrud sang in Norwegian, "Livet Er Kort," which means "Life Is Short," and Duane Rafteseth sang "Fill My Cup, Lord." Hymns sung by the congregation were "The Church's One Foundation" and "Blest Be The Tie That Binds."

Mrs. Ray (Jeanie) Nelson acknowledged the many floral memorials which beautified the church and were later used as centerpieces for the catered dinner.

Mrs. Oliver (Sylvia) Thompson played the piano, Robert Dahl gave the welcome and led the service. Ushers were Oliver Thompson, Ferrel Ranum, Clifford Johnson, Richard Haugen, Ervin Jarshaw and Jon Hanson.

Registrations for the dinner were received from 440 persons. Plans were made to serve 500. There was much activity on Saturday, with preparations and people visiting the church and cemetery.

Current officers of Rindal Lutheran Church Cemetery Association, which organized the anniversary, are: chairman, Michael Johnson; vice chairman and secretary, Vernon Holmstrom; treasurer, Inga M. Payne, and directors, Richard Haugen, Clifford Johnson, Irvin Jarshaw, Ferrel Ranum and Steve Holmstrom.

county treasurer position in the 1958 primary election and defeated Les Gustafson in the general election, carrying all but two precincts in the county. Since then he has been reelected to six more four-year terms, each time without opposition.

Jorgenson is only the fifth person to serve as county treasurer and has the longest service of all of them. Andrew Tronston served from 1910 to 1914, Theodore H. Liden from 1915 to 1918, John Gullingsrud from 1919 to 1938 and A.R. Johnsrud from 1939 to 1958.

"I know I'm really going to miss the relationships I have established with people coming into the office to discuss and to pay their taxes," Jorgenson said. "Paying taxes isn't always the most pleasant thing a person has to do, and I have appreciated the general understanding by the public of the duties of this office over the years. I also hope I have been able to explain the system and the reasons things [illegible] they are in a reasonable and satisfactory manner over the years."

Paying Too Much For Natural Gas?

By Rose F. Bates, Director of Consumer Affairs, U.S. Department of Energy

It is a common but mistaken assumption that federal price controls on natural gas benefit American consumers by keeping prices from rising. Facts indicate otherwise. Natural gas prices have actually fallen since natural gas was partially released from government controls.

But natural gas still costs too much in today's market. The Energy Department estimates consumers could save $55 billion over the next decade if Congress completely removed natural gas price controls.

These consumer savings would result from increased production of gas discovered before 1978, so-called "old gas." Existing regulations hold old gas prices so low that there is no economic incentive to produce this gas, even though it is easier and cheaper to produce than most other natural gas. The Department of Energy estimates price controls on old gas will deprive Americans of as much gas as we consume during two years. This lost old gas must be replaced by energy from more expensive energy sources, including imported oil and gas.

Price controls inhibit competition, which is the best guarantee of adequate supplies at reasonable prices. Contrary to those critics who predicted crude oil prices would skyrocket if price controls were removed, oil prices have steadily fallen since President Reagan issued his executive order to end crude oil price controls. We firmly believe that natural gas prices would move in the same direction — down — if all price controls were abolished.

As Secretary of Energy John S. Herrington has stated, "The Administration supports comprehensive deregulation to promote even greater competition and provide American gas consumers with lower and more stable natural gas prices."

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), the government agency which oversees the gas industry, recently took action to create a more competitive natural gas market by providing producers and consumers open access to pipeline transportation. Open access should permit producers and consumers to deal directly with one another and establish competitive prices for natural gas.

The natural gas market has shown it can work for the benefit of consumers if given the chance. Full decontrol of natural gas would remove the last obstacle to providing American consumers with adequate supplies of gas at reasonable prices.

Enlightening Ideas Help Avoid Trouble

Shedding some light on the subject of outdoor home safety and outdoor entertaining are these four bright ideas from the people who make GTE Sylvania light bulbs:

- Winding walks around the house or leading to a garden or pool need proper illumination to prevent accidents, missteps or falls, and also to brighten up the footwalks. Low mushroom type, bell-shaped fixtures work well in these areas. You can mount bulbs on trees or on poles to illuminate the dining area, pond, garden, game area or pool.
- Spotlights or floodlights tend to make your property look larger and can provide a safeguard against unwanted visitors. Energy saving outdoor flood lamps are now available that help cut energy use without affecting light output.
- Yellow bulbs—flood or spot—repel insects and are recommended where food is being prepared and where people are dining. These yellow bug lights can be placed in lightweight oriental lanterns to create a festive atmosphere as well as help keep the insects away.
- Whenever possible, it's best to have underground wiring installed for use with outdoor lighting equipment. If you have to use above ground wiring, install weatherproof outlets that can be used for short distance illumination with long outdoor type extension cords. Keep cords out of the way where they can't be tripped over. If long distance lighting is desired, you'll need to mount duplex outlet boxes on a short metal pole.

Bright ideas for outdoor living can make your home a safer place.

Many other tips on outdoor lighting can be found in a free consumer booklet called "Bright Ideas For Living Out-Of-Doors." It's available by writing to GTE Products Corp., Sylvania Lighting Center, Danvers, Mass. 02193.

Citizens Warned Against Use Of Illegal Fireworks

Department of public safety commissioner Paul Tschida announced that according to hospital reports last year to the state fire marshal's division, illegal fireworks caused 87 injuries to Minnesota citizens in 1985. Sixteen were serious enough to require extended treatment including partial amputation, stitches, removal of embedded objects, sight and hearing loss and burns to critical areas of the body.

State fire marshal Wes Werner, in reminding would be violators about injuries, said, "that's exactly why fireworks are illegal in Minnesota." Werner cautions citizens that the only fireworks legal in Minnesota are caps for toy cap pistols. He said his office is currently working with the Minnesota attorney general's office to put a stop to fireworks manufacturing firms outside the state from sending catalogs to potential customers in Minnesota.

Werner says fireworks appear to be "fun stuff until you start looking at the injuries they cause." Werner describes how one injury last year resulted from a homemade device using some copper pipe filled with matches and gunpowder to be ignited with a long firecracker fuse. The device exploded before being ignited and blew up in the person's hand resulting in a badly severed and broken thumb.

Werner reports there were 23 burn injuries from illegal fireworks in 1985, along with 11 eyes injuries, 12 involving fingers and hands, 19 facial injuries and 22 first degree burns, and other miscellaneous injuries.

ICCC Employees Steiger And Nelson Update Credentials

Leann Steiger of rural Red Lake Falls and Wanda Nelson of Thief River Falls have recently updated their center base child development associate (CDA) credentials. Completion of the requirements is one of the ways Steiger and Nelson have continued to develop their knowledge and cometency in the early childhood and parent education profession.

Last spring both Steiger and Nelson earned the home visitor child development associate designation. In order to receive that credential they worked with a field advisor from Bemidji state university, completed a detailed portfolio in 13 areas relating to working with parents and children, and attended numerous workshops and conferences. The final step in the process was completion of observations and assessments of their skills by a four person assessment team.

Steiger and Nelson are currently employed as home base educators for the head start program operated out of Inter-county community council. Steiger has provided home visits and center bases in the Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls areas. Nelson has provided home visits and center base sessions in the Goodridge and Thief River Falls areas.

The program serves pre-school children and their families. Both Steiger and Nelson have AA degrees from the university of Minnesota at Crookston. Steiger has served as president of the Northwest chapter of the Minnesota association for the education of young children for the past two years.

FmHA Guaranteed Operating Loans Nearly Doubled

Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), has made nearly twice the number of guaranteed operating loans this year as it did at this time last year, according to Vance L. Clark, FmHA administrator.

As of June 4, FmHA had guaranteed 11,024 operating loans totaling $1 billion during fiscal 1986. At the same time in fiscal 1985, FmHA had made 5,951 guaranteed loans amounting to $675 million.

"After a somewhat slow start," Clark said, "banks and other private sector lending institutions are participating to a greater extent with FmHA in providing farm operating credit to farmers who need special help.

"For the first time, direct farm operating loan funds have been exhausted in some states," he said. Additional requests for operating credit in those states will have to be met through guaranteed loans."

As an example of the "new spirit of cooperation," Clark noted that in just three weeks since the announcement of operation assist, private lenders have accepted 232 FmHA loan guarantees for $17.9 million. Under operation assist, FmHA county supervisors complete paperwork for farm credit applicants and take them to a private lender to try to work out an FmHA guaranteed loan. If the pivate lender makes the loan, FmHA agrees to reimburse the lender up to 90 per cent of any loss which may occur.

The interest by down program, authorized in the 1985 farm bill, already has resulted in 819 loans for $83 million. Under the interest buy down, FmHA will match a re[illegible] interest rates by a bank of up to two points. That agreement can result in a reduction of up to 4 [illegible] farmers.

The approved lender program had attracted 1,300 banks as of April 30. An approved lender is a bank or other lending institution whose forms and paperwork have been approved by FmHA in advance. Guarantee requests from approved lenders are given high priority by the agency.

"Private sector lenders have accepted the new FmHA programs designed to help as many efficient farmers as possible to stay in business," Clark said. "The word is out that the Federal Government can no longer afford to meet all the demand for operating funds from farmers who are facing financial difficulty. From now on, that's a shared responsibility of both the private and public sectors."

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

—Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. I am age 32, very ill and have been advised by my doctor to stop working. I would like to apply for disability benefits before I stop work so that a decision could be made while an income still exists. Is this possible? Red Lack Falls.

A. I understand your situation but there is a contradiction in approving disability benefits to someone who is actively working full time at their regular job. An application from someone working full time would likely be denied based on earnings and work activity without making a medical determination about their health.

Q. When I applied for disability, I furnished the names and addresses of my doctors who have treated me. I have been told to see another doctor for a consultive examination. Isn't my own doctor's report good enough for social security?

A. The decision on whether you're disable as defined in the social security law is made by a team at the state's disability determination unit. The team is composed of a disability examiner and physician. The team relies on medical evidence submitted by those who have treated or examined you. Sometimes, when the reports are not conclusive or the severity of illness or injury is not adequately defined, the team may contact your physician or ask you to go for additional tests or evaluations. By the way, social security pays for all of these additional tests and consultations.

Q. I have heard a lot about visual disability benefits. Can you tell me what a person's eyesight has to be with glasses? Without glasses? Grand Forks, ND

A. If your vision is not better than 20-200 in your better eye, even with corrective lenses, or if your vision field is 20 degrees or less, your are usually considered "blind" under the social security law. Benefits for disability based on blindness exist with both social security and supplemental security income (SSI).

Q. In two years I will be eligible for a retirement benefit from both my civil service and social security coverage. It is true that my government pension may affect the amount of my social security benefit? Thief River Falls.

A. Yes. Your social security benefits may be reduced because of eligibility to a pension base on employment not covered by social security. If you are first eligible after 1985 for both a pension based on noncovered employment and either a retirement or disability social security benefit, a different computation formula will be used in figuring the amount of your social security benefit. This results in a lower benefit. This does not affect the amount of your private pension, only the amount of your social security benefit. This is being phased in over a five-year period between 1987 and 1990.

Q. If I take a job with a church, which is a non-profit organization, will I have to pay social security taxes? Strandquist.

A. Yes. All employees of non-profit organizations have been covered under social security since 1984.

Q. I got a letter from a firm that said new legislation may require me to list my children by social security number on my tax return. Is this true?

A. No. There is no current legislation that requires you to list your children by social security number on your tax return.

Election Judge Lists Are Due At Co. Auditor

In letters to the state's two major political party leaders, Secretary of State Joan Growe reminded them that their lists of persons eligible to serve as election judges must be submitted to the county auditors by July 1.

According to Growe, public confidence in the election results from Minnesota's long tradition of having equal representation from both political parties at the polling place. "Which," she said, "makes the lists very important."

County auditors determine if the persons on the party's lists are eligible voters and then forward the names to the city council and town boards in the county. The local governing body must select election judges from the lists submitted by the parties.

Members of political parties who are interested in being included on their party's list should get in touch with their county or legislative district party chair, Growe suggested.

Appointments of judges must be made by city councils and town boards no later than August 15 which is 25 days prior to the September 9 Primary.

Mesaba Concerned About Investment Tax Credit Loss

Mesaba Airlines has made a request of several senators to preserve the investment tax credit for new equipment placed in service prior to June 1 of 1986 that would otherwise have qualified for that credit under existing law. Several major airlines have also requested transition rules that allow new aircraft deliveries with the investment tax credit available as late as 1991.

Failure to enact such a transition rule, regarding the investment tax credit, will increase the lease cost of the company's smaller aircraft, its new fleet of 19-passenger Metro III aircraft. Should such increased costs be incurred, it will cause the company to reevaluate service to certain smaller cities it currently serves, according to David Knutson, vice president of finance.

In addition to the new fleet of Metro III aircraft, the company operates five 48-passenger jetprop aircraft into higher population density markets. The costs of ownership and leasing these larger aircraft are not affected by the proposed investment tax credit changes.

Minnesotans Are Garbage Dumpers, Not Managers

Statistics show that most Minnesotans are garbage dumpers, according to Bill Walker, chairman of the Minnesota waste management board. Every year Minnesotans "dump" mountains of material into landfills that could be recycled or otherwise reprocessed to recover resources.

"In 1983, for example, Minnesotans dumped approximately four million tons of solid waste," Walker said. "This amounts to approximately one ton annually for each Minnesotan — enough to fill the Metrodome twice each week or to fill garbage trucks arranged in a line, five miles wide, extending from Iowa to Canada.

However, there is hope that some state "dumpers" are being converted to "managers". On June 11, Olmsted county and with it Dodge county and the city of Rochester joined the ranks of "managers". On that day, city and county officials, local legislators and businessmen met to dedicate a recycling facility that is the first phase of an integrated solid waste management system expected to process 75,000 tons of waste each year that would otherwise go to local landfills.

The other facets of Olmsted county's waste management system include a 200 ton per day mass burn incinerator which will convert waste from Olmsted and Dodge counties into energy for the buildings on the campus of the former state hospital in Rochester, a compost project and an agressive public awareness program to reduce household waste and encourage participation in the recycling program.

Both the recycling center and the waste-to-energy facility (which will begin operation in January of 1987) were partially funded by grants and loans from the Minnesota waste management board totalling over $1.2 million. The grants and loans were awarded through the board's solid waste demonstration grant program.

"Waste management board-funded projects will be popping up all over the state as counties enter actively into nuts-and-bolts solid waste management and begin to bring management schemes into reality," Walker said. "Waste-to-energy projects have been funded, completed, proposed or are under construction in 18 locations around the state. Some are wast management board projects, some are not. What is important is that less solid waste will be going into state landfills, possibly as much as 5,000 tons less solid waste per day."

In addition, counties are planning and building transfer stations to serve these waste-to-energy facilities, organizing composting and recycling programs and taking a hard look at ways to educate people to reduce the amount of garbage they generate. Some of the worst "dumpers" operate out of households.

The Minnesota pollution control agency estimates that, while Minnesota could recover materials or energy from 77 per cent of its solid waste, only eight per cent was actually recovered in 1983. The rest went to landfills.

"Minnesota will have to do better than that", Walker said. "The dumpers can't solve the garbage problem: they can't even make it go away for awhile. Nearly one-third of Minnesota's landfills have less than five year's remaining capacity. New regulations and growing community awareness that landfills are not environmentally safe ways to manage waste will make the siting of new landfills difficult, if not impossible in the future.

"Don't be a dumper," he added. "Encourage your local officials to support projects that will give us all ample opportunities to be managers." For more information on solid waste management or any of the programs of the Minnesota Waste Management Board write the Board offices at 7323 68th Ave. N., Crystal, MN 55428, or call toll free 1-800-652-9747.

Effort To Help Uninsured Must Consider Costs

Federal efforts to address the health care needs of the uninsured must be sensitive to the rising cost of health insurance for the self-employed and smaller businesses, U.S. Senator Dave Durenberger said Thursday.

Durenberger's comments came at a hearing of his Senate subcommittee on intergovernmental relations which heard testimony on legislation addressing problems faced by the estimated 37 million Americans who have no health insurance.

"Problems facing the uninsured are serious and must be addressed," Durenberger said, "but the last thing we want to do is to add any obstacles to employers who are struggling — sometimes unsuccessfully — to provide health coverage to their employees."

Durenberger has introduced the "Access to Health Care Act of 1986," which uses a combination of incentives to health care providers, public and private employer financing and local, state and government tax policy to make health insurance coverage available to those not now covered.

"Although it seems impossible in this day of artificial hearts and organ transplants," Durenberger said, "37 million Americans are without the insurance coverage necessary to pay for a broken arm, appendicitis or the birth of a baby."

In depressed parts of rural Minnesota, Durenberger said, the percentage of uninsured individuals and families is higher than it is in many urban areas. He noted that a recent survey found that 15 per cent of the farm families in Minnesota were uninsured for some period of time in 1985.

"It's particularly disturbing to me that over 100,000 children in Minnesota are uninsured, and nearly one in five women between the ages of 18 and 24 have no medical or hospital insurance whatsoever," he added.

"While the effects on individuals and families without insurance are staggering," Durenberger said, "problems of the uninsured extend to society as a whole."

Studies have shown, he said, that the uninsured tend to postpone or go without routine checkups or treatments, often resulting in more serious — and more expensive — illnesses which society as a whole pays for through tax-supported programs or private insurance.

Durenberger said the estimated 37 million Americans who are uninsured are either too young to qualify for Medicare or not poor enough to qualify for Medicaid. Many have existing medical conditions which make them high risks and, thus, uninsurable in the private health insurance market.

Millions of others, Durenberger said, are employed part-time or on a temporary basis and are ineligible for employer-paid benefits. Still others are recently unemployed and have lost their health insurance benefits, or are self-employed or working for a small business that may not be able to afford health insurance benefits for its employees.

Durenberger need that legislative proposals to address the problems of the uninsured have important implications for employers and states and local governments.

Durenberger said he was anxious to gain the input of employers and others on how health insurance can be made more broadly available without introducing new obstacles to smaller businesses already struggling to provide their employees with coverage.

Among those who testified at Thursday's hearing in Washington, D.C. were Aaron Trippler of Communicating for Agriculture in Fergus Falls; Andrew Czajkowski, president of Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Minnesota; Sister Delores Super, chairman of the board of trustees of the St. Cloud hospital; and Don Hansen, president of Precise Products in St. Louis Park.

OLD RAILROAD FLATBEDS FIND NEW USE. Pennington county has begun using old railroad flatbed cars, as pictured above, for bridges. The idea is saving taxpayers quite a bit of money, according to Wayne Olson, Pennington county engineer. This bridge cost around $3,000 to $4,000 to put up in three days. A bridge by conventional methods would probably cost around $20,000 and require bids to be let, amounting to longer periods needed to put the bridge in. Olson said the flatbeds can hold up to 40,000 pounds, but have not been weight tested as bridges yet. This bridge is located two and one-half miles east of Thief River Falls and three-fourths mile south along county road 80. Olson said the county has also begun using old tank cars for culverts, which also amounts to quite a saving to taxpayers. The use of flatbeds and old tank cars is limited because of their size, however.

U.S. Senator Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

By now, most wheat farmers have heard about the upcoming poll of wheat producers. Some may have already received it in the mail. The poll was brought about by a provision in the 1985 Farm Bill. That section requires USDA to ask farmers whether they support a program which includes mandatory production controls for wheat. Farmers who want their vote to count must have the ballots postmarked on or before July 14.

I think the idea of asking farmers what they think about government programs is a good one. I've often used questionnaires to get feedback from farmers who attend my meetings or read my agricultural newsletters.

I do have concerns about this poll, though. The question is so badly worded that it is highly misleading. In order to avoid any criticism that it was seeking to influence the outcome, USDA decided to phrase the question identically to the legal language that appears in the Farm Bill. They ignored the fact that Senators and Congressmen expected USDA to spell out a more complete program so that farmers could make a well-informed choice. Even though the results of the poll are not binding on USDA, they really should have done a better and more responsible job.

The question reads, "Do you favor imposition of mandatory limits on the production of wheat that will result in wheat prices that are not lower than 125 per cent of the cost of production (excluding land and residual returns to management)?"

That question is notable not so much for what it says, but what it doesn't say. It' almost like asking someone, "Would you like a new Cadillac?" "Of course, who wouldn't!?" The question that should be asked is, "Would you like a new Cadillac for $25,000?" Now we know what we're talking about because we know what we're going to have to pay for it. The wheat poll has a bunch of hidden costs that aren't mentioned in the question itself.

First and foremost is the reality that the vast majority of farmers would suffer declines in net income under the mandatory programs that have been proposed. Depending on the precise calculations, the analyses I've seen indicate that income would drop anywhere from 16 per cent to 39 per cent compared to this year's programs.

This drop in income is due to two main factors. First, the wheat price that equals 125 per cent of the cost of production (as it is defined for this purpose) is estimated for 1986 at only $4.29. That is 9 cents lower than the current target price of $4.38! Hardly sounds like a high profit scheme to me.

Second, the required acreage reduction is expected to be quite large. In order to reduce carryover stocks and save money for the federal budget (this is one of the main precepts of mandatory programs), the unpaid setaside would be somewhere in the range of 45 per cent oto 60 per cent. That's a good deal higher than the 25 per cent to 30 per cent that has prevailed in recent years.

I hope that every farmer will do some quick calculations to see how the program would work out financially on his farm prior to mailing his ballot. It might work out OK in certain limited circumstances, but most farmers would be hurt by it.

There are some other things that concern me about mandatory production control programs in general. Farmers would give up a great deal of individual freedom that they have under the current coluntary programs. There would be harsh penalties for farmers who didn't comply. The government would be even more involved in farm management decisions than it is at the present. It would be a step toward centralized planning for U.S. agriculture. (Bureaucrats in the Kremlin haven't been very effective in building a strong Soviet agriculture, and I doubt that our bureaucrats would be any better at it.)

Going to larger acreage reduction reduceion raises the average cost of production for our farmers because there are fewer bushels over which to spread the fixed costs. This makes our farmers less competitive compared to farmers in other countries. Mandatory controls send the wrong signal to countries who depend on us for supplies, since they wonder if we will have anything to sell them. These programs signal competing nations that we aren't serious about participating in the world market, so they will be encouraged to expand production as we cut back.

I meet often enough with representatives of other exporting countries such as Canda, the European Community, and Australia. They are delighted whenever the U.S implements a large acreage reduction program. They figured out some time ago that acreage reduction programs impose large costs on our farmers and taxpayers while neatly transferring most of the benefits to farmers in other countries through an artificially high world price.

For all these reasons, I encourage farmers to evaluate the wheat poll carefully — considering the potential effects both on their own farming operation and on the position of U.S wheat in the world economy — and to mail the ballot back in. Don't stand aside on this one. Let your voice be heard.

For the road ahead.

THE STATUTE OF LIBERTY in New York harbor is the focal point of a lot of activity this July 4 weekend, and there is a model of the statue which has been around Thief River Falls for a long time. The top photo shows the statue as the focal point in the lobby of Northern State bank in 1948. It was copyrighted in 1916 and was listed among the inventory items when the bank was purchased from the original owners. The lower picture shows the statue in its present location in the bank lobby. The plaster of Paris model is 48 inches high, coated with copper colored and then gold paint, and the right arm torch base has a fitting for an electric light. Sculptor Bartholdi who designed the original statue copyrighted his design and sold licenses for model making with proceeds to go to the American committee. Aaron Janisch Is Selected To Play For Minnesota All-Star Hockey Squad

Aaron Janisch

Aaron Janisch, son of Darrel and Jean Janisch of Thief River Falls, has been chosen to play on the Expo '86 Minnesota All-Star hockey team at the World's Fair in Vancouver, BC.

He was one of 18 boys chosen to play on a team of 14-year-olds as he attended the Minnesota Hockey Schools summer hockey camp near Brainerd in June. There will also be a team of 15-year-olds and a team of 16-year-olds going to Vancouver.

Janisch will leave July 6 for a two-week training camp in the Twin Cities. The team will leave July 18 for Vancouver, playing between four and seven games during a week's stay against teams from each of the Canadian provinces, and from the Chicago-Detroit area.

George Konik and Steve Younghans will coach the Minnesota 14-year-olds. Chris Hites of Roseau and Troy Cusey of Grand Rapids are also on the squad.

Janisch was a member of the Thief River Falls VFW Bantam A hockey team last winter, playing a wing on the Dale Wennberg-coached team.

A fund-raising effort is currently underway to help Janisch cover expenses on the trip. Persons interested in contributing can call him at 681-2106.

Spuds Name Coach

A second set of brothers will be coaching Section 8 high school hockey next winter when Tim and Terry Cullen join Wendell and Bryan Grand.

Terry Cullen was named this week as the new head hockey coach at Moorhead, succeeding Terry Shercliffe. His twin brother, Tim, is the head hockey coach at Fergus Falls. Wendell and Bryan Grand are veteran head coaches at Thief River Falls and Bemidji, respectively.

Changes in the Moorhead High School hockey coaching staff were announced Tuesday when athletic director Phil Seljevold said Sercliffe, the Spuds' head coach the past nine years, had requested a change in his status to assistant coach to make room for Terry Cullen to become head coach.

Shercliffe came to Moorhead after serving as head hockey coach at the University of Minnesota-Duluth. His 1985-86 Moorhead team reached the finals of the Section 8 tournament last winter in Thief River Falls; the Spuds' best finish ever.

"Shercliffe has done a commendable job as head coach and has worked without the benefit of a full-time assistant staff during his entire tenure in Moorhead," pointed out Seljevold. "The Moorhead athletic department is pleased that Shercliffe will continue on the hockey staff."

Terry Cullen comes to Moorhead from Virginia High School, where he has been head hockey coach for eight years. He is a graduate of International Falls High School, attended Rainy River Community College and graduated from Concordia College in Moorhead in 1973. He was an all-conference hockey player for the Cobbers, and the leading scorer in the MIAC.

After playing hockey for three years with the Green Bay Bobcats in the U.S. Hockey League, Cullen returned to Minnesota to start his high school hockey coaching career at Gilbert as head coach. He stayed one year, moved to Roseau to serve as an assistant coach for one year and then took over the Virginia job.

Shercliffe and Cullen both teach at Probstfield Elementary School in Moorhead, Shercliffe as a physical education instructor and Cullen as a classroom teacher.

Terry Cullen is the second new Section 8 hockey coach named in the past two weeks. Ross Dahl was appointed hockey coach at Detroit Lakes June 16, succeeding Duane Earnest. Dahl had a 34-8 record the past two years at Princeton and went 16-5-4 the previous two seasons as coach of the Mankato State University junior varsity hockey team.

Vermilion Drops Baseball

Vermilion Community College in Ely has announced plans to drop its baseball and women's track programs for the 1986-87 school year.

Originally the men's track program was to be dropped, but officials decided the baseball program would go instead, partly because of the planned retirement of baseball and basketball coach Bob Altuvilla. He will step down after the fall quarter of the 1986-87 school year, making it difficult to hire a person to fill the part-time position of head baseball coach, said Vermilion Provost Jon Harris.

"As we looked at it," said Harris, "If we were to hire a person from the community to coach baseball, they would have to recruit not only locally, but statewide. And since teams like Itasca are taking spring trips to Texas with money that doesn't come out of the athletic budget, we'd have to do the same to be competitive. With those cost factors in mind, the baseball program was dropped."

Harris also mentioned the success of the men's track program in comparison to baseball at Vermilion. Adding to the track program was the announcement that Severt A. Legred was hired as the director of enrollment and management at the school and will be head coach of a new cross country program at Vermilion. Legred was the national cross country coach of the year in 1981 at Golden Valley Lutheran.

Rudy Semaja, men's athletic director at Vermilion, told the Ely Echo he was against the dropping of the baseball program, but that it was an "administrative decision."

FIRST BASEMAN Jarod Erickson of the Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods Babe Ruth baseball team streatched for a low throw and kept his foot on the bag to retire a Crookston Blue runner in the fourth inning of Tuesday's baseball game at the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamond. TG Sporting Goods won the game 8-6.

Babe Ruth Teams Split Games With Crookston

TG Sporting Goods edged Crookston Blue, but Pepsi-Cola Bottling absorbed a 20-1 drubbing at the hands of Crookston Gold Tuesday as the Thief River Falls 14-15-year-olds split a Babe Ruth baseball doubleheader at the fairgrounds diamond here.

Pepsi-Cola Bottling managed just one hit in the doubleheader-opening loss — an RBI single by Corey Poole to score Jason Sauve. Crookston Gold collected 14 hits off losing pitcher Chad Kleinvachter and relief pitchers Jon Anderson and Jason Furuseth.

Brian Anderson was 4-for-4 to lead TG Sporting Goods to its second-game win. Jason Kempert pitched a three-hitter for the victory. The winners had nine hits to overcome four errors. Crookston Blue had three errors.

Kempert struck out eight, including the final two outs in the top of the seventh when Crookston Blue put runners at second and third with just one out.

Both teams host East Grand Forks opponents Thursday. Pepsi-Cola Bottling, 5-10, draws the East Grand Forks Blue Jays at 12-noon, and TG Sporting Goods goes against the East Grand Forks A's at 2 p.m. TG Sporting Goods, 11-4, will also be at Red Lake Falls Monday at 12-noon.

RLF 5-1 Winner Over Pepsi Squad In Babe Ruth Play

Both sides had six hits and all three of the game's errors were charged to Red Lake Falls, but Pepsi-Cola Bottling scored only on an RBI single by Jeff Feragen. Richard Jadeke was 1-for-1 for Thief River Falls.

Chris Lawrence was the losing pitcher. Chad Kleinvachter pitched in relief.

Schmidt-Coke handled Melvles 13-4 Tuesday. A Coors vs. United Satellite Systems Tuesday match-up was postponed.

United Satellite Systems took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning Monday against the Schmidt Old-Timers on a Steve Wiskow home run.

But the Schmidt Old-Timers used a couple of walks, an error and Marshall Vagle's single for a pair of runs in the bottom of the inning.

Six hits and two errors supplied United Satellite Systems with a 7-2 lead in the top of the second, but the Schmidt Old-Timers came back and gained a 10-10 tie in the sixth.

In the bottom of the seventh, Dean Lawrenz was hit by a pitch with two out. Larry Coltom and Brian Espeseth walked to load the bases and the first pitch to Kjell Melvie skipped past the catcher, scoring Lawrenz, the winning pitcher.

TRF, Fergus Falls Split Doubleheader

Thief River Falls VFW baseball team split a doubleheader at Fergus Falls Tuesday, losing the first game 5-4, but winning the second game 13-8.

The Thief River Falls 16-year-olds, 5-7 for the year, will wait until Tuesday, July 8, to host Grand Forks in a 3 p.m. doubleheader.

Base running mistakes cost Thief River Falls dearly in Game 1 Tuesday. Fergus Falls matched a first inning Thief River Falls run, went ahead 3-1 in the third, gave up single runs in the fourth and fifth, but won it with two runs in the bottom of the sixth. Thief River Falls narrowed the gap to 5-4 in the seventh, but had the potential tying run thrown out at the plate to end the game.

Thief River Falls had a 9-7 base hit edge, but also had three of the game's five errors. Chris Nelson and Jason Lane both had a pair of hits for the visitors and drove in one run each.

Dean DuChamp was the starting and losing pitcher. John Azure came on in relief in the fourth inning and finished the game on the mound.

Joel Swanson, the third of three pitchers used by Thief River Falls in Game 2, gave up just one run and four hits over the final four innings to collect his first mound win.

Bill Dicken started the second game, but was tagged for six runs and five hits over the first two innings. Lane gave up two runs and hit two batters in two-thirds of an inning on the mound, bringing on Swanson.

Thief River Falls jumped out of an early 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning, but gave up two runs in the bottom of the inning, three in the second and two more in the third to trail 7-3. Thief River Falls made it 7-5 in the fourth, then combined three hits with three Fergus Falls errors in a six-run fifth inning for an 11-7 lead. Fergus Falls got one run back in the bottom of the fifth, but Thief River Falls finished the scoring with two runs in the seventh.

Dicken, DuChamp, Corey Olson and Mike Bendickson all had two hits as Thief River Falls out-hit Fergus Falls 12-10. The losers also had seven of the game's ten errors.

Crickets, long the insomniac's enemy, have been considered fortune-tellers, doctors, and athletes the world over. International Wildlife magazine reports that Europeans once thought the cricket bite cured warts; the Chinese placed bets on cricket fights; and, that Kayapu Indians in Brazil still believe the song of the cricket portends death.

It appears as if the gap between man and ape is closing, says National Wildlife magazine. A five-year experiment at Central Washington University has shown that chimps can learn American Sign Language from each other. One young chimp, Loulis, has learned over 50 signs from Washoe, the more famous female who acquired the language 20 years ago.

Debate Continues On Steel Shot Use

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service proposes to phase out use of lead shot for waterfowl hunting in the United States by 1991, William P. Horn, Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks, announced.

The announcement came after last-ditch negotiations on June 20 between Horn and Jay Hair, Executive Vice President of the National Wildlife Federation, failed to achieve an out-of-court settlement of a Federation lawsuit aimed at forcing a ban on lead shot for waterfowling throughout the 48 contiguous states beginning in 1987.

"The Department of the Interior is committed to solving this more than 10-year-old controversy over lead poisoning in waterfowl," Horn said. "We want to achieve a consensus among conservation groups and state wildlife agencies about how best to proceed. We have been working toward that consensus since the summer of 1984, when the Interior Department called a meeting of concerned conservation groups and state representatives at Wye Mills, Maryland. We propose to adopt a position, taken in March 1986 by the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies (an association of state wildlife agencies) to phase out use of lead shot for waterfowl hunting by 1991. Virtually all of the concerned parties — except the National Wildlife Federation — appear to have agreed that this is the most practical, fair, and effective solution to this difficult problem.

"This could have been an historic occasion in resource conservation history," Horn continued. "Had the Federation agreed to this approach, a decade-long process to end lead poisoning in waterfowl and bald eagles could have been concluded this week. Instead, for legal and procedural reasons that we do not fully comprehend, the Federation has decided to throw away this opportunity. A sensible, workable, and responsible resource solution has been rejected in favor of a court show-down. The Federation has, in effect, indicated its lack of faith in the commitment and integrity not only of this Department, but of other conservation interests who have worked toward this solution.

"I deeply regret the Federation's refusal to accept an out-of-court settlement on this issue because I do not believe this decision to litigate rather than cooperate serves the long-term needs of this Nation's waterfowl resources."

The Interior Department's proposal to phase out the use of lead shot for waterfowling is contained in a proposed rule published in the June 27 Federal Register. The public will have 30 days to comment on the proposal. In addition, the Service's plan is contained in a "Final Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement on the Use of Lead Shot for Hunting Migratory Birds in the United States." A draft of this document was issued for public comment in December 1985 and public hearings were held at a number of locations around the country.

Environmental impact statement examines nine alternatives for eliminating lead poisoning caused by ingestion of lead shot as a significant cause of death in migratory birds. A phase-out approach was selected as the "preferred alternative" for meeting this goal. This approach was suggested in March 1986 by the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies. The phase-out plan will prohibit use of lead shot first in the areas of the country that have the largest waterfowl harvests. These are the areas where waterfowl and eagles are the most frequently exposed to lead poisoning. At the same time, it will allow reasonable time for ammunition manufacturers, retailers, and hunters to make the conversion to nontoxic shot.

Under this alternative, use of lead shot for waterfowl hunting will be completely eliminated nationwide — including Alaska — by 1991, beginning in the 1987-88 hunting season with a ban on lead shot in counties where waterfowl harvests are highest. The ban will be extended each succeeding year to include counties where harvests are lower.

Conversion to nontoxic shot could be deferred if states carry out monitoring studies that show lead poisoning is not a problem in areas that would otherwise be affected by the conversion schedule. In no case, however, could the requirement for nontoxic shot be deferred beyond 1991.

Under this alternative, boroughs (counties) in Alaska would not be required to employ the gradual implementation schedule, but the state would convert totally to nontoxic shot by 1991 along with the rest of the country.

Fish and Wildlife Service plans to begin implementing the "20 or more" zone schedule with its regulations process for the 1987-88 hunting season.

Nontoxic shot regulations for 1986-87 were appended to the final environmental impact statement and will be made final through publication in the Federal Register. The phase-out schedule adopted unter the environmental impact statement does not apply to the 1986-87 regulations. These regulations are designated on a "zone" basis similar to nontoxic shot regulations for previous years. Under the 1986-87 regulations, nontoxic shot zones have been designated in portions of 39 states. Publication of regulations for additional areas will occur later, after action by state wildlife agencies.

Fish and Wildlife Service proposed nontoxic shot zones in portions of 44 states in January 1986. Some of the Zones were proposed primarily to reduce lead poisoning in waterfowl, while others were proposed to reduce exposure of bald eagles to lead poisoning. Because bald eagles get lead poisoning primarily from eating hunter-killed or -crippled waterfowl, the proposed "bald eagle protection zones" were based on areas where many waterfowl are harvested and there are large numbers of wintering bald eagles. The proposed zones were identified on a county-wide basis because information on waterfowl harvests and eagle populations is recorded by county. However, the Fish and Wildlife Service solicited review of the proposed county-wide zones by interested parties to make modifications to the boundaries, if appropriate.

As a result of the review by the states and public comments, the following changes have been made to the January 6 proposal:

— Boundaries of 51 counties in Arizona, Arkansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming were refined;

— Ten counties in California, Missouri, Oregon, Texas and Washington were eliminated from consideration as nontoxic shot zones for eagle protection for 1986-87; — Portions of 31 counties in Arizona, Arkansas, Indiana, Minnesota, Missouri, New York, Oklahoma, and Texas were added to the nontoxic shot zones proposed for these states.

Nontoxic shot zones in parts of 73 counties in California, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Maine, Montana, Oregon and Washington have not yet been approved by state wildlife agencies. By law, the Fish and Wildlife Service may not enforce or implement nontoxic shot regulations in any state unless the state wildlife agency approves. The Service may, however, elect not to allow waterfowl hunting in areas proposed as nontoxic shot zones if states do not approve the nontoxic shot requirements.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service began requiring nontoxic shot for waterfowl hunting in designated zones of the Atlantic Flyway in 1976. The program was expanded during subsequent years to include portions of all four waterfowl flyways where lead poisoning was identified as a problem. In 1985 the Fish and Wildlife Service also began requiring nontoxic shot in certain areas to prevent lead poisoning in bald eagles, which are listed as an "endangered" or "threatened" species throughout the lower 48 states. As of April 1985, 114 bald eagles have been documented as dying from lead poisoning, and the majority of these cases have been recorded since 1980.

Wildlife Needs Roadside Area For Safe Nesting Cover

Minnesota Conservation Federation has asked farmers, land owners, and local governments to protect wildlife by complying with state laws regarding mowing and agricultural use of roadsides.

Roadsides are important nesting sites for ground-nesting birds such as pheasants and waterfowl, as well as other species of wildlife. State law protects roadside wildlife, but often those laws are forgotten or overlooked, note officials.

Since 1985, roadsides cannot be mowed until August 1. Up until August 1, only one swath, eight feet wide, may be mowed on the road shoulder to maintain visibility. After the first of August, the entire roadside may be mowed, but 12 inches of stubble must remain standing. Noxious weed problems should be addressed by spot-mowing.

Farming of roadsides, planting row crops for example, has been a misdemeanor for many years, however, it is still a common practice in many parts of the state.

Roadsides are a vital nesting area in many portions of the state that have lost much of their original habitat. Aside from the wildlife selecting roadside homes, many birds that unluckily pick a nesting site in an alfalfa field, or other agricultural field that is harvested before the eggs hatch, will often re-nest in the relatively "safe" roadside. The MCF believes roadsides should be protected for the benefit of these species.

Minnesota Conservation Federation is a statewide conservation organization made up of affiliated clubs and individuals from all over Minnesota. Celebrating 50 years of involvement in conservation this year, the MCF has been the official state affiliate of the National Wildlife Federation since that organization was founded, also 50 years ago, in 1936.

Bike Trek Is Fund Raising Event For Lung Association

Two-hundred bicyclists from all over the state will pedal from St. Paul to Winona August 16 and 17 as part of the third annual Winona Bike "Trek 'N Trak" for the American Lung Association of Minnesota.

Director Patrick McSllister claims the Trek is for all bicyclists, regarless of experience. "Riders will stay Saturday night on the shores of Lake Pepin near Frontenac," McAllister says. "Meals, mechanical support, experienced leaders and lots of fun surprises are included." A big hit with participants is returning to St. Paul via the Amtrak train on Sunday.

While the Trek is a fundraiser for the American Lung Association of Minnesota, McAllister explains there also are other reasons for doing it. "Bicycling is a fun, efficient, healthy, and non-polluting form of travel," he explains. "It's an opportunity to learn new bicycling skills and make new friends."

Many corporate sponsors are helping to keep the Trek fundraising costs low, including Mendota Heights Schwinn, KDWB Radio, Gold 'N Plump Chickens, Cub Foods, Wilderness group and the Minnesota Council of American Youth Hostels.

McAllister "loves to talk trekking," and encourages anyone interested to call him toll-free at 1-800-642-LUNG.

The BACKYARD NATURALIST™

By Craig Tufts, National Wildlife Federation

New Plants for a Wildlife Landscape.

"Gardening for Wildlife" are words over 12 million of us toil by. And during this past winter and spring, I, for one, have toiled happily, choosing and now planting roots and seeds that will soon serve my local wildlife surprisingly well.

Some of my choices may suit like-minded gardeners who share soils and climate similar to my clayey loam and moderate to cold winters.

I'm gradually using more shrubs and less lawn. Small shrubs and perennials best fill the bill on my 9000 sq. ft. lot. Butterflies will soon flock to two dwarf buddleias: 'Petite Indigo' and 'Petite Plum,' both introduced by Monrovia Nursery in Azusa, California.

Robins, catbirds and thrashers will visit the American elderberries, Sambucus canadensis, which I propagated last year from hardwood cuttings. I've already heavily pruned the year-old growth and placed them in the landscape. In July, they'll be loaded with small purple-black berries.

A grouping of the native American rose, Rosa acicularis, will further improve the good nesting cover for birds in the backyard. This hardy plant, currently being tissue-cultured by Knight Hollow Nursery in Michigan, has a dense, upright form, lots of small prickles and thorns, and large, single, purple flowers. The large rose-hips may also prove tasty for some backyard critters.

My perennials serve a couple of purposes: they fill in gaps among my young shrubs, add lots of color, and they attract hummingbirds, butterflies and other insects. This year I've added hard-leaved and seaside goldenrods, Solidago rigida and S. sempervirens, terrific late summer butterfly and insect attractors. For the hummingbirds, I've planted two tubular red-flowered perennials: Texas sage, Salvia coccinea and a Mexican wildflower, Galvezia juncea. But since neither are winter-hardy in my area, I'm growing them as annuals.

The seed catalogs enticed me to try some new butterfly and hummingbird annuals. "Sunny Red" cosmos, available from a number of suppliers; and 'Starfire' marigold from Thompson and Morgan offer the right colors and structure to attract swarms of small butterflies and skippers. I've also added a new 2.5 foot Mexican sunflower 'Goldfinger', orange 'Blitz' impatiens and "Bonfire" scarlet salvia — all available from the Park Seed Company.

When you next visit your local garden center, look for special information cards and plant tags that offer information on attracting wildlife to your property. The National Wildlife Federation and The Planting Council, as part of the "Garden for Wildlife" campaign, have joined forces to bring new and better information on this very popular pastime to backyard wildlifers throughout the United States.

For a Backyard Wildlife Habitat information packet, contact the National Wildlife Federation, Dept. BN, 1412 16th Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036-2266.

Watch "The Backyard Naturalist" on The Victory Garden this season. See TV listings on your local PBS affiliate for date and time.

Hayes Lake State Park' summer naturalist series introduces Myrtle the Turtle Sunday, July 13, beginning at 2 p.m. at Hayes Dam.

Myrtle is a visiting painted turtle from the park's cedar bog. She will be on hand to tell us about life in the pond as well as introduce us to some of her neighbors like Mr. Snapper, Woody the Frog and others. At the end of the program, visitors can visit Myrtle in the bog as she rejoins her friends there.

During the program kids can earn points toward a junior park naturalist badge. Junior park naturalist program is a feature of many Minnesota state parks. By earning 500 points through attending park programs, learning to identify some plants and animals and doing a beaver project, kids qualify for a junior park naturalist badge and certificate.

All park programs are free of charge, although a vehicle permit is required on all vehicles entering a state park. For more information, call Hayes Lake State Park at 425-7504.

Chippewa Forest Lists Schedule Of Summer Programs

Chippewa National Forest will present a 1986 Norway Beach Interpretive Program. This summer's presentations will include favorites of the past, in addition to several new programs.

Come to Norway Beach and learn about the many different resources your Forest has to offer, from the specialists and scientists who manage them, invite officials, who said the programs would include 7:30 p.m. events on the following dates:

Wednesday, July 2 — A Road in the Forest. What does a Forest Enginner do? Join civil engineer Rob Fallon, as he explains how and why forest roads are built, and what benefits they bring to National Forest users.

Saturday, July 5 — Minnesota Lumberjacks. Do you wish you'd been a lumberjack of yeateryear? Forester Rick Alimi will take us back to the turn of the century for a look at the life of the first Minnesota Loggers.

Wednesday, July 9 — The World of Orchids. Wildlife biologist and amateur botanist Tom Kogut will discuss the orchids of Minnesota. We'll learn to identify these beauties, and also find out why they are so rare.

Saturday, July 12 — Chainsaws or Cameras. How should a National Forest be managed? We'll look at the many resources a National Forest provides and discuss the challenge of providing "something for everyone."

Wednesday, July 16 — Trees for Wildlife. Dead trees (snags) can be unsightly and dangerous in your own backyard. What purpose do they serve in the forest? Wildlife biologist Jane Cliff will show us the game and nongame species that use snags for courtship, food and shelter.

Saturday, July 19 — Glaciers of the Past. The effects glaciers left on the Minnesota landscape are all around us. Join soil scientist Dave Shadis as he discusses the glacial geology of Minnesota and the Great Lakes.

Wednesday, July 23 — Birds of the Chippewa. Many species of birds live within the Chippewa National Forest boundaries. Wildlife biologist Nancy Berlin will tell us about these birds, their habitats, and how to identify them.

Saturday, July 26 — Landscaping the Forest. Remember how much fun you had landscaping your yard? Try landscaping a National Forest! Landscape architect Dennis Parker will show us how blending landscape management techniques with other projects results in a more attractive forest.

Wednesday, July 30 — Fire! Fire! What do firefighters do? Forester Dave Johnson will describe the dangerous and exciting job of today's firefighter in the USDA Forest Service. We'll also learn the role fire has played in determining the vegetation of the north country.

All programs are free and take place at the Norway Beach Lodge. To get there, take U.S. Highway 2 four miles east of Cass Lake, then turn north on Norway Beach Recreation Area Road.

Everyone is welcome to attend.

Women accounted for nearly 44 per cent of all persons in the civilian labor force in 1984 compared with 40 per cent in 1975, according to a fact sheet published by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Washington, D.C. Trip

Eldon and Evonne Moe, as guides, left on a bus tour Tuesday, June 3, sponsored by the Overland Travel club, with the Carpenter Charter, Randy Carpenter driver, to Washington, D.C., traveling through eleven states and seeing country and mountainous areas where the group had never been before. Thursday, June 5 they visited the Gettysburg Battlefield southwest of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, scene of a decisive battle of the Civil War fought in 1863, which was very interesting. The group enjoyed going through a house that was 200 years old and also seeing the rail coach in which Abraham Lincoln rode on his way to Gettysburg to deliver his famous address. The following day they drove into Washington, D.C and were taken out to see the national cemetery in Arlington. Eldon and Evvone enjoyed a visit with her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Ginn and children Bryan and Kimberly who live in Washington, D.C. June 7 was spent sightseeing. Places of interest visited were the Smithsonian Institute, the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol building, the White House, the Washington Monument and were especially impressed with the Vietnam Memorial and Statue, where many, many names of soldiers killed during the war with Vietnam were listed. The next day they visited Mount Vernon, Virginia, overlooking the Potomac River where George Washington lived and where he lies buried. They left Washington, D.C. area and drove to New Stanton, Pennsylvania where they visited a museum along Lake Erie. June 10 the group visited the Henry Ford Museum and the Greenville Village in Detroit, Michigan, which is known as the automobile capital of the World. Here, there was so much to see they would all like to go there again some time. That evening they were at Saginaw, Michigan where they all enjoyed a little party in honor of Eldon's and Evonne's 24th wedding anniversary. The next morning they drove up to Mackinaw City, which is on the south end of the toll bridge Mackinac between Lake Erie and Lake Michigan. They returned to Thief River Falls June 12 and reported a very enjoyable and educational trip with hopes of taking another similar trip in the near future. Those who were on the trip, besides Eldon and Evonne Moe, and the driver and his wife Randy and Jeannie Carpenter were Elda Knutson, Buster and [illegible] Dennis, Irvin and Margie Jarshaw, Russell and Fern Nelson, Alvin and Mable Anderson, Robert and Gertrude Nyvall, and John and Helen Willers all from the Thief River Falls area, Frank and Shirley Cwikla of Wannaska, Anna M Palm of Roseau, Marshall and Delores Ness of Newfolden, Harriet Nelson of Greygla, Andrew Lien and Murie Lien of Greenbush, Carl and Carol Hammerlund of Alvarado, Ila Anderson of Benedict, and Larry and Vi Brown of Park Rapids.

Rev. and Mrs. Kermit Solem left Tuesday morning for their home in Duluth and the next day for an extended tour to New Jersey, New York and the New England states as a 15th wedding anniversary trip.

Birthday Party

Harold and Alpha Halvorson enjoyed attending a birthday party for their grandson, Nicholas Drees, at his home Wednesday evening, June 2[illegible] when he was five years old.

Melvin Saugen enjoyed a telephone visit recently with his brother in law and sister, Bob and Thea Casey of Haymarket, Virginia who have returned from Ireland where they spent some time visiting Casey's relatives.

Houseguests at the Melvin Saugen home from Thursday, June 19 to the following Monday morning were his brother-in-law and sister, Bill and Bernice Ketel from Royal Oak, Michigan. Saturday evening Melvin and his guests were invited to the Terry Edington home for supper. Sunday they all attended the Rindal church Centennial celebration and in the evening enjoyed having supper together with their brother in law Charles Sorenson, at a local restaurant. The Ketels had driven to Seattle, Washington earlier this summer and had flown to Anchorage, Alaska from there. In Anchorage they joined a bus tour that took them to Fairbanks and other areas of interest in Alaska. They rode by boat along the west coast to Vancouver, where they spent two days attending the World's Fair. From Seattle they came by car to Thief River Falls.

Sunday, June 22 Eldon Moe went with Randy Carpenter to assist with driving to the Estes Park in Colorado with a group of young people from the Zion Lutheran church in Viking and the Oak Ridge Lutheran church at rural Thief River Falls. The young people will join 2,000 other Christian young people from throughout the United States at the National Christian Congress from Thursday to Sunday. Pastor Dick Ewing, Steve and Julie Steinert and Mrs. Dana Klemetson accompanied the youth as adult sponsors. Eldon Moe and Randy Carpenter were guests of Eldon's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ross at Colorado Springs from Thursday to Sunday and enjoyed seeing Pikes Peak and the Air Force academy. They all returned home Tuesday, July 1, having enjoyed during their trip Mount Rushmore in South Dakota, the Passion Play at Spearfish, South Dakota and the Devil's Tower in North Dakota, besides the National Congress at Estes Park.

Orchid's Fragrance Varies With Flower

by Deane Morrison
U of M News Service

Orchids go to great lengths to get insects to pollinate them.

A northern Minnesota orchid courts mosquitoes. The lady-slipper traps insects in its pouch overnight. Other species attract male insects by mimicking the shape and smell of females.

The orchid's most potent weapon, though, is probably fragrance. Each orchid's scent attracts a specific insect — perhaps a bee, wasp, beetle or butterfly. Scents are so individual that it may be possible to identify orchid species according to their fragrances, said Ralph Holman, a lipid biochemist at the University of Minnesota's Hormel Institute in Austin whose hobby is orchids.

His analysis of 600 orchid fragrances revealed an amazing variety of scents. Holman is examining the chemical makeup of the fragrances to learn if chemical similarities predict genetic relationships among orchid species. He spoke about his work at a May meeting of the American oil chemists society in Honolulu.

"I thought it was especially fun to talk about orchids in Honolulu because Hawaii is famous for its orchids, yet has no native species. They're all imported," he said.

An orchid may not have a unique scent, but it can stand out from others by varying the intensity of the fragrance and the timing of its release. For example, many orchids can turn their scents on and off. Holman found some that release their odor in response to light and others that respond to dark. Some will do it at the same time of day without any obvious cue, as if they had their own clocks.

Soon Holman will have records of orchid odors over long periods of time. He is building an instrument to trace the patterns of odor release for different species. This new tool will help him uncover features of orchid fragrances that go unnoticed by the casual observer. A South American orchid's behavior is a case in point.

"A friend of mine in Ecuador wondered why he hadn't seen any pollinators on a certain type of orchid," Holman said. "So one night he sat up with it. At 3 a.m. the orchid began to smell. At 3:15 he heard buzzing sounds, and at 3:30 the fragrance stopped. He took out a flashlight and looked at the orchid and saw that it had been pollinated."

Orchid pollen comes in sticky yellow packets called pollen bodies. The insect picks up a pollen body — and in some cases the scent — of the orchid and carries the pollen to the next plant it visits.

Hearing that a species native to northern Minnesota bogs was pollinated by mosquitoes, Holman decided to get a photograph of it for his collection. As he lay low in a bog, aiming his camera at the little white flower, he glimpsed a rather strange sight.

"I saw a mosquito with a 'headlight' — a pollen body from that very species of orchid — stuck on its head," he said. "When the picture was developed I could see a mosquito on the orchid. That showed that mosquitoes can be pollinators. Since then we've found many mosquitoes with headlights. If we could make that orchid's scent, perhaps we could use it to attract mosquitoes away from us."

Orchid fragrances come from petals, Holman has shown. Botanists agree that insects often use the fragrances — which are the orchids' sex attractants — to make their own sex attractants, he said.

Some orchids' fragrances smell exactly the same as sex attractants made by certain female insects, university horticulturist Peter Ascher said. Among these are plants whose anatomy so closely resembles the females' that male insects pollinate while performing "pseudo-copulation" with the orchids. This may seen odd since the word orchid comes from the Greek word for testicle.

"It's hard to see what benefit insects get in some of these arrangements," Ascher added. "All pouch orchids, including lady-slippers, trap insects overnight and let them out through a back door the next morning. While they're inside they can't eat or anything. And sticking headlights to the eyes of mosquitoes doesn't seem a very good thing from a mosquito's point of view."

Although he studies orchids from around the world, Holman has had a lifelong passion for the showy lady-slipper, a pink-and-white orchid that is Minnesota's state flower. While transplanting such an orchid one day he noticed an unusual pungent odor from the roots. He captured the fragrance, identified it and soon found it in the roots of several other lady-slipper species.

"I think the substance may be some kind of defense that helps it withstand transplantation," Holman said. "For example, the stemless lady-slipper is the hardest to transplant and it also has the lowest amount of this substance. I don't know what it might defend against — it could be insects, mice, bacteria or anything."

The showy lady-slipper gave Holman something of a coup recently: One of his homegrown plants produced a rare triplet of flowers on a single stem.

Exercise Myths

More and more people are getting involved in regular exercise programs and finding their lives are improving as a result of their efforts. Yet some exercise myths continue to prevail.

The American Heart Association has the facts on five common misconceptions about exercise.

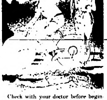
Myth 1. Exercising makes you tired. The Fact: As their bodies get more in shape, most people feel exercising gives them more energy than before. Regular, brisk exercise can also help you resist fatigue and stress.

Myth 2: Exercise takes too much time. The Fact: Regular exercise does not have to take more than about 25 to 40 minutes, three times a week. Once you have established a comfortable exercise routine, exercising becomes a natural part of your life.

Myth 3: All exercises give you the same benefits. The Fact: All physical activities can give you enjoyment. But only regular, brisk, and sustained exercises such as brisk walking, jogging, or swimming improve the efficiency of your heart and lungs. Other activities do not give you these benefits, although they may increase flexibility or muscle strength.

Myth 4: The older you are, the less exercise you need. The Fact: With age we tend to become less physically active, and therefore need to make sure we are getting enough exercise. In general, middle-age and older people benefit from regular exercise just as young people do. What is important is tailoring the exercise program to your own fitness level.

Myth 5: You have to be athletic to exercise. The Fact: Most brisk activities do not require any special athletic abilities. In fact, many people who found school sports difficult have discovered that these other activities are easy to do and enjoyable.



Check with your doctor before beginning an exercise program if you are over 45 years old, have any physical problems, or have a family history of premature coronary artery disease.

And then enjoy the benefits of an active lifestyle.

Weight Limits On State Highways To Increase July 1

Weight limits will be increased to 80,000 pounds gross vehicle weight for five axle semi trucks on state highways beginning July 1. According to Mn-DOT District Engineer Bob Wolfe in Bemidji, the increase in truck weights is taking place on almost all Minnesota trunk highways.

Some roads will still be restricted to lesser weights because of weak pavement or posted bridges and several bridges throughout the state will be posted with "Trucks Must Not Meet on Bridge" signs but the majority of state highways will be carrying the heavier trucks.

The only exception to the increased weights in northwestern Minnesota will be on Highway 1 between Highway 219 near Goodridge and the north junction of Highway 89. That road will be posted at seven tons until December 1 when it will go to 80,000 pounds for the winter months. There is also a posted bridge on that section.

"This change in Mn-DOT's truck weight policy is expected to result in increased wear and tear on area roads and higher maintenance and repair costs but the department views this as an economic investment to reduce the transportation costs for farm products, timber and manufactured goods," Wolfe said.

Truckers should consult the gross vehicle weight table published by Mn-DOT to determine the appropriate weights for their vehicles. These tables and other information are available from the Mn-DOT permit offices in Bemidji (218) 755-2942 or Crookston (218) 281-3503.

Just a Piece of Paper?

The Declaration of Independence is just a piece of paper. On it were written words—beautiful words, hot words, words with bite. At first only two people signed it; later 53 members of that august gathering affixed their signatures. Even later four more signed.

But, it's just a piece of paper. Actually, the paper on which it was written became so fragile that in 1894, it was permanently sealed in a steel case to keep it from light and air.

Yet, that piece of paper became the script for a people bent on liberty and freedom. It contained words that could spell death or mean life to a new nation struggling for birth. That piece of paper launched a revolution which produced a national spirit that gave reality to hopes and dreams for freedom.

And that piece of paper has been splattered by blood of many who believed in it's purpose, and their blood became the seeds that built America.

Freedom is not a piece of paper! It is an idea, a concept, a lifestyle, an experience; and, our forebearers believed it a right.

The original Declaration of Independence has faded, but it's ideas, concepts, and words are burned forever in the souls of this nation and etched on the hearts and minds of persons for whom life is liberty and for whom freedom is more precious than life itself.

(Footnote: Revolution that produces freedom is never completed. Each day its reality must be maintained by those privileged to enjoy it.)

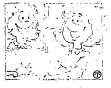
DID YOU KNOW ?



People have had dental problems ever since they've had teeth. Tooth trouble cuts across class lines and cultural differences and no one is immune. Fortunately, oral hygiene has come a long way toward making oral neglect an unnecessary thing of the past.

Here is a fact you can get your teeth into. Plaque buildup can be controlled by daily oral hygiene and professional dental care. Plaque is a soft, sticky, colorless film made up of many kinds of bacteria. Plaque forms and continually multiplies when bacteria in the mouth interacts with fermentable sugars present in many foods. Almost everyone has plaque. It is constantly forming on the surface of the teeth, and if it is not removed, plaque can cause problems, such as stain and odor.

For less plaque and a cleaner, fresher mouth, follow this program of daily oral hygiene and professional dental care.

- Brush your teeth at least twice a day and after between-meal snacks if possible.
- Floss thoroughly every day to help remove plaque and food particles between the teeth and along the gumline.
- Eat a balanced diet to help keep oral tissues healthy.
- Schedule at least two visits to the dentist every year for professional cleaning, examination and counseling.
- Rinse with an antibacterial mouthwash at least twice a day. One, Listerine Antiseptic, has breath-freshening and plaque-reducing properties. Studies have shown that when used in addition to regular oral hygiene, Listerine can help reduce existing plaque deposits and prevent plaque accumulation by up to 50% over brushing alone.

You often look only as good as you feel, and a healthy smile makes you feel good about yourself. So why not look and feel your best?

BUDGET Stretching IDEAS

Would you get a charge out of lower electric bills? If you have an electric stove, you could save money by using an energy-saving, small size toaster oven to prepare some of your meals. Toaster oven cooking can also help stretch your food budget—it's the quick and easy way to dish up leftovers.

What's cooking in many kitchens these days is a new Toaster Oven Broiler in a compact space-saving, energy saving design. The new oven from Dazey features adjustable thermostat control, full size bake/broil pan and an all stainless steel body that wipes clean and resists stains. Quartz elements in this versatile, made-in-America product give more even heat for better cooking results.

* * *

If your soup or stew has turned out too salty, don't throw it out and waste money from your food budget. Add cut raw potatoes and discard them once they've cooked and absorbed the salt.

Making A Spectacle Of Lady Liberty

Following was written by syndicated columnist Ellen Goodman of the Boston Globe and published recently in the Grand Forks Herald:

They are going to make a spectacle of her. You can count on that. By the time Nancy Reagan cuts the ribbon around Lady Liberty's toga and 5,000 homing pigeons are released into the Manhattan air, they will have popped all the corks in the champagne cellar of American extravaganzas.

No poor huddled masses will be imported to New York's harbor this weekend. Count instead a thousand banjo players, a parade of tall ships, a tug of war by NFL All-Stars, a massive citizenship ceremony for 15,000 immigrants. Four days worth of whiz-bang celebration for our national totem. Four days of glitzy pride for the twin pillars of our secular creed: liberty and independence.

I have no snobbish objection to this super-Fourth. It is true that I will take my own holiday in miniature on a Maine island where the homemade parade of pickup trucks and family floats makes one rambling circle by the community center and the schoolhouse before it disbands. But I am not immune to goose-bump patriotism, even when the goose bumps are mass-produced.

Still, looking over the schedule for this David Wolper production of Americana, it occurs to me that this is how the American people get together nowadays — well-marketed mega-events.

We collect under a banner cheering some denominator as common as fireworks and national anthems. We rally around a symbol with as many meanings as a Delphic oracle. We come together to celebrate something in short supply: togetherness, and the ability to act in union.

What do I remember of that other David Wolper mega-event, the West Coast torch, the 1984 Olympics ceremony? The echoes of "USA! USA!" Across the country there was a shared pride in No. 1-ness. We could unite in celebration of something no more controversial than running and jumping.

Last summer, when the Live Aid concert played for Africa, much of the pleasure was in its joint enterprise. The stars who recorded "We Are The World" announced with proud surprise that they were able to "check their egos at the door" and join the chorus for a cause.

And on May 25, when 5 million people joined Hands Across America, many experienced a high from just the sensation of linking up with others. If only for a few hours. If only in a brief togetherness binge.

Behind each of these orchestrated mega-events, there has been a real desire to share, to break out of the single cell of self. There is a longing for the feel-goodness of community. For the goose bumps.

It may be odd to read that some longing into this weekend special. We are celebrating, after all, a statute of liberty, a day of independence. In many ways, those are our most appropriate symbols. We are a nation of leavers. The immigrants who passed through New York harbor were people who left old communities for new opportunities. One American generation after another, moving west, has chosen that pattern. We still do.

For many of us, liberty isn't just the freedom from repressive authority, but from any authority. Independence isn't a declaration, but a centrifugal force. We often choose isolation, even loneliness, rather than the obligations that come with commitment.

The more splintered Americans are, the more separated in our private homes and ideologies, the more we yearn for shared community, shared enterprise, shared values. The mega-event fills that need, at least briefly. It gives us the quick hit of emotion, the momentary sense of belonging, without demanding much in return.

We can check our egos at the door of a mega-event and pick them up again on the way out. We can link hands for hunger and go home for dinner. We can take a holiday from our individual lives to be members of a nation, and then take back a souvenir for our private collection.

Maybe it is enough that we celebrate together. Maybe it's enough to have a 500-piece marching band, 300 Jazzercise women and 200 Elvis Presley look-alikes on our television set parade.

But most of us were taught that liberty is more than a weekend affair, and patriotism is more than a tourist attraction. Even today, in the era of the mega-event, in the shadow of the Statue of Liberty, America needs more of its citizens than a case of the goose bumps.

Enough Is Enough

Following editorial from Copely News Service was published recently in the Bemidji Pioneer:

Federal District Judge Harry Claiborne of Las Vegas is presently in jail, faces congressional impeachment hearings, and yet still draws a federal salary of $78,200 annually. Sound like a monstrous farce? Unfortunately, it isn't.

Nominated to the bench in 1978 by then-President Jimmy Carter, Judge Claiborne was tried twice before being convicted of income tax evasion in 1984. In the first trial, the jury deadlocked on accusations that Mr. Claiborne received $85,000 in bribes from the owner of a Reno brothel.

In the second trial, he was convicted of failure to report $106,000 in income and sentenced to two years in a stockade at Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala. When he took up residence there last May, he became the first federal judge in history to be convicted of a felony and actually go to jail.

Yet, Mr. Claiborne is unfazed. Even though he lost an appeal and hasn't been active on the bench since December 1983, he has refused to resign and thus forfeit his federal pay. Worse, he is insistent that the House of Representatives undertake impeachment proceedings so that he has an opportunity to clear his name.

Now, we have no illusions about the social and political texture of Nevada. But Mr. Claiborne's ridiculous obstinacy no only reflects poorly on his state, it serves to erode public confidence in the judiciary. Commenting on Mr. Claiborne's annual prison wages of $72,200, federal Judge Charles Wiggins observes, "The absurdity of such a spectacle is evident to all."

Leading Nevada politicians are anxious about the negative publicity the state will likely receive from the congressional impeachment proceedings. But even U.S. Sen. Paul Laxalt has been unsuccessful in persuading Mr. Claiborne to resign.

To be sure, every person deserves his or her day in court. But Mr. Claiborne had his and is now unnecessarily torturing the federal judiciary and Nevada. The lifetime appointment for federal judges shouldn't extend to convicted felons. Mr. Claiborne has done enough damage and should resign immediately.

Ill-Advised Choice?

Following editorial is from the Red Wing Republican Eagle:

George Latimer's selection of Arvonne Fraser as his running mate is a bold move that is likely to backfire.

If Latimer loses to Perpich in the September primary — and we believe he has hurt his chances — his selection of Fraser will be construed as the move that nailed the coffin lid shut. Gubernatorial candidates who ignore rural Minnesotans traditionally lose, the latest example being four years ago when Perpich upended DFL-endorsed Warren Spannaus in the primary.

From a rural perspective, Latimer's decision is surprising and disappointing. Surprising, because based on statements he made while campaigning in Red Wing, he knew the importance of courting the rural areas. Disappointing, because he had come across as too astute a politician to risk his chances by alienating rural residents.

We respect the Latimer theory that voters should look beyond labels when seeking gubernatorial nominees. It would be difficult to counter his arguments that Minnesotans are fed up with conventional politics. It would be difficult to argue that ideals and ideas should be more important than geographical considerations.

But by selecting a metropolitan running mate, Latimer is the one turning the election into a geographical battle. He acknowledges that Fraser will help the DFL turnout in the Twin Cities. The strategy is to pit metropolitan votes against rural votes, which on paper is a mismatch in Latimer's favor.

Unfortunately for Latimer and Fraser, they probably will discover that the majority of Minnesotans — no matter where they live or how they stand up politically — aren't fed up enough to elect a liberal metropolitan-oriented ticket. They probably will discover that the majority of Minnesotans will vote for a ticket that represents both sectors of the state.

Common Science

by Joe Jeffers, Ph.D.

Chester Carlson, a physicist and patent attorney, worked in the patent department of a New York City electronics company. He found that getting copies of patent drawings was very difficult. He wished for a quick way of obtaining copies of line drawings and set out to develop one. In 1935 in the kitchen of his apartment, he noticed that dust particles were clinging to an electrically charged metal plate made of selenium. He found that he could make patterns appear by controlling which parts of the plate were charged. Four years later, he made his first xerographic copy. (Xero is a prefix meaning "dry.")

Carlson had great difficulty getting a company interested in developing and marketing his invention. More than twenty companies turned him down. In 1944 a non-profit industrial research organization agreed to develop the process. In 1947 the Haloid Company, a little known company in Rochester, New York, bought the commercial rights to xerography. The company changed its name to Xerox and introduced the office copier in 1958.

How does this dry copy process work? The copy plate or drum is made of an aluminum backing over which a layer of selenium is placed. An electrical charge is passed through the aluminum to the selenium, making it positively charged. Picture this plate about the size of a sheet of paper with thousands of tiny positive charges. When selenium is exposed to light, it loses the positive charges. Before exposing it to light, cover it with the image to be copies. For this example, think of a large letter A on a sheet of paper. The A is dark so it shades that part of the selenium plate from the light. All of the unshaded part loses its positive charges when the selenium is exposed to light; the part under the A keeps its positive charges. Now a negatively charged powdered ink (toner) is dusted over the drum. Since positive charges attract negative charges, the ink is attracted to the positive charges of the selenium, now in the shape of a large A. A sheet of paper which is also positively charged is laid over the selenium plate and the negatively charged ink is transferred to the paper. The paper is heated briefly to melt the dry ink into the paper and the copy is complete. The whole process takes about one to two seconds.

The process is not without problems. The ink powder causes some copies to be smudged and the small particles can cause clogging. The constant heating and cooling of the copying machine makes it prone to breaking down.

Some copy machines have partially overcome this problem by using larger ink particles, but this approach often causes too much toner to be used and is more expensive. Others use liquid toners. The ink particles are immersed in a liquid which is kept a fixed distance from the copy paper by microscopic beads. The charged paper pulls the ink particles out of the liquid and onto the paper.

A new liquid toner process is under development which uses even smaller ink particles. It requires less heat to melt the smaller particles, so the continuous heating-cooling cycle is minimized. The result will be a faster copying process. It is hoped that it will produce seventy copies per minute. Companies are always looking for new methods to improve the process and, of course, to make themselves more competitive.

Basic research is usually defined as investigations of questions about the nature of materials or systems for the sake of knowledge itself, without immediate regard for whether or not it results in other public benefits. Applied research seeks to address problems that will lead directly to public benefits. The public usually has no quarrel with tax dollars spent on applied research, because it can see the results improving some area of human existence. The testing of anti-cancer drugs or a study of the use of lasers in telecommunications represent research that could obviously lead to benefits for the public.

Basic research topics, however, often come under fire as a waste of taxpayers' money. Studies on mechanisms underlying genetic recombination in bacteria or on what causes a firefly to light are generally not subjects the public sees as being valuable. Their value, of course, lies in providing the basic knowledge that allows us to reach the point where applied research is possible. After all, how could one test anti-cancer drugs if some knowledge about cancer and about drug effects were not already known? How could one test lasers as a method of transmitting radio, television and telephone signals if the basic research necessary to discover and understand lasers had not been done? Tomorrow's inventions will depend on today's basic discoveries.

Basic research does pay off, but usually through applications that were not seen at the time the research was funded. Consider the examples listed earlier. In the early 1950s Max Delbruck at the California Institute of Technology conducted a study on the mechanism underlying genetic recombination in bacteria. He chose to look at how the DNA from a virus that infected bacteria gets recombined with other viruses and with the bacterial cell. The model that came out of this work led to similar studies with animal viruses.

The expansion of knowledge that followed over the next 15-20 years led to the recombinant DNA technology that is today causing a revolution in the pharmaceutical industry. Human insulin, human growth hormone and many other products on the market today are made in bacteria. And the revolution has just begun. Without the work of men like Max Delbruck, it would not have been possible.

The "firefly man," William McElroy, wondered how a firefly could cause light. When he was at Johns Hopkins University he used to pay kids five cents for every hundred fireflies they brought him. He found the chemical compounds in the firefly that allowed it to emit light. Of the five chemicals, one was ATP. It is known as the major energy molecule of living creatures. It is found in all cells of all living things. Without ATP, there is no life.

McElroy further noticed that the amount of light produced in the presence of the four other chemicals depended on how much ATP was present. In effect, he had discovered a way to measure the amount of ATP present from any living source. Commercial kits are now available to measure ATP. By testing stored blood, technicians can see how much ATP is left and, therefore, if the blood is still good. Germinating seeds can be tested to see if they will grow as healthy plants and hundreds of other applications exist.

These examples were outgrowths of research sponsored by the National Science foundation. One simply cannot know the possible applications without first learning the basic information.

Rooting Rose Cuttings

Woody

Even without a green thumb, you can experience the excitement and personal satisfaction of rooting your own rose cuttings. Aside from being a rewarding hobby, rooting is also an economical way of increasing your supply of these blossoming beauties.

After proper timing, one of the first steps toward successful rooting is choosing an effective rooting hormone, such as ROOTONE® brand Rooting Hormone with fungicide. This easy-to-use, carefully formulated powder stimulates the natural tendency of roots to form on rose cuttings.

A new leaflet on rooting rose cuttings, as well as a wide variety of other plants, is now available. To receive your free copy of "A Gardener's Guide To Rooting New Plants," write to me, Woody Leafgreen, Ph.D., in care of the SEVIN® Lawn & Garden Clinic, P.O. Box 578, Dept. Volume 7 (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Monday, July 7, 1986 Number 54

CONGRATULATIONS are received by Ensign Stuart Dahl, formerly of Thief River Falls, following his commissioning as an officer in the U.S. navy. At left is Commander G. H. Seltzer III, who awarded the commission. Also pictured is Stuart's wife, the former Martha Hillyer of Thief River Falls. Ensign Dahl has been assigned as director of the underwater construction technician school in Port Hueneme, CA. Commissioning took place at the naval amphibious base at Little Creek, VA.

Stuart Dahl Earns Ensign Commission

by JO1 Dave Guise

Stuart L.J. Dahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville E. Dahl of Thief River Falls, was commissioned an ensign in the United States navy during ceremonies held June 2 at Underwater Construction Team One, Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, VA.

Dahl's wife Martha, children, parents and his aunt and uncle, Duane and Rosalie Hansen of Hastings, attended the commissioning ceremony.

Special achievement has been the rule, not the exception for the 32-year-old sailor during his nearly 12 years of naval service. Dahl was selected as Commander, Naval Construction Battalions, U.S. Atlantic Fleet sailor of the year for 1985, and has distinguished himself as a true professional and dedicated sailor in each of his navy jobs. It was that dedication and his "can do" spirit that led the Seabee to a commission.

Ens. Dahl, a 1972 graduate of Lincoln high school, has now joined an elite group of navy people who have advanced through the enlisted ranks and received a commission as a naval officer.

Dahl joined the navy in 1974 for an opportunity to use the training he received in architectural drafting at the area vocational-technical institute in Thief River Falls.

"I was working as a meat cutter when my cousin told me about the navy Seabees, and the possibility of putting my talents in drafting to use," Dahl said.

Stuart joined the navy as a constructionman and following recruit training was assigned to U.S. Naval Mobile Construction Battalion 133. While assigned to that command, Dahl was given the opportunity to attend the engineering aid "A" school, where he graduated with honors in August of 1975.

As a member of Underwater Construction Team One, Dahl's responsibilities as an engineering aid increased dramatically. He learned to adapt his skills to the often harsh environment under the sea. "I enjoyed what I am doing...drafting, surveying and diving," Dahl said. Dahl's love of his work has kept him with the Underwater Construction Team for the past 10 years. During those years of sea duty, a typical Seabee would have transferred to new commands at least three times.

"This is not like regular sea duty where you go out for eight months to a year and are separated from your family all that time," he said. "When we are on sea duty, we are seldom

Otto Stenberg Won't Seek Fifth County Board Term

Four-term commissioner Otto Stenberg of Pennington county's fourth commissioner district has become the third long-term Pennington county official to announce he will not be a candidate for reelection this year.

Sheriff Charles Richards, a 30-year veteran, and treasurer Ellsworth Jorgenson, who held that office for 28 years, both announced last week that they would not be candidates to succeed themselves this year. Stenberg has 16 years of service in the fourth commissioner district.

"I have enjoyed the time spent in county business these past four terms," Stenberg said in announcing his decision late last week. "It has been an interesting and educational experience but I feel it is time for someone else to fill the office."

One candidate, William Penning, a former Thief River Falls councilman, filed for fourth district commissioner on the opening day of the filing period which closes July 15.

JONS THE JUGGLER will appear at the Pennington county fair in Thief River Falls Thursday, July 17, from 1 to 5 p.m. at various places on the grounds. The former Thief River Falls resident, Keith Johnson, became interested in juggling when he worked at a Minneapolis club where the Flying Karamozov Brothers performed their juggling act. During the six years since then he has honed his skills and performed at clubs, libraries, parks and the Minnesota Renaissance festival. As Jons the Juggler he adopts a Norwegian accent, waxes and curls his mustache and dons an old tuxedo, short pants, white socks, ballet shoes and a derby hat. He attracts and holds attention as a bumbler who somehow manages to juggle various objects. His act also includes jokes, magic tricks, slack wire walking and other entertainment.

Three Directors At Medical Center Decline Nomination

Three of four directors whose terms expire on the board of Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls have chosen not to seek reelection at the annual meeting scheduled for Monday, September 8. Terms of Dale Dillon, Chris Twomey, Angeline Steinhauer and Dr. R.W. Heinrichs expire and only Dillon has agreed to be renominated.

The nominating committee from the board has placed Dillon in nomination along with James Winjum, Cathy Belmont and Dr. Robert Carter. Terms are for three years and will expire in September of 1989.

In addition to the persons nominated by the nominating committee, Dr. James Langland has been placed in nomination by the association membership through petition. By-laws of the association permit such nomination from among the membership. Nominations are to be accompanied by the nominee's written consent and must have the signatures of five association members. Such additional nominations may be submitted to the hospital's main office until 5 p.m. on August 1.

Annual meeting of the association September 8 will be conducted at the Best Western inn with time and agenda to be determined later. Membership of the association will receive an advance mailing regarding the time agenda during the week of August 25.

Report of the nominating committee was received at the June 23 meeting of the hospital's board of directors, according to Richard Sphyalski, president. The board expressed appreciation to Twomey, Mrs. Steinhauer and Dr. Heinrichs for their years of service to the medical center through the board of directors.

State Holstein Show Here Friday, Saturday

Nearly 300 registered Holsteins are expected for the Minnesota state Holstein show and another 55 for the "Golden Gopher" dairy sales when the annual event is hosted by the Red River Valley Holstein association Friday and Saturday at the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls.

The show and sale will be conducted in the sports arena but cattle will be housed in the curling building, sheep and poultry building, horse barns and other facilities on the fairgrounds. There will be 24 classes of judging, including groups, and separate shows held for junior members and older state association members, according to Jerry Muzzy of Thief River Falls, district show chairman.

Cattle will begin arriving Wednesday to get settled in and fitted for the show ring. The junior show, for members of the state association who are under 21 years of age, will begin at 10 a.m. Friday with Martin Carrico of Selkirk, Manitoba as the judge. Judging the open show which begins at 9 a.m. Saturday will be Harry Papageorge of Ogden, Utah.

A highlight of the event will be the dairy sale which begins at 7 p.m. Friday with Mike Snyder and John Hager of Waukon, Iowa, as the auctioneers. While the show is only for Minnesota breeders, the sale is open and animals have been entered from five states and two Canadian provinces. Buyers are expected from California to New York. Female Holsteins of all ages are eligible from calves to aged cows.

Examples of cattle which have been advertised as consigned to the sale include a five-year-old cow entered by Ray Opp of Glen Ullin, ND, with a record of 20,000 pounds of milk and 821 pounds of butterfat; a cow entered by Robert Slater with 25,000 pounds of milk and 1,093 pounds of fat in a 335-day test; and a cow entered by Carl Mueller of Elginvue Farms of Arlington which produced 20,000 pounds of milk and 788 pounds of fat in 365 days and is classified excellent for type.

Public attendance at the show and sale is both welcomed and encouraged. Assisting with award presentations will be Stephanie Dickey of Leonard, Princess Kay of the Milky Way, and Kathleen Mehrkens of Ada, Northwest Dairy Princess. A picnic for exhibitors will be held at the fairgrounds at about 5:30 p.m. Friday, between the junior show and the sale.

There are nine districts of the Minnesota Holstein association and this is only the second time the state show and sale are being held in this Red River Valley district. The last time was about 10 years ago at Crookston. Muzzy said that the hosting of the 1986 show was requested five years ago and it is usually held in the Arlington to Hutchinson to Faribault area. A number of exhibitors will have to come the length of the state to participate.

State chairman for the state show is Lowell Peterson of Hutchinson who will be showing animals from his El-Low Holsteins herd. Peterson said he plans to bring 10 or 12 animals to the show and has also consigned a two-year-old to the sale which is in its first lactation and out of a dam which has production of 23,000 pounds of milk and classified Very Good at 89.

Other top herds bringing a number of animals to the show will be Marti's Holsteins of Sleepy Eye, Loren Olson of Raylore Holsteins at Hutchinson and Demmer Holsteins of Ellendale. Among area herds represented will be those of Muzzy's Daleford Holsteins of Thief River Falls, Gary Johnston and Mylo Carlson of Angus, Richard Visser of Ada and Jerry Visser of Gary, Joe and Sheldon Erickson of Badger, Donald Cloose of Pine Creek and George Koch of Puposky.

Dr. George Fischer, head of the dairy department at North Dakota state university in Fargo, will be master of ceremonies for the shows. Ringmen will be Cliff Neschke of Morristown and Lyle Stephenson of Austin, past president of the Minnesota purebred dairy cattle association.

Among awards to be presented will be premiere breeder and exhibitor awards, futurity and special futurity, grand champion female and grand champion bull, best uddered cow and group and individual class winners.

The Minnesota show still has competition for aged bulls and several of these are expected here.

Kari Hanson Seeks Miss TRF Crown

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

(This is the third in a series f interviews with candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title. The annual Miss America preliminary scholarship pageant will be conducted Saturday, August 2, at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium.)

It wasn't just a coincidence that Kari Jo Hanson received the most creative and most artistic class personality awards at the Lincoln high school senior banquet this year. She has enjoyed sketching and painting for many years and seems to have always been involved with posters, wall hangings and floats during her school years.

Kari, 18, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Hanson or rural Thief River Falls and a 1986 graduate of Lincoln high school. She is five feet seven inches tall, weighs 110 pounds, has light brown hair and hazel eyes. Her talent number for the pageant will be a flute solo entitled "Allegro" from "Serenade" by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

Kari has played flute for eight years and was a member of the concert band for two years and Lincoln wind ensemble for two years. She has earned letters in band, wind ensemble, flag corps with the marching band and volleyball.

As a junior varsity player Kari received awards for most valuable player and hardest worker and in 1985 was team captain. She played basketball as a freshman and sophomore and was secretary of the sophomore class.

When she isn't painting, sketching, wood carving, etching, woodburning or just plain doodling, she might be found taking care of her two poodles and a parakeet named Chiquita. She also plays in a summer softball league and collects stuffed animals.

Accepted to attend the University of North Dakota this fall, she plans to major in technical illustration and graphic design with emphasis on the latter. She has an older sister, Jami, 23 and a younger sister Tana, 14.

Battleson And Langan Exchange Vows May 24 At Redeemer

May 24 wedding vows were exchanged by Kimberly Irene Battleson and Jeffery John Langan at Redeemer Lutheran church in this city. Parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gary Battleson and Dr. and Mrs. Don Langan, all of Thief River Falls.

Rev. Luther Anderson officiated at the 5 p.m. ceremony, with 250 guests participating in the double-ring celebration. Friend of the couple, Brenda Marben, sang "O Perfect Love," "One Hand, One Heart," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father, with a red and white theme in church decor of candelabra, red and white bows along the aisle and red and white flowers adorning the unity candle.

For her wedding, the bride chose a gown of traditional white satin with pearl and sequin-trimmed, fitted bodice, scoop neck, full sleeves falling from satin bow-trimmed shoulders, and a full cathedral train decorated with embroidery and pearls. Her brimmed hat was decorated with pearls and lace, featuring a short back veil. She carried a bouquet of red and white roses, white carnations and babies' breath. Personal attendants were Rhonda Battleson and Tammy Bergan.

Penny Jorde, Thief River Falls, friend of the couple, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Karen Thompson, White Bear Lake, and Barb Laidley, Thief River Falls, friends of the couple; Jill Eggenberger, Minneapolis, cousin of the bride; and Jennifer Langan and Lisa Langan, Thief River Falls, sisters of the groom. All wore red satin gowns with a red rose and white carnations in their hair. They carried bouquets similar to that of the bride of red and white roses, white carnations and babies' breath.

Elizabeth Brown, the bride's cousin from Jamestown, ND, was flower girl. She wore a white gown matching that of the bride. The groom's cousin, Andrew Stenberg from Plymouth, served as ring bearer.

The groom was attired in a white tuxedo with matching tie and cummerbund, and wore a boutonniere of a single red rose. The groom's attendants and ushers wore black tuxedoes with red ties and cummerbunds, and boutonnieres of red roses. Friend, Gregg Hanzel of Kalispell, MT, was best man. Groomsmen were Mark Stenberg, Thief River Falls, and Morris Stenberg, Plymouth, both uncles of the groom; John Otterson, Park Rapids, cousin of the groom; and Guy Sande, Kalispell, MT, and Kevin Kezar, Thief River Falls, both friends of the couple. Ushers were Doyle Nelson, Goodridge, uncle of the bride, and John Krankkala, Thief River Falls, uncle of the groom.

The mother of the bride wore a dusty rose, floor-length gown. The groom's mother wore floor-length mauve. Their corsages were of red roses, white carnations and babies' breath.

Guests of honor were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jerrald Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Duane Battleson, and Amanda Nelson; and the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Langan, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Stenberg, and Minnie Bucholz. Flower hostesses were Regina Grisanti and Karen Wennberg, with Jesse Nelson and Lance Reierson distributing wedding programs.

Following the wedding, a reception for the guests was held in the church parlor. Serving as host couples were Mr. and Mrs. James Derhaag, cousins of the bride, and Terry Kertz and Lisa Nepper, friends of the couple. gone more than a month or so at a time. I think families need some separation to make us appreciate one another. This job allows just enough separation, but not too much."

Ens. Dahl is scheduled to report in July for his new assignment as Director of the Underwater Construction Technician school in Port Hueneme, CA.

Dahl and his wife, the former Martha Hillyer, also of Thief River Falls, have been married for 12 years. They have four children: Maria and Margaret, both 10; Stuart Jr., 7; and Steven, 5.

In the commissioning program, a biography of Dahl was listed and included information regarding his naval service. The following is taken from that program:

Following basic training at Great Lakes, IL, and constructionman apprentice training at Gulfport, he recieved orders to NMCB 133 where he was assigned to the operations department as the Battalion Timekeeper, and later complete engineering aid, "A" school, where he was class leader. Upon returning to the battalion, he was assigned as design project supervisor, and applied for diving training.

In 1976 he attended Second Class diver school at San Diego, CA, and basic underwater construction technician school at Port Hueneme, CA, and received orders to underwater construction team I. While here, he has attended first class diver school and engineering aid school, where he finished as honor graduate and accumulated the highest scholastic average of the school to that date.

EAC (DV) Dahl's duties with UCT I have included construction diver, surveying, drafting, writing project completion reports, team photographer and team librarian. He has served as training petty officer, dive systems department head and engineering department head. He qualified as a diving supervisor in 1983. Common Science

Light bulbs made their appearance in the latter part of the 1800s. Prior to that time artificial light was produced by burning candles or some other fuel — whale oil, kerosene, natural gas, etc. In fact, it was well into this century before many areas of the country had access to electricity and, therefore, to electric lights.

The first bulbs for commercial use were developed by Thomas Edison in 1879. His bulbs contained a carbon filament housed in a glass bulb which had had the air removed by a vacuum. When an electric current was passed through the bulb, the filament flowed and produced light. The vacuum was necessary to keep oxygen in the air from causing the filament to burn up too rapidly. This type of light bulb is referred to as an incandescent lamp.

Improvements have been made in incandescent bulbs since Edison's day. In 1911 the metal tungsten was substituted for carbon as the filament. Two years later inert gases, ones which do not burn, were used to fill the bulb so a vacuum became unnecessary. In 1925 manufacturers began to frost the inside of the bulbs to produce a softer, diffused light instead of the glaring brightness typical of the clear bulb with its unconcealed filament.

Today incandescent bulbs are available in a wide variety of wattages that provide brightness of light ranging from night lights to extremely bright industrial bulbs. The amount of light depends on the amount of electrical current passing through the filament at any given time: A 100-watt bulb produces about twice the light, measured in lumens, that a 60-watt bulb does. The average lumens and the average lifetime of incandescent bulbs are printed on the container in which they are sold. Make a graph of wattage versus lumens and then one of wattage versus average lifetime. The results are interesting.

A second kind of bulb was developed in the 1930s. Unlike the incandescent bulbs which produce light only when a filament is heated to high temperatures, these new fluorescent bulbs were based on the emission of light by certain materials when they are relatively cool. A typical fluorescent bulb is a sealed tube containing argon and mercury. The inside of the tube is coated with a powder called a phosphor.

Here is how it works. When electricity is passed through the gas, some of the electrons of the gas atoms are excited to a higher energy level. They immediately fall back to their normal energy level, but when they do, they give off a faint bluish light and untraviolet light. These lights, which themselves do not provide us with much noticeable light, then strike the phosphor coating on the inside of the glass tube. Electrons in the phosphor are similarly excited to higher energy levels, but when they fall back to the normal energy level, they give off visible light.

The phosphors selected for normal lighting give off all the colors of the visible spectrum, so what we see is white light. The process is very efficient. A 40-watt fluorescent bulb will produce about the same amount of light as a 150-watt incandescent bulb and will last 25 times as long. Not only is it cheaper to perate, the light produced is closer in character to natural light than that from incandescent bulbs.

The brightly colored neon lights used outside businesses work on the same principle. Neon is the gas enclosed in the tube. When electricity is used to excite its electrons, an orange-red glow results. Addition of other gases and the use of a variety of phosphors allow numerous colors to be produced.

4H CLUB

The City View 4-H club held it's regular monthly meeting June 9 at the Norden Town Hall. The meeting was called to order by president Jenny Haugen. Flag pledges were said and secretary and treasurer's reports were given by secretary Julie Berard. The leaders report was given by Becky Johnson. Business discussed was dairy days and the flower gardens at the fair grounds. Volunteers who had volunteered to work at dairy days were reminded of the time of their shifts. Also volunteers were gotten to plant both of the flower gardens during the week. We voted to have a club tour this year. Fair premium list exhibit sheets were handed out and are due in the extension office by July 7. Recreation was given by Karl Kirkeby and Amy Johnson. Lunch was served by Kirkebys. The next meeting will be held July 14 at the L.B. Hartz Park.

Dear Readers,
July 4 commemorates our nation's Independence Day. It is proper that we, as a nation, now encourage free and honest elections among the emerging nations so that they too may benefit from government of the people, by the people and for the people.
We may not always approve of the governments they elect, but the right of mistake is also theirs. Democratically elected governments will serve both the cause of independence and world peace.
Respectfully
Belmont Funeral Home

Exchange Students Need Hosts For Stay In This Area

Mauricio Mitre

Gitte Jensen

Mauricio Mitre of Mexico and Gitte Jensen of Denmark are two of 15 exchange students hoping to spend the 1986-87 school year in Thief River Falls or surrounding area. Earlier this year, they were accepted to a program sponsored by Educational Foundation for foreign study, a non-profit youth exchange organization. Since then they have been awaiting news of a host family who would like to host them while they attend a local high school.

Paul and Rita Englund, the local representatives for Educational Foundation, hope to find host families for these students as soon as possible. "Host families come from all backgrounds and walks of life," they explain. "Sharing family life with an exchange student is a wonderful way to learn about other cultures and to make international friends."

Host families provide students with a bed, meals and a loving environment. EF students speak English, are fully insured and provide their own spending money for the 10-month stay.

For more information about hosting Mauricio, Gitte or one of the other students, contact Paul and Rita Englund at (218) 436-3123.

Rural Enterprise Zone Act Gains Senator's Support

Calling it a step in the right direction to meet the immediate and severe needs of the farm crisis, Senator Dave Durenberger announced that he is co-sponsoring legislation which would create new jobs and business activity in depressed rural areas.

The bill, the "Rural Enterprise Zone Act of 1986," would require the secretary of housing and urban development to designate up to 45 depressed rural areas as federal enterprise zones. Only severely distressed areas would qualify. Businesses which locate or expand within the designated zones would be eligible for limited federal tax and regulatory benefits, in addition to substantial benefits offered by state and local governments.

"Without a healthy farm economy to support them, local businesses are forced to close, jobs are lost, and commercial property values decline," Durenberger said.

Durenberger, chairman of the intergovernmental relations subcommittee, noted that a recent committee report, "Governing the Heartland: Can Rural Communities Survive the Farm Crisis," show that real net farm income declined from $14.9 billion in 1979 to $5.4 billion in 1983; farm land values have plummeted by as much as 44 per cent; and total farm debt has soared to over $200 billion.

Durenberger said that the farm crisis, coupled with simultaneous cuts in federal and state aid, poses severe financial stress on rural governments at a time when demands on local and state governments are increasing.

"If a response is not made now, local governments in rural areas are in danger of losing one-fifth of their per capita revenues due to falling land values and cuts in federal and state aid," Durenberger said. "That amounts to $1,000 per family of four."

Durenberger said that rural enterprise zones would complement other tools in the revenue code — such as the deduction for state and local taxes and the ability of state and local governments to issue tax exempt bonds — which would help diversify distressed rural economies.

The rural enterprise zone act of 1986 complements legislation Durenberger introduced earlier this year — targeted fiscal assistance — which would guarantee that needy communities could provide their citizens with a minimum level of basic services like police and fire, public health and sanitation, roads and bridges.

Land And Water Coalition Given $64,730 Grant

International Coalition for Land and Water Stewardship in the Red River Basin has recently been awarded a two-year $64,730 grant for its on-going environmental education and cooperation activities. The grant was awarded by the Bush foundation of St. Paul.

The international coalition was founded in 1979 by a group of citizens concerned about flooding problems in the Red River basin. Scope of the organization's activity has expanded to include land and water issues that affect the counties, cities, townships, businesses and citizens of the Red River basin. It is presently governed by a 24-member volunteer board of directors with many other citizens being involved in an active committee structure.

The coalition will be using the grant to sponsor a series of education and cooperation seminars throughout the Red River basin that will help interaction between local elected leaders (county, city, township levels) and soil and water management professionals.

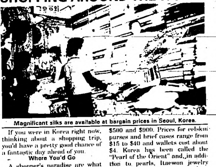
SHOPPING AROUND THE WORLD



Magnificant silks are available at bargain prices in Seoul, Korea.

If you were in Korea right now, thinking about a shopping trip, you'd have a pretty good chance of a fantastic day ahead of you.

Where You'd Go

A shopper's paradise are what two of the more famous shopping areas of Seoul have been called. One is Itaewon. It offers international shoppers fun and convenience on a bargain hunting spree and shop owners are well versed in English. The other area is called Tongdaemun Shijang which means East Gate Market. It is, appropriately, located near the 500-year-old East Gate entrance to Seoul which was once a walled city. The East Gate Market is the largest and most colorful marketplace in Seoul.

What You'd Buy

There are many bargains in these markets. Itaewon is best known for ready-made apparel, tailored suits and furs. As a rule silk blouses and dresses cost $25 to $35, tailored suits start at about $110. Mink jackets from the world-famous Jindo furriers cost between $500 and $900. Prices for eelskin purses and brief cases range from $15 to $40 and wallets cost about $4. Korea has been called the "Pearl of the Orient" and, in addition to pearls, Itaewon jewelry shops offer smoky topaz, amethyst and jade. The East Gate Market has silks and ready-made apparel, lacquered furniture and small items such as ginseng. Customers and merchants enjoy good-natured bargaining before agreeing on a price. Prices can be as much as 50 percent less on lacquerware than in the United States.

What Your Dollar's Worth

The Korean monetary unit is called a won. Many Americans consider themselves winners when they look at the exchange rate: about 900 won to the dollar.

Where To Learn More

You can get a free shopper's guide and other travel information about Korea from a travel agent or by writing to the Korea National Tourism Corporation, 510 West Sixth Street, Suite 323, Los Angeles, California 90014.

Clinic To Stop Smoking Offered At Medical Center

Stop smoking clinic, a five-day clinic designed to help a person break free from the tobacco habit, is scheduled to begin 7 p.m. July 14 at Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls.

"The best way to help a person break free from the tobacco habit is to educate him in dealing with stresses and difficult social situations," states Dr. Leo Herber, program director. "This five-day plan is very much oriented toward teaching people how to live, not just how to give up the smoking habit. It teaches concepts of self-worth and stress management strategies."

Each day of the clinic has a special emphasis, according to the director of the plan. The first concept area is support; the second is health awareness; the third is substitution strategies; the fourth is personal growth and development; and the fifth deals with motivation and how to be successful.

The five-day clinic begins on July 14 and will meet in the basement meeting rooms at Northwest Medical center. For more information on this program or to register, call Gail Holland at Northwest Medical center at 681-4240, extension 210. Unemployment Rate Drops To 5.4 Per Cent In May

Minnesota's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 5.4 per cent in May, marking the fourth consecutive monthly decrease and falling to the lowest rate since September 1981, Commissioner Joe Samargia of the Minnesota Department of Jobs and Training reported recently.

The rate declined from 5.8 per cent in April.

"This was good news for Minnesota's overall economic picture," Samargia said. "The decline brought the jobless rate a full point below the January 1986 reading."

Minnesota's comparable rate in May a year ago was 5.5 per cent. The U.S. unemployment rate was 7.3 per cent for the month.

Although Minnesota's total employment in May was virtually unchanged from April, Samargia noted that non-agricultural wage and salary employment increased by 4,300 (.2 per cent) from a month ago and 23,700 (1.3 per cent) from a year ago.

Individual area jobless rates varied from an actual low of 4.4 per cent in Olmsted county to a high of 21.8 per cent in Clearwater county for April, the most recent month for which county data are available.

Unemployment rates in this article pertain to the entire labor force and are not used to determine whether unemployment insurance benefit payments will be extended beyond the unusual 26-week maximum. The unemployment rate among persons covered by unemployment insurance is used to determine whether the benefit payments will be extended.

Jaki Weleski In June Minnesota Arts Experience

Jaki Weleski, Lincoln high school freshman, was a participant in Minnesota Arts Experience at Moorhead state university June 9 through 20. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Weleski of rural Thief River Falls.

Jaki studied chamber music, performing in viola and piano at the June 20 open recital that was the grand finale of the two weeks of study. In string class, with Paul Vance as instructor, Jaki played the viola as part of a group performing "Minuet" by Bach, arranged by Leopold Auer, and an arrangement by Paul Vance for two violins and viola, "From 'Sonata in D Major, op. 5, no. 2'" by Handel "V. Marche," and "VI Gavotte."

She also took part in piano class with Nancy Harris as instructor, performing in "Allegro in E minor" by Diabelli, "Pastorale" by Stecher Horowitz, and "Immortelle" by Spandler.

Minnesota Arts Experience is a legislative funded program to promote equal access to art experiences for state high school students. More than 60 students from the region studied dance, chamber music and visual arts at the university, provided with free tuition, room and board.

New Incentive Provided For MN Ethanol Producers

Minnesota producers of ethanol received an additional incentive July 1 as a result of a bill passed by the 1986 Legislature, according to the Minnesota department of revenue.

The law provides for a 15 cent per gallon credit to producers of ethanol, which is blended with gasoline to provide motor fuel, known as gasohol. It also provides for a 25 cent per gallon credit for pure ethanol used by distributors to produce gasohol.

The revenue department said the current four cent per gallon tax break on gasohol for distributors encouraged the use of gasohol, but much of the ethanol was produced outside of Minnesota. Gasohol is a blend of 90 per cent gasoline and 10 per cent ethanol.

The credit of 15 cents to producers of ethanol and the 25 cent credit to distributors will result in a total credit of 40 cents for each gallon of pure ethanol produced and used in Minnesota.

Before the law change, producers did not receive credit for ethanol they produced, and distributors received a credit of four cents a gallon on the blend of gasoline and ethanol.

The 25-cent per gallon credit on pure ethanol for distributors breaks down to 2½ cents per gallon for the gasohol mixture. The revenue department says it expects most distributors to continue to blend the ethanol with gasoline at a 10-90 mixture in order to receive the federal tax credit of six cents a gallon.

The credit for distributors will drop to 20 cents a gallon for pure ethanol or two cents for the gasohol blend on July 1, 1987.

The tax credit received on gasohol by a distributor must be passed on to the retailer, the department said.

The additional income to the state as a result of the reduction of the gasohol credit will be used toward an ethanol development fund to be used for payment of the 15 cent per gallon refunds to Minnesota ethanol producers. Total payments may not exceed $200,000 for the first year and $10 million each following year until the program expires on July 1, 1992.

The credit applies to ethanol produced from corn, potatoes, cereal grains, cheese whey and sugar beets.

To obtain refunds, producers must file claims with the revenue department's petroleum division before the last day of the month following the end of each quarter.

Questions about the ethanol credit should be directed to the petroleum division at 642-0401.

Commercialization Irritates

The following column by Lois Trapp appeared in the July 1 issue of The Record at Grafton, ND. Anyone who followed any of the hype and hoopla regarding the Statue of Liberty over the Fourth of July weekend can appreciate what the writer has to say:

I am not sure if I should wear my blue shorts with the white stars and the red and white striped blouse to honor Miss Liberty this weekend. Perhaps shorts are a tad informal to go with my genuine foam rubber model of her crown!

Don't think someone will not be wearing a similar outfit. "Trashy, glitzy souvenirs of the statute are a sort of cult thing now," says a New York woman, quoted in the May 18 issue of the New York Times magazine, which devoted the entire issue of the magazine to the upcoming bash.

The souvenirs range from Tiffany's $1,500 gold watches with the statue's new torch etched on their faces, (they are all sold out) to pouches of metal fragments of the scrap from the statue, and replicas of Liberty that are partially composed of pulverized powder from the scrap. These are sold at prices ranging from $10 to $300, with certificates of authenticity signed by Lee Iacocca.

The officially licensed products from which her face now gazes includes garbage bags, swizzle sticks, belt buckles, T-shirts and beer mugs. As Maureen Dawd, a Times writer put it: "Her face and form pop up in the most unlikely places. For the tired she is emblazoned on pillows, bed spreads and dust ruffles; for the poor, she can be found on wooden pencils, paper napkins and plastic cups, and for those huddled masses yearning to breathe free, she advertises an air freshener."

Hamilton Projects, the licensing representative for Lee Iacocca's private money-raising foundation, says they have tried to weed out the most inappropriate. They have turned down requests to use iberty's face on caskets, toilet seats, dog food and knives (of over three inches), whips and guns.

Those who didn't pay the tax-deductible fee for the right to use Miss Liberty's face still can try to cash in on the hoopla with unauthorized trinkets. How about a flip-the-pages book called "The Statute of Liberty takes a Dive" — a cartoon of Liberty tossing away her crown, torch and robe, diving off her pedestal and swimming naked in the harbor?

Like most of you, some of my ancestors passed through Ellis Island and saw her "Lift her lamp beside the golden door." I have always been thrilled by those lines by Emma Lazarus on the plaque inside the entrance. "Those huddled masses" of Germans, Swedes, Norwegians, Italians, Czechs, Serbs and Greeks, those Jews fleeing the pogroms of Czarist Russia, all seeking hope and freedom on a new continent, gave the country its greatest century. Their hard work and talents made us a leader in industry, agriculture, music and the arts.

To our shame, we, a nation of immigrants now prospering, have been less than welcoming at times to those of other races whose background was not Eugopean. Ideology, religion and race have been the criteria, and still are, unfortunately, for excluding other "tired and poor."

The lavish ceremonies planned for the July celebration are impressive — the Tall Ships, the concerts of every kind, the bands, parades and fireworks are of a magnitude only Americans would attempt. There is something for every taste, even though it may not be yours or mine; even though the millions raised by the apostle of free enterprise, Iacocca, are tax deductible. Perhaps the end result will be a new appreciation of what Miss Liberty represents.

I tend to be irritated by the commercialization of our national symbol. Among the festivities planned, I think it was the news that there would be 150 Elvis look-alikes gyrating at Flushing Meadows to honor the lady that finally turned me off.

Yet the story of how painfully and ingeniously the money was raised to erect the pedestal on which she was built shows that gaudy souvenirs and tasteless advertising were not invented by this generation.

The makers of Castoria laxative, at a time when funds were short, wrote the Pedestal Fund Committee on March 25th, 1884:

"So far as we know, the largest single contribution to the Pedestal Fund is $5,000. To promote the good work, we tender a subscription of $25,000 provided that for the period of a year you permit us to place across the top of the pedestal the word "Castoria." Thus art and science, the symbol of liberty to man, and of health to his children would be more closely enshrined in the hearts of our people."

Fortunately, as did Hamilton Projects with the caskets and toilet seat covers, they decided they had to draw the line somewhere.

Take A Look At Farming

Following commentary is from the Iowa Farm Bureau publication:

Summer is here. Schools are out. Road maps are replacing seed catalogues as people plan their vacations.

For most of us, the money to be spent for the family vacation is what is left after paying for the family's food, clothing and other necessities.

All of us are fortunate today. What would it be like if we had to be entirely self-sufficient? What would happen to leisure time if family needs were not produced by someone else?

Though we all work hard throughout the year, there is one main reason we can enjoy our leisure time. Thanks to the hard work and the ingenuity of the Iowa farmer, our food and fiber needs are met. And they are met without us worrying about them.

But there are still too many people who do not understand that milk is only packaged in quarts, half gallons and gallons. That the butcher at the supermarket does not manufacture meat. That styrofoam cartons are merely devices to hold eggs. People need to understand that it's the Iowa farmer...the American farmer...who produces what we eat.

Yes, we are fortunate. No other people in the world have the free time we do. Neither can any other country claim that so few people feed so many. Less than three percent of our nation's population are farmers. But they are capable of supplying the other 97 per cent of us with most of our food and fiber needs.

So as you plot your vacation course this year, and as you travel the state's highways, notice the fields of corn, soybeans, oats and hay. Look at the cattle, hogs and sheep in the pastures. Stop a moment. Do not ever forget that it is the Iowa farmer...the American farmer...who fulfills our food and fiber needs.

U.S. Has Firm Grip On Export Share

Although export demand has been generally weak over the past few years, the United States still holds a firm grip on the number one exporter spot, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. The U.S. accounts for 18 per cent of total world agricultural exports.

The U.S. share (by value) was roughly equivalent to the combined shares of the next three largest exporters — France, the Netherlands and Brazil. Dominance of the U.S. in world agricultural trade is mostly due to wheat, corn and soybeans. From 1979 through 1984, the United States held a 37 to 39 per cent share of the value of wheat and flour exports, a 65 to 72 per cent share of corn exports and claimed 81 to 86 per cent of the share in world soybean exports. The only country that came close was Canada with a 21 per cent share of the wheat exports in 1983-84.

Four of the top 10 exporting nations are in the Western hemisphere — the United States, Canada, Brazil and Argentina. All of these except the United States have increased their share of world trade. Brazil moved from fifth to fourth place, bumping West Germany, while Canada moved from eighth to sixth place and Argentina from 11th to ninth.

The other top 15 exporters include France, the Netherlands, West Germany, Australia, United Kingdom, Belgium-Luxembourg, Italy, Cuba, Denmark, Malaysia and Thailand.

THE OFFICE WASN'T PLUSH but it was airy and there was plenty of room as Sgt. Mike Alexander went about his duties at national guard training at Fort Riley, Kansas. The national guardsman was ordering repair parts for combate vehicles in the 2nd Battalion. Guardsmen from Company B of the national guard in Thief River Falls took part in the two-week training program with the regular army at Fort Riley instead of attending their usual training at Camp Ripley in Minnesota.

Local Guardsmen Train At Ft. Riley, Kansas

by SFC Charles Farrow

"Extremely hardworking people, dedicated people," Lieutenant Colonel Jack W. Schulkebier described the Minnesota army national guardsmen of his command from the northwest area of the state. The guardsmen were training at Ft. Riley, KS.

"We're from a bunch of small towns - Moorhead, Wadena, Crookston, Thief River Falls, Park Rapids, Bemidji, Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls," he said, puffing his corncob pipe. In the welcome shade of a deep grove of trees the sounds of birds chirping alternated with clanking sounds of maneuvering tracked vehicles and code-worded messages communicated over the battalion radio net.

"If they're asked to put in 48 hours without sleep, they put in 48 hours without sleep. If they're asked to run four, five, six miles to make an attack on some hill, they'll do that," the colonel added.

The 2nd Battalion, 136 Infantry, Mechanized, headquartered in Moorhead, deployed for its annual training June 14-28 to Ft. Riley to accomplish several missions.

The battalion needed to practice for mobilization, to move its men and equipment by rail and highway. In time of national emergency or war the battalion would serve as an integral unit of the regular Army 1st Infantry Division, The Big Red One, base at Ft. Riley with forward elements positioned in Germany.

The battalion has 140 track vehicles, 85 wheeled vehicles and 906 men. "When you get the whole thing on the road, it spreads out seven to eight miles long."

Mechanized infantry is designed to combat enemy tanks. Twenty-three of the unit's tracks are mounted with wire-guided missile launchers that can engage targets up to a distance of 3,000 meters. "Very effective. If you can see the target, even if it's moving, you'll hit it," Lt. Col. Schlukebier said.

The battalion is also equipped with night observation devices (NODs) that gather the light from stars and turn night into day.

The terrain at Ft. Riley is topographically well-suited for manuevering and practicing of battle drills: long, rolling prairies, dotted with stands of mature trees, and laced with little gullies and creek beds that can be muddy and very tricky.

"It's a pretty terrain, especially at night when the moon comes out and we can hear the howling of coyotes," the colonel said.

At Ft. Riley the battalion also strengthened the working relationship with its regular army counterparts, professional soldiers who live this day in and day out, and who helped upgrade skills by serving as mentors and evaluators, often one to one.

Asked how well the guardsmen from northwestern Minnesota were succeeding, Schlukebier replies, "We're responding well." He continued to say that "being part-time soldiers it takes a few days to adjust, to remember again how to do certain tasks, and down here to acclimate to the heat and humidity and working long, hard hours with little sleep.

"The men are tactically proficient, professional at what they do. There's a camaraderie of feeling toward one another, towards community. They pull together, work together. It's a pleasure to work with people like this, to command people like this."

CHECKING IN with his sergeant of the guard over a field telephone while guarding the entrance to the battalion's ammunition storage area is Specialist Doug Bouchee. The local guardsman was in training for two weeks at Fort Riley, Kansas.

THIEF RIVER FALLS GUARDSMAN Private E-2 Lloyd R. Adamski aims his light antitank weapon at a target down range during annual training at Fort Riley, Kansas. Private Adamski serves during annual training at Fort Riley, Kansas. Private Adamski serves in the rifle platoon of Thief River Falls based Company B, and Battalion, 136th Infantry Mechanized and qualified as an expert firing this weapon. The Thief River Falls guardsmen deployed to Fort Riley for their annual training to practice for mobilization, improve individual and collective unit skills, and strengthen their working relationship with the regular army 1st Infantry division to which they would be attached in case of a national emergency. — Photo by Sgt. 1st Class Charles Reimler

Budworm Causes Defoliation In Jack Pine Stands

Jack pine budworm is causing noticeable defoliation to many jack pine areas in northwestern and central Minnesota, according to John Stanton, area silviculturist for the state forestry division of the DNR. Serious defoliation will occur in Hubbard and Roseau counties and lesser defoliation in Becker, Beltrami and Lake of the Woods counties.

"These latter areas should experience high budworm populations and serious defoliation in 1987," Stanton said. "In Roseau county, the anticipated areas are near Hayes Lake state park, Bemis Hill and Clear River and there likely will be additional locations."

Infestations occur about every eight to 12 years and can last for five years. The first two years are population building years with some light defoliation noticed the second year. The third year is the year of heavy defoliation, and is the infestation year in Hubbard and Roseau counties. The fourth and fifth years are population declining years and little additional defoliation occurs.

Budworms begin feeding on jack pine pollen about the first of June. Old jack pine stands or jack pine stands with large trees produce the most pollen and are the areas where budworm populations get started. Populations decline from lack of food, cold and wet weather in early spring when the larvae are vulnerable, bacterial and viral diseases, and predation by birds, mammals, spiders and other insects.

Early feeding is confined to the elongating needles on the new shoots. Larvae then feed on the older foliage and finish feeding about the first of July. The most serious damage occurs to the new foliage which is completely destroyed during heavy infestations. This foliage would normally stay on the tree for three years.

Red colored jack pine is the result of a budworm infestation. Older needles are chewed off at their bases and catch in the budworm webbing. As the needles dry out, they turn red, giving the entire tree stand a bright red color. Wind and rain will knock off the needles, and the red color disappears by the first of August.

Feeding is particularly heavy at the top of the tree. One year of heavy feeding usually leads to top kill. Jack pine will die if heavily defoliated for two years, or if the trees are stressed by old age or drought.

Norway pine also will be damaged if growing close to jack pine areas heavily infested with budworm. The budworm larvae fall onto the Norway pine and feed on the new shoots. Mortality to young Norway pine has been observed during past infestations.

The Department of Natural Resources has no plans for spraying to control this pine defoliater. Plans are being made to salvage any areas which are severely damaged, Stanton said.

Area Businessmen Discuss Real Estate Taxes

Board of directors of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce, the board of directors of Jobs, Inc., Mayor Bob Carlson, Representative Wally Sparby, Senator LeRoy Stumpf and Pennington county assessor Gerard DeHaan, met last week at the Best Western inn to discuss commercial real estate taxes.

"Some local businessmen have seen real estate tax increases in excess of 30 per cent in one year while general economic conditions are best described as sluggish," states chamber president Larry Belmont. Additional meetings are being planned with other representatives of local, county and state government to discuss this problem. Information gathered at these meetings will be used to formulate a plan of action geared toward alleviating some of the pressure being felt by commercial property owners in Pennington county generally and Thief River Falls specifically, he said.

Dinner: A Family Time?

Busy families are finding new ways to enjoy dinner together -- even when both parents work and children carry a full load of after-school activities. They make the evening meal the focal point of the day — a time when everyone can share news and enjoy an appetizing meal. It helps that food manufacturers now package nutritious, tasty meals in microwavable containers so the food can be ready in minutes.

Pasta, one of the more popular foods, can be enjoyed quicker than ever because the standard process of packaging prepared pasta has been improved upon. Rather than the food being heated to high temperatures, Ragu Pasta Meals are made by combining natural ingredients and cooking them more quickly and at a lower temperature. The product reportedly tastes fresh and looks homemade. This cooking method also allows the prepared pasta to be packaged in microwavable glass jars, which let consumers see what they are buying. Preparation is easier than well-- boiling water.

If your children value their taste buds--and the time you spend with them in the evening-- you may want to encourage them to join K.R.U.M.S. It's a club for youngsters who want to make family meals more enjoyable. The initials stand for Kids Reject Unappetizing Meals and Snacks. STRAIGHT TALK — by —

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

A union striker, off the job for more than a half year, explained why he was willing to lose salary and benefits worth about $25,000 and his job, with the security it meant. He said that he had the right to expect to earn more than his dad and his grandfather. He had given no thought to a significant question, "Can my employer afford to pay me more than my dad or grandfather earned?"

This union member believed that this strike would bring back the benefits of the past and assure a higher earnings level. His losses in income and job security can be blamed on a lack of understanding of how our business system works. Sure his union leaders led him astray, but they didn't understand how our business system works any more than he did. This ignorance was expensive.

When this union striker stopped getting a weekly salary, and had to depend on union strike benefits and savings, his whole community was hurt. Because he had less to spend, what he did spend had to go for critical food, clothing and shelter. He bought less. Stores had lower sales. Lower sales meant cuts in store staffing and unemployment. Businesses failed. Unemployed workers and failed businesses don't pay significant taxes, so government was hurt and had to cut back, causing more unemployment. This mass reaction hurt many people.

A good question: Why don't we teach our people how the business system works so that they don't make economically suicidal decisions that hurt themselves and everyone else?

Surveys indicate that our people do not know about costs, profits and competition. Changing conditions make it impossible for us to always earn more. Surveyed Americans believed that business makes profits of 18 to 92 cents of each sales dollar. If you believe that, then you may feel that employers have lots of room for wage and benefit increases. The truth, after tax profits are somewhere in the one to three cents per sales dollar range. The average American had guessed profits at 35 cents!

This union-striker, for example, works for a company where net profit per sales dollar is about two cents. That's about two-thirds of what other businesses in food processing are earning. The dividend yield, what this firm pays its owners, is 55 per cent of what it was just eight years ago. This year this company will, per share, earn $2.10, pay dividends of 56 cents, and spend $1.55 to modernize factories and equipment. To stay competitive, it is expected to spend an average of more than $3 per share on modernization each year for the foreseeable future.

This striker did not know about his company's profitability and the need to compete, which could use all of those profits. He didn't know that competition in food processing is so intense that thousands of firms, including some of the bigger members of the industry, are in trouble and others have failed.

In my travels, I have asked some students how wages should be determined. These were seniors, nearing the end of the line. All of their basic graduation requirements had been satisfied. Their answers were interesting and explain why, even those we have educated, don't seem to understand our business system. They felt wages should be based on what an employee needs to live comfortably. Not one suggested that wages must be based on a company's ability to pay, considering profitability and competitive conditions. Some colleagues around the country asked the same question and got the same response.

It is time for us to explain that you can not get 12 cups of coffee out of an eight-cup percolator and that a dead cow is no longer a milk producer any more than a dead company is a wage producer. We can not earn higher wages and benefits than a company's profitability and survival needs allow. Teaching this simple fact of life is as important as the other facts of life!

Babe Ruth 13-Year-Olds . . .

TRF Splits Against Two EGF Ball Clubs

A pair of East Grand Forks teams mustered just one hit each Wednesday, but the visitors still managed to come up with a doubleheader split against the Thief River Falls Babe Ruth Prep 13-year-olds.

Thief River Falls beat the East Grand Forks Orioles 9-2 in the opener on Steve Sabo's one-hit pitching. He struck out eight and walked six, giving up only a pair of second inning runs.

Kyle Evenson was 2-for-3 for the winners, who got one of those runs back in the bottom of the second, then struck for three runs in the fourth, one in the fifth and broke it open with a four-run sixth on a single by Evenson, a double by Mike Swanson, three East Grand Forks errors and two walks.

Five Thief River Falls hits in Game 1 were complemented by seven walks and five East Grand Forks errors. The winners had two errors.

East Grand Forks Red, like the Orioles, came up with just one hit in Game 2, but still came out a 6-2 winner in the scheduled five-inning affair.

Tim Hugg started on the mound for the Thief River Falls squad in the second game, but had trouble throwing strikes and was replaced by Swanson before the first inning was completed. Dale Martell took over with one out in the fourth.

Thief River Falls surrendered a first inning run, but went ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the first on singles by Swanson and Troy Coltom, a walk and an error.

East Grand Forks tied it in the second inning, then won it with a four-run fourth on the Reds' lone hit of the game — a bases-loaded double.

Swanson took the loss. Thief River Falls had three hits and six errors. East Grand Forks had three errors.

Thief River Falls 13-year-olds, 7-9-1, were scheduled to host East Grand Forks again today (Monday) in a 12-noon doubleheader. They visit Roseau Wednesday for a twinbill starting at 12-noon.

TRF Post 117 Beats Warroad Legion 2-1

Warroad American Legion baseball team arrived in Thief River Falls Thursday with just four games under its belt, sporting a 1-3 record.

Thief River Falls, on the other hand, had played the equivalent of 3½ games the day before in a pair of extra-inning doubleheader losses at Moorhead and had played an 18-game schedule, going 7-11.

Post 117 showed the effects of the Wednesday trip to Moorhead with a less-than-ethusiastic performance against a Warroad team that had just nine players on hand, but Thief River Falls still managed to come out a 2-1 winner.

It was mostly a pitching duel between Thief Rvier Falls' Kevin Nelson and Warroad's Mike Flick, a pair of righthanders. Neither one gave up an earned run. Nelson finished with a three-hitter, striking out ten, and did not walk a batter. Flick had a two-hitter, striking out seven and walking two.

Thief River Falls scored first when Mike T. Anderson (there's two Mike Andersons playing) struck out, but reached base when the third strike got by Warroad catcher Jared Baines in the second inning. Anderson stole second and third, and after Bill Dicken walked and immediately took off for second, broke for home on a delayed double steal, hoping to sneak across the plate while Warroad got caught up in a run-down with Dicken. Warroad went to the plate with the ball, though, and Anderson looked like a sure out, except Baines didn't get the tag down in time.

Warroad tied it 1-1 in the top of the fourth when Flick singled to center field, moved up on a pair of wild pitches and scored on a two-out infield throwing error on a ball hit by David Marvin.

Thief River Falls won it with a fifth inning run when Dicken drew a lead-off walk, stole second, went to third on an infield ground-out on a ball hit by John Kragness and scored on a wild pitch.

Post 117 Drops Two Extra-Inning Games By One Run . . .

Moorhead Blues Outlast TRF Legion

Thief River Falls and Moorhead started playing an American Legion baseball doubleheader Wednesday and finished Thursday, with the host Blues winning a pair of extra-inning games that took some six hours to complete.

Moorhead won the opener 7-6 on Scott Bjerke's lead-off home run in the bottom of the eighth inning, then took the second game 4-3 on Scott Olson's one-out, bases-loaded bloop single over the drawn-in field in the bottom of the 17th inning.

The marathon 25 innings of baseball started at 6 p.m. Wednesday and ended at 12:10 a.m. Thursday. Thief River Falls' bus arrived back home at 3 a.m.

It was a mixture of satisfaction and frustration for Post 117, said Thief River Falls coach Mark Lundin, who took pride in the fact that his young squad played the perennially-strong Blues on even terms all night long, but obviously was disappointed in the outcome of both games.

Ironically, Thief River Falls' previous start was a week earlier in the second half of a doubleheader against the Grand Forks Royals was another extra-inning, one-run loss — 12-11.

Another tough twinbill awaits Post 117 tonight (Monday) when Thief River Falls is scheduled to host Bemidji at 6 and 8 p.m. at the fairgrounds diamond.

It didn't look like it would take Moorhead that long to polish off Thief River Falls at the start of the Wednesday doubleheader when the Blues struck for five first inning runs on a pair of hits, a walk and four Thief River Falls errors.

But Kory Joppru shut the door on the Blues the rest of the way, limiting Moorhead to just three base hits over the final seven innings in a route-going pitching performance that impressed Lundin. "Kory really did well," he said.

Thief River Falls scored three times in the second inning to get close, surrendered a fourth inning run, but tied it in the top of the sixth with another three-run shot.

Bjerke won it, though, when his eighth inning home run down the right field line stayed fair by inches, hit the top of the fence, caromed off the foul pole and over the fence for an 8-7 Moorhead victory.

Thief River Falls out-hit Moorhead 8-5 in Game 1, but also kept the official scorer busy with an 8-7 edge in the error department.

Chris Nelson topped Joppru's pitching performance in Game 2 by striking out 15 Moorhead batters while giving up just five hits and three runs in 12 innings of work.

But American Legion rules limit pitchers to 12 innings of work per week — and Nelson used his quota up in one night. Post 117 was without pitchers Kevin Nelson and Mike Anderson, forcing Lundin to go back to Joppru again for the final five innings. If the game would have gone another inning, Lundin would have had to search for another pitcher because Joppru used up his work allotment.

"Chris did a helluva job, and Kory pitched well, again," said Lundin.

Moorhead scored single runs in the first and fifth inning, with Thief River Falls answering on the strength of a two-run sixth. The visitors took a brief 3-2 lead on Nelson's home run in the top of the 12th, but Moorhead tied it another on three errors in the bottom of the inning, although the Blues left the bases loaded.

An error, base hit and walk loaded the bases with Blues with one out in the bottom of the 17th, bringing the infield in for a play at the plate. Olson lifted a pop-up into the air that was ruled an infield fly out by the umpires, but it fell on the edge of the outfield grass for a game-winning RBI.

Thief River Falls out-hit Moorhead again, 13-9, but also had more errors, 6-4. Joppru had five hits in the two games as the players got as many as 17 at-bats during the course of the competition.

For Lundin, it continued a cycle of extra-inning games at Moorhead. His Lincoln High School baseball team lost a 7-6 ten-inning contest to the Moorhead Spuds in the North Sub-Region 8AA tournament semifinals this spring.

SCHMIDT-COKE second baseman Tom Drury forced out Coors base runner Roger Cota, then stepped out of the way as he completed the double play pivot throw to first baseman Paul Walker in the first inning of Wednesday's Thief River Falls Men's Fast Pitch Softball League game at the fairgrounds diamond.

Coors and Schmidt-Coke played to a 10-10 12-inning draw in Game 1, while United Satellite Systems blasted Melvies 14-4 in five innings in Game 2 Wednesday in Thief River Falls Men's Fast Pitch Softball League play.

The opener was suspended after 12 innings at 11:15 p.m. to allow the second game to get started, a game that was slated for 9 o'clock.

Coors got a run in the top of the first inning with two out and runners on first and third when Bruce Johnson laced a base hit for an RBI.

Schmidt-Coke got the run back in the bottom of the inning on Kevin Sanders, lead-off triple and Mark Harder's base hit.

Coors got four runs in the second, with Schmidt-Coke coming back for a pair of runs and a 5-3 contest. Coors took a 9-4 lead into the bottom of the seventh, but Schmidt-Coke scored five times to send the game into extra innings.

Each team pushed a run across the plate in the tenth to maintain the tie.

Coors had 16 hits and two errors, while Schmidt-Coke had 13 hits and three errors. Jeff Hendrickson threw all 12 innings for Coors, with Mike Drury tossing the first five innings and Vern Lindquist handling the last seven for Schmidt-Coke. Mark Harder had the game's only home run.

In Game 2, Melvies grabbed an early 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning, but United Satellite Systems came up with four runs in the same frame, increased its lead to 5-2 in the third and put the game away with seven runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Todd Ortloff picked up the pitching win. Erv Melvie took the loss.

United Satellite Systems out-hit Melvies 12-5 and the losers had eight of the game's 11 errors.

TRF Wins Bemidji Title

A Thief River Falls entry won the annual Horace May Invitational Babe Ruth baseball tournament in Bemidji over the weekend.

Coached by Howard Dalager, the Thief River Falls squad included a collection of five players from the TF Sporting Goods 14-15-year-olds, three members of the Pepsi-Cola Bottling 14-15-year-olds, and a pair of players from the Prep 13-year-olds.

Thief River Falls edged the Bemidji Braves 1-0 in the Saturday semifinals, then topped the Bemidji Lions 4-2 in the Sunday title game.

Bemidji Lions out-scored East Grand Forks 16-14 in the other Saturday semifinal and the Bemidji Braves handled East Grand Forks 18-4 in the Sunday third place game.

Jared Erickson pitched a four-hit shutout in the Thief River Falls win over the Bemidji Braves, striking out six. Thief River Falls had just two hits, but one of them was a seventh inning single by Sean Myhrer, who moved to second on a passed ball, stole third and scored on an overthrow on the play. The game had just three errors — two against Thief River Falls.

Myhrer also played a key role in the 4-2 Thief River Falls title game win over the Bemidji Lions, getting an RBI triple in the bottom of the sixth. The hard-hit, long drive snapped a 2-2 tie. He scored moments later on a single by Erickson.

Jason Kempert was the winning pitcher, striking out five. Thief River Falls out-hit the Bemidji Lions 7-3, with Kempert and Erickson both getting three hits. Thief River Falls had two errors, the Lions had one.

KEVIN SANDERS of Schmidt-Coke completed his slide across home plate under the watchful eye of umpire Dick Bjerken as Coors pitcher Jeff Hendrickson came up too late to make the tag in the first inning of Wednesday's Thief River Falls Men's Fast Pitch Softball League game. Sanders broke for home and scored from third base when Coors catcher Ron Ostby had to throw down to first base to retire Nick Drees after a third strike eluded the catcher. Sanders beat first baseman Paul Williams' relay back to Hendrickson, covering the plate. Bjerken, the league statistician, was forced into the role of umpire because of personnel shortages.

Minnesota Conservation Federation has announced that it will oppose the location of a proposed National Guard training camp in northeastern Minnesota. Citing dangers to wildlife, waters and the lands of the area, the state's oldest and largest conservation organization said that it cannot support such a facility at the expense of the unique natural resources in the area.

Currently, three sites are being studied by the Guard in the Arrowhead Region for the 200,000-acre camp. The area currently being favored by the Guard is east and southeast of Virginia and includes approximately 150,000 acres of the Superior National Forest and about 50,000 acres of state trust land.

A second area is south of Hibbing, roughly between Highways 53 and 73, and also includes portions of the Superior National Forest.

Third area currently under consideration lies north of Hibbing along the St. Louis and Itasca County line. It includes portions of Superior National Forest as well, and parts of the George Washington State Forest.

Federation's opposition to the proposal stems from the military's history of a lack of concern for conservation, and from the unique and valuable features of the area itself. The favored area contains large populations of the threatened timber wolf, many nests of the endangered bald eagle, the headwaters of several

By Craig Tufts, National Wildlife Federation

Mockingbirds Make Friends And Enemies

Mockingbirds are amazing. Virtually no other familiar bird sings such an incredibly varied song so noisily at such frequent intervals. Surely no other bird defends its territory more aggressively.

Mockingbirds can inspire love, awe, anger — and sometimes downright belligerence. Their antics have long been known in the South. However, over the past 30 or 40 years, northerners too have become well acquainted with "mockers" as the birds have pushed north (as far as New Hampshire, Maine and southern Canada). Apparently they've been attracted by an increasing abundance of suburban berry-bearing shrubbery. They've become a delight and/or an aggravation to a whole new audience.

Mockingbirds definitely do things their own way. Most birds confine their territory-marking to breeding seasons, usually when the male delineates the periphery of "his" chunk of earth by moving from song perch to song perch and vocalizing. Not so among mockingbirds. A female as well as a male will defend a separate winter territory against raids on staked-out food supplies such as berries and other fruits. If your bird feeder happens to lie within a mockingbird's territory, even though a mockingbird generally will not use a seed feeder, you can expect to see other birds chased off, even physically attacked.

Such assertive behavior can be especially distressing to you if you're trying to attract, feed and house bluebirds in an effort to increase the bluebird population. In late fall, both bluebirds and mockingbirds shift their diets from insects to fruit. Encourage bluebirds to remain in your yard through the winter by stocking an empty nest box with raisins and currants. The bluebirds will investigate the box and discover the food. The mockingbirds will likely never catch on that a favorite food is inside.

On the plus side of mockingbird behavior is the highly entertaining performances they can put on — in search of food, in defense of their territory, or during courtship. You can't dispute the charm of their versatile song — no matter how loud and long. And you can't help being amused when you see a mockingbird "wing-flashing." It goes into its act on the ground, stretching its wings forward in a stuttering manner. It's thought — though not proven — that on a sunny day the shadow of the fluttering wings may spook insects out of the grass. At any rate, when the bird spots a bug, it races roadrunner-fashion and-or flutters into the air to grab a flushed insect.

For mockingbirds all winter long, plant some of the fruit-bearing trees and shrubs that they prefer: wild grape, dogwoods, viburnums, hollies, mistletoe, or junipers. Multiflora rose is, in many areas, the mainstay of the mockingbird's winter diet. But it matches the mockingbird in aggressiveness and, in most areas, has been labeled a pest. Like the mockingbird, it has its downside, but both the mocker and the multiflora may deserve a place in your backyard wildlife habitat.

FRESHWATER FOCUS

Information And Opinion From The Freshwater Foundation

Navarro, Minnesota 55392

How much will we be willing to pay for water? Is it worth as much as gaoline, at about $1 per gallon? Or is that too high? Would we be willing to pay 10 cents per gallon? Would we pay a paltry one cent per gallon for life-sustaining liquid?

If water did indeed cost $1 per gallon, one egg would cost $120, one loaf of bread would cost $300 and one pound of beef would cost a budget-blowing $4,000.

At the bargain price of 10 cents per gallon, the egg would cost $12; the bread, $30; and the beef, $400. Still a little high.

At the ridiculously cheap price of one cent per gallon for water, the egg would costs $1.20; the bread, $3; the beef, a "much more reasonable" $40.

What's the catch? The catch is that 120 gallons of water go into the production of one egg, in terms of growing the feed and raising the chickens; 300 gallons of water go into the production of one loaf of bread; and 4,000 gallons of water go into the production of one pound of beef.

In spite of these high volumes of water needed for agricultural production, food prices have remained relatively low in the United States because water has traditionally been viewed as a free resource.

That era, however, may be nearing an end. Water demands are beginning to exceed the available supplies in some areas, and pollution is lessening the available supplies even more. Competition for water will eventually lead to putting a price on it. Will that price be as high as a penny per gallon? As yet, no one knows, but in Saudi Arabia water was recently sold for $42 a barrel, or $1 per gallon.

What is known is that food prices will be affected by any increase in the value of water supplies, because of the vital role water plays in the food production system.

Any process or product requiring water will cost more to accurately reflect the true value of the water used for production. The confrontation between decreasing supplies of usable water and increasing demands for those limited supplies will have far reaching economic implications that will be felt by all of us.

New Boating Law Helps Prevent Minn. Boating Fatalities

by David Hill
Times Reporter

This summer thousands of people will be drawn to the cool, relaxing lakes in Minnesota. Unfortunately, accidents and deaths will happen. Many of these accidents and deaths could be avoided by cutting back on alcohol consumption.

According to statistics from the United States Coast Guard over 50 per cent of the over 1,200 deaths from boating accidents that happen every year involve alcohol. In Minnesota last year there were 25 deaths from boating accidents. But a new law that cracks down on intoxicated boat drivers is cutting into those sobering statistics.

This year the Minnesota legislature passed a law that seeks to prevent more fatalities. The new law directs conservation officers, sheriff or peace officers who suspect through observation that a boater's abilities to safely operate a motorboat have been impaired by alcohol or drugs to require a breath or blood alcohol test from the boater.

If the boat operator has .10 per cent or greater blood alcohol concentration he or she is subject to fines and-or the loss of operating privileges or other criminal penalties. Those who refuse the test face up to a $700 fine and loss of boat operating privileges for one year.

So far the new law seems to have had an influence on boat operators, according to Kim Elverum, Minnesota department of natural resources boating law administrator. As of June 19 there have been five boat related fatalities compared to 10 a year ago. There have also been 18 to 20 arrests, although the arrests have not made the court calendar yet.

Elverum noted that there hasn't been as many power boat accidents either. Most of the fatalities were from canoeists on rivers. Elverum said it has been an excellent year so far. He said that, for example, there were no accidents on Lake Minnetonka over the Memorial day weekend, which was a miracle as far as he was concerned.

Elverum is pleased with the fact that there have been fewer accidents and fatalities. He is also pleased with the new law which deals with a serious problem, and gets the attention of the public.

Most people don't realize the danger involved in drinking and operating a motorboat. Balance, judgment and reaction times are immediately affected on the water. They are affected in normal situations also, but the problem is compounded by what is technically called "boater's hypnosis."

Research by the Coast Guard indicates that "four hours exposure to noise, vibration, sun, glare, wind and other motion on the water produces a fatigue, which slows reaction times almost as much as if being legally drunk." Alcohol intensifies the problem.

One-fourth of all alcohol related boating fatalities are caused simply from falling overboard. Balance is one of the first things to go with alcohol consumption. An unstable platform can easily contribute to a tumble overboard.

Contrary to what many people may believe, alcohol does not warm the body, it dilates the small blood vessels close to the skin, giving a warm, glowing sensation. But the dilated blood vessels reduce the body's ability to protect the body against heat loss. A tumble into the cold waters of Minnesota lakes and rivers could easily become a fatal mistake and another statistic.

In Minnesota in 1984 50 per cent of all boating accidents involved hypothermia — a serious problem in Minnesota, according to Elverum.

Hypothermia happens whenever the water temperature combined with wind or rain is lower than 70 degrees. In a situation where someone falls overboard into cold water their reaction time can determine whether they live or die.

Another problem intensified by alcohol consumption on the water is caloric labyrinthitis, or a disorientation caused by water entering the ear. People with too much alcohol in their blood can become so confused with water in their ear that they will swim down instead of up.

Because of the intensifying effect of boater's fatigue, less alcohol than normally consumed by a person will cause the same effects as if the person had consumed greater amounts of alcohol. The danger zone for boat operators, according to the Coast Guard, is one drink for a person with a body weight up to 130 pounds, two drinks for a person with a body weight up to 160 pounds, and three drinks for a person with a body weight up to 200 pounds. A drink is considered to be one 12-ounce beer, a four-ounce glass of 12 per cent wine, or a one and one-half-ounce glass of 86 proof liquor.

The Coast Guard advises boating enthusiasts to limit their alcohol consumption to one drink per hour or less. For each drink consumed, it takes approximately two hours to sober up.

Alcohol also intensifies judgment errors. While boat operators may think they operate the boat better with a little alcohol, they are actually worse. Studies indicate reduced performance. They also report that "alcohol reduces inhibitions, causing normally cautious people to try stunts or enter high-risk situations that a sober person would avoid."

With the first drink, information takes longer to reach the eyes, ears and other senses. It also affects a person's ability to judge distance and speed. The coast Guard reports in 1984 that nationwide over $100 million in property damage was the result of boating accidents.

Elverum and others hope that laws like the one passed by the Minnesota legislature will help stem the tide of accidents and fatalities nationwide.

Making Family Life More Fun

Theme Parks Offer Unusual Entertainment

On track for family fun. This old-fashioned steam powered train is just part of the education and enjoyment available at a theme park

Surprises, rides, food, exercise, education and, above all, fun! That's what theme parks can offer today's families. What's more, aside from the variety of attractions available, they're great for day trips or vacation stops.

Fancy, for example, rumbling along the narrow rails of a railroad built in the Victorian Era, when the steam locomotive was the king of transportation.

All of this and more is Edaville Railroad & Family Fun Park, a turn-of-the-century theme park that offers an opportunity to step back through time and capture the flavor of early America. Located on Route 58 (just off I495) in South Carver, Mass., near the historical Plymouth/Cape Cod region, the park offers an opportunity for the entire family to learn and have fun together.

Edaville's "Cranberry Belt-Line" travels through one of the largest working cranberry plantations in the world. It is an authentic narrow-gauge, steam-powered railroad.

Outdoor as well as indoor attractions draw crowds from around the country. Cranberry Lake Park with its boats and fishing is one of Edaville's most enjoyable attractions. Food can be purchased or barbecue grills are available for families who like to cook their own meals.

Children can also meander around the Petting Zoo, or take a ride in a miniature model-T.

Other attractions include Edaville's New England Heritage Museum, with a 1923 Rolls Royce that is one of only five of its kind; and "Old Maude," the fire engine that helped save the city of Fall River, Mass. in 1928.

A full slate of special events are scheduled throughout the year. These include the Civil War Weekend, the Family Fun Week, the Antique Auto Show, the Wild West Train Robbery and the annual Cranberry Festival.

Admission to the park including unlimited rides and all other attractions, is $7.50 for adults, $5 for children and $6 for senior citizens. Edaville is expecting its 10 millionth visitor this summer. You may be the lucky one. For more information, call 1-617-866-4526.

cancer answers

Q. I had surgery for cancer two and a half year ago. Now the cancer has come back, and I'm going to have chemotherapy. I don't know anything about this kind of treatment. How does it work? Is it painful?

A. Chemotherapy is the use of drugs or medications to treat disease. Anti-cancer drugs work by disrupting cancer cells' ability to grow and multiply. Cancer cells grow in an uncontrolled manner. They may break away from their original location and spread to other parts of the body. Apparently this is what has happened in your case.

Anti-cancer drugs may be given by mouth, injected into a muscle, or given through a vein — depending on the type of cancer and the specific drug or combination of drugs being given. Once it enters the blood an anti-cancer drug is carried through the body to reach and destroy as many cancer cells as possible.

Chemotherapy usually doesn't cause pain. If you take it by mouth, it's the same as taking any other medicine in a liquid, tablet or capsule. When the medicine is injected into a muscle, it feels much like a flu shot. An intravenous injection (IV) usually feels like having a blood sample drawn. Some patients having chemotherapy by IV say that there is sometimes a slight burning feeling in the area of the needle.

The doctor or nurse who gives you your chemotherapy will explain what is being done and what you can expect. If you have any questions, don't hesitate to ask them.

"How should you tell your doctor about pain?"

Q. My mother has cancer that has spread to her bones. She is in a lot of pain, but she doesn't tell her doctor about it, so he hasn't given her any prescription medicine for pain. How can we help her describe her pain to her doctor?

A. Some people find pain very difficult to explain. Ask your mother how her pain feels. Offer her some descriptive words to help her be more specific — words like aching, pinching, or stabbing.

Following is a list of questions doctors often ask patients about their pain.

- — Where do you feel your pain?
- — When did it begin?
- — What does it feel like? Sharp? Dull? Throbbing? Steady?
- — How severe or intense is your pain?
- — What relieves your pain?
- — What makes your pain worse?
- — What have you tried for pain relief? What helped? What did not help?
- — What have you done in the past to relieve other kinds of pain?
- — Is your pain constant? If not, how many times a day or week does it occur?
- — How long does it last each time?

You might go through this list of questions with your mother making notes of her answers. The next time she sees her doctor she can show him the list of questions and her answers.

Her doctor should then be able to prescribe medicine that will help make your mother more comfortable. Encourage her to ask questions and to tell her doctor if the medication he or she prescribes doesn't make her feel better.

The American Cancer Society has a free booklet, "Questions and Answers About Pain Control." If you would like a copy, call their toll-free number 1-800-4-CANCER.

Cattle Are Arriving For Holstein Show And Sale

Cattle began arriving Tuesday and frequency of arrivals will increase today at the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls, although the Minnesota All-State Holstein show and the Golden Gopher Classic sale are still a couple of days away.

"The junior show will start at 10 a.m. Friday, the sale will be at 7 p.m. Friday night and the all-state show will start at 9 a.m. Friday," stated Jerry Muzzy of Thief River Falls, district show chairman. "But these showmen like to get their cattle settled in and eating and drinking normally so they fill out and show to their best advantage in the ring."

Employees of Snyder-Hager Sales, Ltd., which is managing and conducting the Golden Gopher Classic sale, were in town Tuesday preparing the poultry, sheep and hog barn on the fairgrounds for entries in the sale. They were spreading a mixture of straw and shavings or sawdust to build up the bedding base and preparing to handle consignments as they arrived.

Nearly 300 cattle from heifer calves to aged bulls are expected for the junior and senior show and more than 50 animals for the sale Friday evening. Eighteen classes of competition will be held in the junior show Friday with Martin Carrico of Selkirk, Man., Canada as judge. Twenty-eight classes will be judged at the all-state show Saturday with Harry Papegeorge of Ogden, Utah, as judge. All classes will be shown and the sale conducted in the sports arena where the floor has been covered with sand and shavings.

All of the show and sale events are open to the public and all persons interested are encouraged to visit the events at any time.

Several area Holstein breeders have consigned cattle to the sale including Mylo Carlson, ETJ Holsteins and Greg and Vince Zak of Angus,

SHE LOOKED A LITTLE LONELY Tuesday afternoon, but this purebred Holstein consigned to the Golden Gopher Classic dairy sale in Thief River Falls Friday evening soon will have lots of company. About 50 cattle are consigned to the sale and most will be arriving today and tomorrow to become acclimated to the surroundings. The sale is part of the Minnesota State Holstein show which will have nearly 300 additional animals exhibited for judging in junior classes Friday and open classes Saturday. Public attendance is encouraged.

Marching Band Members Advised Of Schedule

Thief River Falls Lincoln high school marching band members are reminded by instructor Kevin Ryan that there is a need for more participation in the marching band program this summer.

"The first scheduled parade is July 20 at Detroit Lakes," he said, "and attendance at the rehearsals prior to the parade is extremely important. The rehearsal schedule for the week has been arranged and all band members should make note of the schedule and plan to attend."

Schedule listed by Ryan is as follows: Wednesday, July 9, 6:30 p.m., brass sectional; Thursday, July 10, 1 p.m., flag rehearsal; 6:30 p.m., uniform measuring and fitting; and 7 p.m., full band rehearsal; Friday, July 11, 8:30 a.m., full band rehearsal; and Monday, July 14, 7 p.m., full band rehearsal.

John Conlee Replaces Johnny Lee At Fair

Pennington county fair officials and their booking agent did some active scrambling Tuesday when it was made known that Johnny Lee was canceling out of his contract to entertain at the fair Friday evening, July 18. The end result was securing of a replacement to team with Sylvia in the two-for-the-price-of-one concert who offers talent of comparable high quality.

"We were certainly disappointed when our agent called Tuesday afternoon and told us Johnny Lee was canceling his appearance here due to entering the hospital next week for knee surgery," stated Norris Thune, who has been handling the Johnny Lee and Sylvia concert portion of the 85th annual fair.

But the disappointment is tempered somewhat by the agent's ability to schedule John Conlee as a replacement," Thune said. "Conlee is certainly a top quality entertainer in his own right and should be a popular substitute for Johnny Lee."

Among Conlee's hits have been "Miss Emily's Picture," "Rose Colored Glasses," "I Don't Remember Loving You," "Back Side of 30," "Friday Night Blues," "Old School," "Harmony" and his current hit, "Got My Heart Set On You" which is ranked 25 on the country music charts.

The Conlee and Sylvia concerts at 7 and 9:30 p.m. (both will be performing in separate concerts at each of the shows) will be highlights of the annual county fair but only part of the many attractions for the five-day event.

Other grandstand attractions include the Middle River Hee-Haw show at 8 p.m. on Thursday, July 17, which will be entry day at the fair. There is no admission charge for the show which was presented to an appreciative audience last year in the county fair association's tent.

Friday at 1:30 p.m. during Senior Citizen day, Earl Dunn, billed as the "Man of 1,000 Voices," will entertain at another free program. An antique tractor pull will be presented in front of the grandstand Saturday afternoon with a teen dance to the music of "Syre" at 9 p.m. The Jaycee-sponsored demolition derby will con

City Council Approves Enterprise Zone Awards

Employment property designations for three Thief River Falls businesses were granted Tuesday night at the Thief River Falls city council meeting. Northern Woodwork, Forsberg's Inc and Arctco Inc. were designated employment property for enterprise zone credits. For Arctco Inc. it is the last year that the company can qualify for enterprise zone credits because they will have used up their maximum limit of $500,000.

City council members also faced a gambling license limitation issue, which asks whether the number of gambling licenses issued within the city should be limited; a garbage tipping fee increase at Future Fuel Inc., which may increase the amount paid to the city by citizens from $5.75 to $7.25; and whether the city should create a driving safety program in light of two accidents in which city employees left the scene of the accident without reporting the accidents.

Funds available for businesses falling within the enterprise zone totaled about $1.7 million when the Enterprise zone program started about three years ago. To this date $677,814 has been used by qualifying businesses. The types of credit qualifying businesses can receive fall under basically four different categories: sales tax exemptions, income tax credit, income tax credit on debt financing and property tax credit. The available funds are administered by the Community development advisory board made up of local community members.

Tuesday night $648 in sales tax credits were approved for Northern Woodwork; $15,106.47 for Forsbergs Inc., and $257,267 approved for Arctco Inc. The amount of the credit granted to qualifying businesses is based upon several factors which include equipment purchases, and new full time employees.

Chris Twomey, president and chief executive officer at Arctco, said the program has been beneficial to Arctco. It helped them in deciding to acquire the property they eventually decided upon, and it accomplished what it was meant to accomplish. Twomey said it has increased competition between cities and businesses statewide and increased employment opportunities in cities where the program is being implemented.

Twomey outlined the growth of Arctco by pointing out that the

More File For County Offices In Area Counties

Several additional filings in Pennington, Red Lake and Marshall counties have been received by the auditors' offices in Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls and Warren with filings to close at the end of the office day Tuesday, July 15.

In Pennington county, Beverly Holm and Leo Nelson of Thief River Falls have filed for the office of county treasurer and Donald Grabanski has filed for the office of second district commissioner. Grabanski is the incumbent commissioner while the treasurer's office is being vacated by Ellsworth Jorgenson who is not seeking reelection after 28 years of service.

Other filings earlier in Pennington county include James Haugen and Robert Wold for the office of sheriff, being vacated by Charles R. Richards after 30 years of service; David Olin (incumbent) and Richard Sather for county attorney; Eugene Prestegaard (incumbent) for county recorder; and William Penning for county commissioner, fourth district, where Otto Stenberg is not seeking reelection after 16 years of service.

A scramble is developing in Marshall county where six people have entered the race for county recorder being vacated by Sanford Tverstol. Those who have filed to date include Marlon Halvorson, Dwight M. Peterson, Rodney L. Erickson, Lonnie Stauffenecker and Douglas Gloude of Warren and James L. Clark of Stephen.

Gwen Schmidt of Stephen and Wayne Bendickson of Warren have filed for the office of auditor-treasurer which is being combined upon vote of Marshall county residents. Charles Cheney, present county auditor, is not seeking reelection.

Incumbent sheriff Dennis Brekke is opposed by Bruce Erickson of Warren for that position. Others who have filed as incumbents and are presently unopposed are Calvin Melgard, Warren, first district commissioner; Kenneth Price, Stephen, third-district commissioner; Delray Larson, Gatzke, fifth district commissioner; and Harold G. Myhre, county attorney.

In Red Lake county the political scene on the county level is quiet. Incumbents who have filed unopposed to date include Dave Kankel, auditor; Jay Guillemette, treasurer; Jerry Thibert, recorder; Dan Geller, attorney; and Irving Beyer, first district commissioner. Allen Morken has filed for sheriff as incumbent Kermit Knutson has chosen not to seek reelection.

PAULINE LINDBERG, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Lindberg of Thief River Falls, was a tri-captain of the Lincoln high school volleyball team last year and winner of its hardest worker and most valuable player awards. During the summer months she often practices her serve in the back yard. Pauline is one of nine candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title this year.

Athletics and music are main interests of Pauline Lindberg and were areas where she devoted a good deal of time with significant success during her years at Lincoln high school.

Pauline, 18, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lindberg of Thief River Falls and a 1986 graduate of Lincoln. She is five feet seven inches tall, weighs 128 pounds, has blonde hair and blue eyes. Her pageant talent number will be a vocal solo, "New York, New York".

This summer, for the third year, she is playing shortstop for the Hair Dynamics team in the Thief River Falls women's softball association — a team which also has several other Miss Thief River Falls candidates as members. She also put in a year as a cheerleader for the Lincoln varsity hockey team.

But her major athletic success has been in volleyball where she was a tri-captain in 1985, won the most valuable player award as a freshman and senior and hardest worker award in grade 12. She also lettered in basketball as well as earning three letters in volleyball, was a junior class vice president, and treasurer of the student senate as a senior.

On the music scene she participated in choir for four years, taking part in two schools musicals. She earned star ratings at Minnesota state high school league state-area competition in girls' ensemble and vocal solo. She also enjoys harmonizing with her two sisters – Jennifer, 14 and Kristi, 11 – at the piano. She took voice lessons from Lincoln vocal instructor David Morken as a senior.

As a junior Pauline was selected for "Who's Who Among American High

Harkin Has Strong Words For Current U.S. Farm Policies

United States Senator Tom Harkin (D-Iowa) urged farmers to vote yes on a referendum calling for mandatory production controls and "send a message to Washington that is loud, clear and unmistakable in its meaning" to put an end to the current farm program.

Harkin, sponsor of the "Harkin Farm Bill," an alternative to the current federal farm program, spoke to about 60 people at a rural unity rally sponsored by the Minnesota league of rural voters at the Thief River Falls national guard armory on Monday. Area and state DFL legislators were among the group of mostly farmers at the meeting to show their support.

Harkin praised the legislators and Minnesota Agriculture Secretary Jim Nichols in their efforts to rally support and unity for a change in policy. But Harkin also called for new blood in the United States agriculture task force. Harkin said there was one representative from the area on the

Sheila Sorenson Marries Anthony Gerardy April 26

Sheila Joy Sorenson and Anthony Wayne Gerardy exchanged marriage vows April 26 at a 2 p.m. ceremony at Immanuel Lutheran church in Plummer with approximately 400 relatives and friends joining the couple in their celebration of marriage.

Rev. Lane Zaffke and Rev. Patrick Creeden officiated at the ceremony. Parents are Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sorenson and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Gerardy, all of Plummer.

LaNette Konickson was the organist, playing "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" and the traditional "Wedding March" as prelude and processional. Kjell Melvie and Kim Nelson, cousins of the bride, sang "To Me" and "Nobody Loves Me Like You Do." Lavender floral arrangements with white daisies graced organ and piano, with lavender bells decorating the pews.

Escorted to the altar by her parents, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of 27 years ago. With a bodice of lace over taffeta, the gown featured a ballerina-length skirt composed wholly of ruffles, pearl-trimmed Peter Pan collar, and fitted lace sleeves ending in pointed wristlets. Her veil was of lace-edged, bridal illusion, falling from a headpiece of sequins and pearls that the groom's mother had worn 28 years ago at her wedding.

Rebecca Willett was her sister's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Robin Myhre and Karen Skjerven, friends of the bride, and Barbie Gerardy, sister of the groom. Their gowns were sheer polyester over taffeta of periwinkle, with ruffled bodice and sleeves, spaghetti straps and flounced hem with shirred side. They wore lavender tigerlilies in their hair and carried bouquets of lavender and white roses, grey tigerlilies and lavender periwinkles, with satin ribbon streamers. Their pearl necklace and earring sets were gifts from the bride. Rita Lancaster, special friend of the bride, served as her personal attendant.

Flower girl was Tricia Willett, niece of the bride. She wore a white, floor-length gown identical to that of the bride and her gold locket was a gift from the bride and groom. She carried a basket of lavender and white tea roses with satin ribbon streamers. Daniel Konickson, friend of the groom, served as ring bearer, wearing white tails to match the attire of the groom.

The groom wore white tails with matching white cummerbund and tie. His boutonniere was a single lavender rosebud.

Best man was the groom's brother, Peter Gerardy. Groomsmen were Russell and Gene Fisher, friends of the groom, and Karl Sorenson, brother of the bride. The bride's brother, Russell Sorenson; her brother-in-law, Tom Willett; and brothers of the groom, Kevin and David Gerardy, were ushers. Gentlemen of the wedding party wore grey tuxedos with lavender shirts, and boutonnieres of lavender tea roses and carnations.

The mother of the bride wore a floor-length gown of lavender, with ruffled V-neckline and fitted waist. The groom's mother wore a street-length pink and white gown featuring a matching white jacket. Their corsages were three lavender roses.

Guests of honor were grandparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Prestegaard; grandmother of the groom, Mrs. Corlan Magnell; godparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Arlan Koskela; godmother of the groom, Mrs. Anna Jaeger; and great-aunt of the bride, Mrs. Sigrid Tillman who presented a special prayer for the couple at the ceremony.

A reception for the guests was held following the wedding with host couples, Mr. and Mrs. John Hammer, aunt and uncle of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Ron Gerardy, aunt and uncle of the groom. In charge of the guest book was Tammy Gerardy, sister of the groom; with Karl Mattison and Nancy Jo Hesse, friends of the couple, serving punch. Todd Willett and Karl Sorenson Jr. gave out packets of rice.

A six-tiered wedding cake highlighted the serving table, decorated with white icing and shaded lavender sweet peas. Tiers were centered with doves and wedding bells, and topped with a lavender-lined wedding bell and white lace heart. Mrs. Orvis Bennitt baked and decorated the cake.

Renae Fjeld, aunt of the bride, and Noreen Johnson, aunt of the groom, cut and served the cake. Pouring for the guests were Janice Melvie, aunt of the bride, and Ella Hanson, aunt of the groom. Waitresses were Ana Mae Lallier, Dixie Koskela and Sarah Magers, friends of the couple. Ginger Froiland and Andrea Moe, cousins of the bride, presided over the gifts, and Virginia Sorenson, cousin of the bride, pinned flowers. The bride's aunt, Renae Fjeld, of Madison, WI, took photographs of the wedding.

Guests attended from Westfield, Madison and McFarland, WI; Emory, TX; Fargo, ND; and St. Paul, Virginia, Williams, Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire, Goodridge, Mentor, Oklee, Red Lake Falls, Brooks and Plummer.

The couple is at home on their farm near Plummer, where the groom is engaged in farming with his father and is employed by the Plummer creamery. Both are graduates of Pershing high school in Plummer and the groom is a graduate of the Thief River Falls AVTI welding program.

Harkin Has Strong Words For Current U.S. Farm Policies

committee "who has his priorities mixed up because he voted against the farm supply management program and for aid to the Contras." Harkin said he was a fine individual but he has his priorities mixed up and shouldn't be chair of the committee. Harkin did not refer to the representative by name. (Representative Arlan Stangeland chairs the agriculture task force.)

While the referendum, Harkin said, gives farmers a chance to change policy and send a message to Washington that is loud, clear and unmistakable, it has many problems. He criticized the fact that 1.9 million ballots were sent out and cited several examples, like what happened in Iowa, where only 15,000 ballots were sent to a state with 111,000 farmers.

Inefficiency is not a word used to describe the Japanese, Harkin said. Yet, he pointed out, they have less than half the population that the United States has and twice as many farmers. Harkin said he thought he was being taught a lesson about democracy from the Japanese host, when the host pointed out that at one time most of the land in Japan was owned by the few, but was changed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur after World War II.

The Japanese host said they like having so many farmers because it insures their democratic way of life. Harkin said the fewer the farmers the less efficient because it makes it more difficult and more expensive for the few to pay expenses that could be less difficult to manage if divided up by the many.

Harkin also criticized the present administration's claim that there are more jobs now than when they began making policy. Harkin related the experience of one Iowa family breadwinner who lost his job with John Deere after 14 years and had to get a job, after his benefits ran out, that paid almost $10 per hour less than what he was getting from John Deere. Because the family was making less the wife also had to get a job at $3.35 per hour. So, there are twice as many jobs, Harkin said; people are working twice as hard for less.

Harkin said the American people have the belief, acceptance and fear that the American dream is dying. He questioned whether America is really the land of opportunity where people will end up with more than what they began with when paying for a house takes up 44 per cent of each paycheck when it used to take up only 14 per cent. He questioned whether having two jobs where one used to exist is proper when people have to work twice as hard for a lot less. Harkin said the American dream has been reduced to a lottery because people have less than one-in-a-million chance to become successful. He said he calls the administration's happy talk about more jobs "positive pretending."

Harkin held up a pamphlet that tells farmers where to go for all kinds of assistance such as welfare, food-stamps, shelter and many other things. He said it evokes two kinds of emotions from him. The first emotion, he said, is of happiness because it is evident that some people still care. The second emotion is of anger. "It makes me damn mad to see one farmer, who can produce enough feed 105 other people, to have to be told where he can go to get food for his family."

Harkin closed his speech by urging farmers to fight the administration's "insane policies" and say no to the kind of economic programs that America now has. "There are too many people making money on money and not enough manufacturing of farm equipment and producing things that we need in our life."

Child Care Monies Available To AVTI Single Parents

Child care assistance monies for single parents enrolled in any of Thief River Falls area vocational technical institute's (AVTI) offerings of six hours or more will be available through the 1986-87 school year. If eligible, parents may receive up to $1 per hour for child care expenses.

"Many students have found this aid has relieved them from the burden of funding day care," said Jim Fremstad, financial aid counselor at Thief River Falls AVTI.

To be eligible for child care assistance, a student must meet specific income guidelines and demonstrate a need for child care assistance. A single parent is someone who is unmarried or legally separated or divorced from a spouse, and who has a minor child or children in either sole or joint-custody.

"The child care assistance is made available by the Minnesota state board of vocational technical education (SBVTE) to encourage the enrollment and retention of single parents in the AVTI system. Child care has been identified by AVTI students and staff as a primary barrier to student enrollment," said Pat Gosz, grants program coordinator for the SBVTE.

Child care assistance to single parents is offered at all Minnesota's AVTIs. For more information about Thief River Falls AVTI's single parent child care assistance, contact Jim Fremstad at (218) 631-3530.

Problems Noted With Trees By SWCD Technician

Problems with a few species of trees supplied through the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district have been noted this year, according to Lawrence Neuschwander, technician with the district.

A small percentage of the trees didn't grow, Neuschwander said, and the wet and cold weather conditions can't be blamed for it. He said he had planted trees where it was very wet and 90 to 95 per cent were growing well.

"The best luck with trees is where the ground is worked very well and cultivation is carried through until the trees have a good start, usually for a period of three years," he said.

Despite the problems with tree losses this year, he encourages farmers to plan windbreak needs with the district for next year.

Stangeland Says He Agrees With Court Decision

Congressman Arlan Stangeland says he agrees with the supreme court decision on the Gramm-Rudman law to reduce federal deficits.

"The supreme court knocked out one of the most troublesome provisions in the law while preserving the strict guidelines for cutting federal budget deficits," he said. "The court put the matter exactly where it belongs, in the lap of Congress.

The Gramm-Rudman law, named after Sens. Phil Gramm (R-TX) and Warren Rudman (R-NH), requires Congress to lower its deficit spending to specific levels each year until the budget is balanced early in the next decade.

When the law was passed last December, it included a provision stating that if those annual targets were not met, automatic cuts would be made by the comptroller general of the General Accounting office (GAO). Those cuts would have been divided evenly between defense and domestic programs.

The law also included a "back-up" provision calling for Congress to vote directly on any required cuts, if the courts struck down the GAO role in the deficit-reduction efforts.

Congress will now have 60 days to implement that back-up provision, since the supreme court struck down the GAO role.

"At this time, it would not appear that such a vote on further budget cuts will be needed this year, since Congress approved a budget on June 27 that makes enough headway on the 1987 deficit to avoid the need for any automatic cuts," the congressman said.

That budget would reduce the projected deficit from approximately $200 billion in 1986 to about $142.6 billion in 1987, well below the Gramm-Rudman target of $144 billion for next year.

"If congress can continue to make hard choices like that, the supreme court ruling will have little or no effect on reducing the deficit," Congressman Stangeland said. "But if Congress tries to back away from its responsibility, the supreme court has placed it right back in our laps.

"That is the way it should be," he said. "People want budget decisions made by their elected officials, not by an unelected GAO official."

Stangeland voted for the Gramm-Rudman law last December.

"People complain that Congress should not have to rely on a crutch like the Gramm-Rudman law — that Congress should act responsibly without such mandatory targets," he said. "They are right, but the need to get Congress moving on cutting the deficits was so great that this legislation was needed.

"The supreme court's decision has preserved the deficit-cutting mechanism and put Congress on notice that the American people expect their elected officials to deal openly and effectively with deficit spending. The supreme court has improved the process."

Governor To Hold Special Forum In Crookston Friday

Governor Rudy Perpich and the Minnesota department of agriculture will hold a governor's rural forum Friday in Crookston. The forum is aimed at giving area residents a chance to tell state officials of their concerns. Similar forums have been held in Paynesville and Slayton.

Friday's event is scheduled from 10:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. in the agriculture resource center auditorium at the University of Minnesota at Crookston. The Crookston forum was added to the governor's schedule this week, along with visits to the Marshall and Kittson county fairs.

Purpose of the forums is to bring information about state programs to rural communities, and give citizens a chance to talk with the governor about the problems and priorities of greater Minnesota.

Perpich said some programs, such as farm debt restructuring, are brand new and information on them needs to be spelled out in detail for citizens. A bonding program that will make up to $800 million available for debt restructuring was part of the 1986 farm bill, signed into law by Perpich March 21.

Local coordinator for the Crookston event will be Rep. Bernard Lieder of Crookston. Persons wishing to testify during the forum may contact him by letter or phone prior to the hearing. Moderators will try to limit comments to five minutes, to permit as many people as possible to talk with the state officials. Written testimony also will be accepted.

The governor said comments made at the farm forums will be part of his homework for the 1987 legislative session. Representatives of several state agencies will also accompany Governor Perpich and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols to the sessions.

Format of the governor's rural forum in Crookston will be as follows: 10:15 a.m. presentations on state farm programs, debt restructuring programs and reinvest in Minnesota program; 10:45 a.m., coffee hour and opportunity for individual talks with the Governor; 11 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., public testimony for Governor Perpich, limited to five minutes each.

Meetings On Soil, Water Stewardship Inform Officials

Township officers, city council members, soil and water conservation district supervisors, and other local elected leaders recently got together at workshops sponsored by the International Coalition for Land and Water Stewardship in the Red River basin.

The workshops focused on conservation and farmland preservation practices. "Farmers are not always the bad guys in soil erosion and groundwater contamination. They have been convinced this is the way they should handle their land — they should use more chemicals and fertilizers," said Wally Bernhardson, chairman of the Minnesota State Soil and Water board.

Bernhardson said farmers use certain practices which may not always be using the land wisely. "A farmer does these things to make a profit although a solution hasn't been found to the long term effects of chemical use and erosion," he said.

The objective of the workshops was to better inform the local elected leaders on the value of soil and water stewardship. As these leaders become better informed, they will be able to build consensus and implement policy that is beneficial in soil erosion. A more informed leadership can lead to a public effort to bring about policies that will lead to improved rural land-use decisions and an increase of soil stewardship.

A soil stewardship workshop open to the public will be held in each of the counties as a follow up to these local elected leaders workshops.

Asthma Is Serious Chronic Disease For Americans

Asthma is the most prevalent serious chronic disease of Americans under the age of 18, according to the American Lung association of Minnesota. It is the leading cause of school absenteeism.

Asthma episodes can be frightening experiences for children and their parents, can cause hurried visits to doctors' offices and hospital emergency rooms, and can play havoc with a child's normal social and school routine. Some children outgrow their asthma, but the majority — about 65 per cent — do not.

SUPERSTUFF, an entertaining educational kit, offers children with asthma self-help techniques that can suspend their fears and symptoms. Using SUPERSTUFF allows children with asthma to join with their families and their medical advisors in the management of their disease.

Camp SUPERKIDS, a summer camp for Minnesota children between 7-14 years of age who have asthma, is held in July. For information on SUPERSTUFF, Camp SUPERKIDS, or general information on asthma, contact the American Lung Association of Minnesota, 614 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102 (1-800-642-LUNG).

AARP Publishes Free Booklet On Patient Rights

In response to growing evidence that the quality of health care may be threatened by recent measures to curb costs, the American Association of Retired Persons has published a free booklet describing ways Medicare patients can protect their rights to quality care.

"Knowing Your Rights" describes Medicare's Prospective Payment System, designed to cut costs by paying hospitals a predetermined amount based on the average cost for treating particular diagnoses. If a hospital spends more for a Medicare beneficiary's treatment than Medicare will pay, it losses money. If the hospital spends less, it still receives the designated payment and can keep the difference.

"While AARP supports the concept of Medicare's Prospective Payment System to contain costs, we are concerned about the way it is currently being implemented. We have evidence that older people are being discharged from hospitals prematurely under this system," said AARP Unit Leader Dr. David M. Brown of Goodridge.

Dr. Brown also said that patients have an important role to play in assuring that the Prospective Payment System is not used as an excuse to skimp on treatment.

"Our booklet, "Knowing Your Rights," is designed to help Medicare beneficiaries and their families make wise health care decisions and to use the appeals process built into the system to protect their rights and their access to quality medical treatment," the chapter leader added.

The 16-page free booklet is arranged in a question-and-answer format. It describes the Prospective Payment System and its impact on hospital and physician care and coverage. To help beneficiaries get the treatment they need and control out-of-pocket hospital costs, it explains steps to take before and during hospitalization. In addition, a patient checklist on the booklet's back cover lists key considerations when hospitalization becomes necessary.

A free copy of the "Knowing Your Rights" booklet can be obtained by writing: Stock No. D12330, AARP Fulfillment, 1909 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049.

Public Hearing On Waste Handling Set In Crookston

Legislative commission on waste management, a panel of five state senators and five state representatives which oversees the work of the Minnesota waste management board and Minnesota pollution control agency in waste management, will conduct a special public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the agricultural research center auditorium at the University of Minnesota at Crookston.

The hearing will specifically address problems and obstacles faced by border counties and other communities in greater Minnesota in managing solid wastes, the refuse and garbage generated by communities every day, and historically disposed of in landfills.

The commission has been following the activities of Minnesota counties in addressing the solid waste problem, as it considers measures needed to help communities develop new alternatives to landfills. Topics to be addressed at the hearing include: local financing of solid waste resource recovery facilities; the difficulties of border counties in assuring the flow of waste to new resource recovery facilities; and responsibilities of cities and counties in regulating collectors of solid waste.

The Crookston hearing is one of several anticipated commission hearings on these issues.

Refuse Burner At Perham Gets Public Review

Open house at the Perham (Quadrant) refuse burner complex will take place Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. The facility is located in northeast Perham. The public is invited to tour what is officially known as the Perham resource recovery facility.

Two incinerators will be housed in the facility that will burn refuse supplied by Otter Tail county. This will in turn produce steam that will be sold to two industrial customers in Perham, namely Tuffy's and Land O'Lakes. There is also a backup 28-megawatt electrode boiler and a backup oil or gas-fired package boiler.

Otter Tail county has guaranteed a minimum amount of 75 tons and a maximum of 99 tons of refuse per day. The modern, state-of-the art incinerators will burn the refuse in a safe, environmentally acceptable manner. The facility will serve a regional area, lessening the problems created by refuse landfilling.

Quadrant is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Minnesota-Dakota Generating Co., which in turn is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Otter Tail Power company. Construction of the $6 million facility began in July of 1985. Tests have been ongoing this summer, and commercial operation is scheduled for August.

SHOOTING SPORTS is one of the relatively new programs available to young people enrolled in the 4-H club program. Evan Mapes and Neil Bugge are adult leaders for the project in Pennington county which has about 30 members enrolled this year. Mapes and Bugge received special training for the program which stresses safe handling of firearms, marksmanship and enjoyment of target shooting and hunting. Here one of the members enrolled in the program shatters a clay target (pieces visible above the tall tree at center of the photo) which has been tossed by a mechanical target thrower. Action was from a shooting session Tuesday evening at the Thief River rifle club range.

A HEARTY RECOIL from a 12 gauge shotgun gave this youngster a jolt as he tried his hand (and shoulder) at trap shooting Tuesday at the Thief River rifle club range. Shotgun training was part of the shooting sports project offered in the 4-H club program and which has about 30 young people enrolled this year. Adult supervision is provided in training for marksmanship, safety in gun handling, care of and respect for firearms and enjoyment of the shooting sports. Pennington county 4-H club members will be exhibiting their project work at the county fair which opens July 16 and continues through July 20 in Thief River Falls.

TRF City Council OKs Enterprise Zone Awards

company has grown from no employees three years ago to nearly 326 employees. He expects Arctco to be the biggest payroll in Thief River Falls in the next year or so, and production to be up to almost seven months of each year by next year. Arctco has with the acceptance of the employment property designation and the $257,267 in credits, reached the $500,000 limit allowed any one business under the program.

Tuesday night the city was informed that Falls Day Activity center has applied to the state for a charitable gambling license at the Lantern Restaurant and Lounge. Don Stewart, city planner and Jobs Inc. representative, but acting as a private citizen, asked City Attorney Bob Wurst whether state law limited the number of licenses an organization could have. He said he was aware of several organizations in Thief River Falls that wanted to get involved in charitable gambling, but were finding it difficult to find a place not already taken by organizations that have more than one license already.

Regulation of charitable gambling passed to the State Charitable Gambling Control board over a year ago. The function of city and county governments in approving licenses has been limited. The city could deny an application but it would not necessarily be denied by the state. If a city refuses to act it is considered approved.

Mayor Bob Carlson said he was not aware if a limit existed and suggested that if there was, the state should be the body to let an organization know. Since only a motion to deny the application could be offered to the council for action, the Mayor asked if anyone was willing to make the motion to deny the application for a license by the charitable organization. No motion was made.

Citizens of Thief River Falls could be paying more for garbage pickup by the end of the year. Future Fuel Inc. of Thief River Falls has notified the city that because of financial difficulties they need to raise the fee paid by the city for permission to dump its garbage at Future Fuel. The increase would raise the amount paid by citizens drom the present rate of $5.75 per month to $7.25.

Councilman Clayton Restad said the rate for the city would not take effect until August, and probably not take effect for citizens until Jan. 1, 1987. The difference could be made up by savings already realized by the Sanitation department this year.

Councilman Milan Borsheim did not like the idea of being forced to accept an increase when Future Fuel Inc. went into the business understanding the difficulties and having entered into a contract with the city at the current rates. But it was pointed out by other councilmen that rates at other landfills, Gentilly included, are much higher. They also pointed out that Future Fuel is a unique operation and has undergone operational changes and difficulties not anticipated because it is rather experimental.

No action was taken by the council and the item was tabled until the next meeting when a recommendation would be made.

Recently two city employees, one from the utilities department and one from the park and recreation department, were involved in accidents in which they failed to notify the police and left the scene of the accident. They were subsequently charged with leaving the scene of an accident. Councilman Kenneth Murphy advocated development of a safety program Tuesday night that would involve periodic testing of employee driving skills and set out rules and procedures for employees involved in accidents.

Councilman Don Liden asked why such a program would be necessary when state law tests everyone upon application for a driver's license and also requires reporting of all accidents. Employee accidents are not uncommon and have been handled well under state law so far. He pointed out that the only reason it was noticed this time was because there were two at the same time.

Mayor Carlson asked each department committee chairman to discuss the issue with the departments and gather their opinions on the subject.

Recent bids on repairs of the Thief River Falls dam have been rejected. The city council decided to reject the bids that were over $60,000 over projected costs and budget, relax specifications on time limits and liquidation damages, and call for new bids. City Engineer Dave Kildahl said he hopes by relaxing some of the specifications more bids will be made at lower cost estimates.

State law requires that the speed limits within trailer courts be 10 miles per hour. Concerns expressed by local residents to city council members that trailer courts in Thief River Falls did not meet state requirements has led to an ordinance reducing speed limits in public parks to 10 miles per hour also. According to council members the issue of speed limits in city parks had been discussed in previous years, but had not been acted upon.

The issue was recently raised at a public safety committee meeting when the city discovered that speed limits within trailer parks, not outside or abutting trailer parks, had to be 10 miles per hour unless the city decided to raise it by ordinance. A first reading and then adoption of the new ordinance placing the speed limit of city parks at 10 miles per hour was made Tuesday night.

In other news: a motion to approve the transfer of the Inter-city gas corporation franchise to Utilicorp. was accepted; a parade and fireworks permit was granted to the Jaycees of Thief River Falls for August 2 and 3; permits to have beer in Oakland Park by Bob Conlon group on July 9, and the Digi Key Corp. on August 9 was accepted with one nay vote from Councilman Murphy; a recommendation to join the coalition of outstate cities at a cost of $3,281 was accepted; a 1987 budget schedule was accepted despite delays by the city utilities department in preparing their budget; a resolution calling for the sale of $450,000 in 1986 street and utility improvement bonds was passed; and a progression raise for Ted Schmitz to level eight was granted.

Swimming will take place in the Franklin pool and will involve 12 lengths. The swimmers will start in waves to avoid congestion. A STRIKE TO the plate by Bemidji rightfielder Mark Runnigen and a tag by Bemidji catcher Corey Chwialkowski nailed Thief River Falls runner Corey Olson, who tried to score from second base on a single by Mike Bendickson in the second inning of Monday's American Legion baseball doubleheader.

Bemidji Sweeps TRF Legion Squad

It was a terrible night for the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team Monday as Post 117 lost a one-sided 15-2, 19-9 doubleheader to Bemidji.

Bemidji scored those 34 runs on 23 hits, 18 Thief River Falls errors, 14 walks and eight wild pitches.

Thief River Falls also lost the services of first baseman Jon Kragness, a senior from Newfolden who suffered a broken arm in a collision at first base in the first inning of Game 2.

Making it even more unpleasant was a game-long rain that fell during the nightcap.

This was the same Thief River Falls team that took the perennially strong Moorhead Blues into extra innings in both halves of a Wednesday doubleheader last week, losing a pair of one-run decisions. But Monday's performance was a step backwards as Thief River Falls' sorry showing dropped the Post 117 record to 8-13. Bemidji, featuring many of the same players that carried the Lumberjacks to the Minnesota state high school Class AA state baseball tournament finals this spring, went home with a 15-3 record.

Bemidji scored early and often. The visitors picked up a run in the top of the first inning in Game 1 when designated hitter Len Henry reached base on the first of those 18 errors and scored on a two-out double to left-center field. Two more errors — on the same play — put Jim Wynne on second base and he scored on a bad-hop single to right by Mark Runningen for a 3-0 headstart.

Nathan Ohman, Tim Knudson and Wynne had second inning RBI on a single, basses-loaded walk and a fielder's choice, respectively, as Bemidji doubled the margin to 6-0.

Kory Joppru walked, moved up on a wild pitch and infield ground-out and scored on a fielder's choice that produced an RBI for Kragness, making it 6-1 in the bottom of the second.

Only other Thief River Falls run crossed the plate in the third when Dean DuChamp led off with a walk, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on a two-out single to left by Joppru.

Meanwhile, Bemidji scored twice in the third on a walk issued to Corey Chwialkowski and back-to-back errors on balls hit by Ohman and Henry, then wrapped up the ten-run-rule conquet with an eight-run fourth inning. The inning featured four hits, including a two-run double by Runningen, three walks, an error and four wild pitches — including back-to-back throws by relief pitcher John Azure that scored runners from third.

Game 2 started with Kragness' mishap. Thief River Falls' regular first baseman, Kragness was reaching for a throw that came on the home plate side of the bag when Henry collided with him, causing the injury, which prompted an immediate trip to Northwest Medical Center and surgery that night.

Thief River Falls actually had a 2-0 lead in the nightcap when Chris Nelson drew a walk, moved to second on a walk issued to Joppru, went to third on a fielder's choice and scored a first inning run on a wild pitch.

Similar happenings made it 2-0 in the second as Bill Dicken drew a lead-off walk, Kevin Nelson was hit by a pitch, Corey Olson moved the runners along with a sacrifice bunt and a wild pitch scored Dicken.

But the bottom fell out on Thief River Falls in a seven-run Bemidji third inning when the first five batters all reached base and scored. The inning included three hits and three Thief River Falls errors. Henry had a two-run double and Bob Armin had an RBI single during the outburst.

Armin and Wynne had RBI singles in the fifth to make it 9-2, but Thief River Falls answered with a two-run single by Mike Bendickson in the bottom of the inning, an RBI double by Dicken and an error for a run and a 9-5 game.

That's as close as it got, though, as Bemidji scored five runs in both the sixth and seventh innings to make it a rout. There were four Thief River Falls errors in the sixth and two more in the seventh, along with a two-run double by Chwialkowski. It could have been even worse, but Bemidji coach Whitey Anderson was generous in his third base coaching duties, sending a couple of runners that were easily thrown out to finally end the embarrassment.

Thief River Falls is scheduled to host Grafton tonight (Wednesday) in a 6 p.m. doubleheader. Post 117 will participate in a five-team, round-robin East Grand Forks Invitational this weekend, drawing Audubon as a first round foe Friday at 4:30 p.m. Thief River Falls is also scheduled to play Saturday at 3 and 8 p.m. and Sunday at 6 p.m. Nest regular start for Post 117 will be Monday when East Grand Forks visits the fairgrounds.

EGF Teams Sweep Two Games From TRF Preps

Seventh inning runs lifted East Grand Forks teams to a pair of wins over Thief River Falls Monday in a split Babe Ruth Prep baseball doubleheader for 13-year-olds at the fairgrounds diamond here.

A six-run rally in the top of the seventh gave the East Grand Forks Reds an 11-7 come-from-behind victory in Game 1, and a pair of runs in the top of the seventh snapped a 4-4 tie to give the East Grand Forks Orioles 6-4 decision in Game 2.

Thief River Falls had a three-run first inning and a four-run fourth for a 7-5 lead going into the seventh inning of the first game. Steve Sabo was 2-for-4 for the losers, who were out-hit 8-7. Dale Martell and Troy Coltom had doubles and Kyle Evenson had a triple. Ryan Bakken, one of several Thief River Falls pitchers used in the game, was tagged with the loss.

Held scoreless through three innings, the East Grand Forks Orioles turned a scheduled five-inning second game encounter into a seven-inning overtime contest by scoring once in the fourth and three times in the fifth. Thief River Falls had scored twice in the first and pushed single runs across the plate in the second and third innings.

Charlie Lundgren was 2-for-4 in the second game loss, collecting a double and two RBI for Thief River Falls. The hits were even at six apiece. Robert Canfield was the losing pitcher in a route-going performance.

Thief River Falls had five errors in both games. The East Grand Forks Reds had three errors in Game 1, and the East Grand Forks Orioles had four errors in Game 2.

The losses dropped the Thief River Falls 13-year-olds to 7-11-1 for the year. They were scheduled to visit Roseau today (Wednesday) for a doubleheader beginning at 12-noon.

DNR Says Minnesota Mallard Numbers Reach All-Time High

A census by the Department of Natural Resources of Minnesota's spring population of waterfowl has revealed an all time high for mallard ducks.

Roger Holmes, DNR Wildlife Chief, said the Department has been conducting a waterfowl breeding population count since the late 1950's. Counts are made by flying the same aerial transects each year at an altitude of 100-200 feet. The transects are spaced 16 miles apart from Iowa to the Canadian border.

"This spring's expanded census gives us a population of 275,000 mallards in the census area," said Holmes. "Water is abundant and grassy cover got a good start with the early spring, so we should have an excellent hatch. The outlook for a high population of mallards during the fall hunting season is very bright in Minnesota."

He noted, however, that drought conditions have plagued the prairie provinces of Canada in recent years, resulting in an overall decline in the North American continent's mallard population.

"We have been fortunate in Minnesota," said Holmes, "but there is great concern among U.S. and Canadian waterfowl specialists about the status of the total mallard population on the continent."

In contrast to the increase in Minnesota's mallard population, blue-winged teal numbers registered a 35 per cent decline.

"Last year we had 301,000 breeding blue wings in the state," said Holmes. "The decline this year means there are fewer than 200,000, and for the first time on record, the number of breeding mallards exceeds that of blue-winged teal."

He said the drop in teal numbers may be related to gunning pressure resulting from the special early teal seasons authorized in some states and to the use of the "point system" utilized by some states, giving low point numbers to teal.

Holmes said those conducting the duck counts in Minnesota also reported seeing more wood ducks and Canada geese than ever before.

He said the census data for canvasback, redhead, scaup and ring-necked ducks are still being analyzed and figures on these species will be released available.

Thief River Falls pitchers were charged with eight wild pitches and Bemidji pitchers had seven of them in the twinbill that wound up as a 15-2, 19-9 sweep for the visitors.

TRF VFW Wins Pair Of Games

Out-hitting the Grand Forks Reds 28-6, the Thief River Falls VFW baseball team swept a Tuesday afternoon doubleheader with 14-2 and 10-0 five-inning wins on the fairgrounds diamond.

Thief River Falls, whose VFW team of 16-year-olds pretty much doubles as the American Legion squad for 18-year-olds, lost a June 25 American Legion doubleheader to the Grand Forks Royals 13-0 and 12-11 in eight innings. The Reds serve as Grand Forks' American Legion B team. The Royals are the Grand Forks A team.

Six players had two hits each in Thief River Falls' 14-2 first game win, including Dean DuChamp, Chris Nelson, Joel Swanson, Mike Anderson, John Azure and Bill Dicken, who had three RBI.

Thief River Falls out-hit the Reds 14-4 in scoring four times in the first inning, seven times in the second and three times in the fourth for the ten-run-rule decision.

Winning pitcher Jason Lane threw four innings of two-hit shut out ball, walking three and striking out two. Mike Bendickson made rare mound appearance in the fifth and surrendered two runs.

Corey Olson, a member of the Middle River-Marshall County Central High School baseball program who commutes to play VFW and American Legion baseball in Thief River Falls, was given the pitching assignment in Game 2 and responded with a two-hit, five-inning shutout, walking just one and striking out five.

Thief River Falls again collected 14 hits en route to a 3-0 second inning lead, a 6-0 third inning edge and a 9-0 fourth inning advantage before closing out the ten-run-rule decision with a fifth inning run.

DuChamp, Nelson, Dicken and Mike Swanson had two hits for the winners. Swanson, a member of the Thief River Falls Babe Ruth Prep team for 13-year-olds, filled out a nine-man Thief River Falls roster when Bendickson left because of a job commitment.

The sweep put the Thief River Falls VFW record at 7-7 for the year. The team will be in Karlstad Thursday for a 6:30 p.m. game.

JASON HALL (right) of Fremont, CA caught his first northern while fishing with his cousin John Hall (left) of Thief River Falls. Jason's first northern weighed in at 12 pounds and was 38 inches long. Jon also caught one, but not quite as big, weighing five pounds and 38 inches long.

NOTICE OF HEARING
BOARD OF ZONING APPEALS
CITY OF THIEF RIVER FALLS

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to Chapter 11 of the Thief River Falls City Code, that Country Acres Apartments, a limited partnership (Kenneth Berg, et al), has applied for a variance to the zoning regulations governing front yard setbacks. The property, located at 1912 - 2010 Greenwood Street, is legally described as Lots 4-7 in Block One of Country Acres Addition.

Granting of the variance request from the required minimum front yard setback of twenty-five feet (25') in the R-4 Multi-Family Residential Zone would allow the owners to construct two 96' x 26' garages at a zero foot (0') setback from their north property line.

Notice is further given that the Board of Zoning Appeals will hold a hearing on the variance request at 7:30 P.M. (C.D.T.) on Monday, July 21, 1986, in the City Council Chambers, City Auditorium. All persons wishing to comment on the variance request shall have the opportunity to be heard at this time. Persons who wish to submit written comments prior to the hearing or who have questions should address them to the Office of the Director of Community Development, City Auditorium, P.O. Box 528, Thief River Falls, MN 56701, or telephone 218-681-2500.

Memoriam

In loving memory of Ralph Wold who lost his life July 12, 1982:

I walked along the mountainside
And thought of you today.
I took a walk along the beach
And searched for things to say.
So many nights I lay awake
And wish that you were here —
So often I will cry for you
And want you to be near.
If only I could understand
What happened on that day.
I want someone to tell me
Why you had to go away.
I cannot seem to comprehend
What time has planned and dealt
I wish that it could ease the pain
Of every heartache felt.
Oh, how I hope that you can know
You're missed so much each day
I hope you know I love you
In a very special way.

Sadly missed by his wife Betty and children, Sheila, Renae, David and Denise. 1t55p

NOTICE OF HEARING JOINT PLANNING COMMISSION ROCKSBURY-PENNINGTON-THIEF RIVER FALLS

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to the Rocksbury Township Two Mile Zoning Ordinance, that David and Mary Morken have applied for a variance to the zoning regulations governing side yard and rear yard (shoreland) setbacks. The property, located in the 1400 block of Oakland Park Road South, is legally described as Lots 2 and 3 in Block Three of Riverwood Subdivision.

Granting of the variance request from the required minimum side yard setback of twenty feet (20') in the Urvan Rural Residential District would allow the owners to construct a single-family residence eighteen feet (18') from their south lot line. Granting of the variance request from the required minimum rear yard setback which is seventy-five feet (75'), since this is riparian shoreland abutting the Red Lake River, would allow the owners to construct the proposed residence sixty-eight feet (68') from the high water mark.

Notice is further given that the Joint Board of Rocksbury Township, Pennington County, and City of Thief River Falls will hold a hearing on the variance request at 6:30 P.M. (C.D.T.) on Monday, July 21, 1986, in the Office of the Director of Community Development, basement of the City Auditorium. All persons wishing to comment on the variance request shall have the opportunity to be heard at this time. Persons who wish to submit written comments prior to the hearing or who have questions should address them to the Office of the Director of Community Development, City Auditorium, P.O. Box 528, Thief River Falls, MN 56701, or telephone 218-681-2500.

Farm Law Project Seeks To Assist Troubled Farmers

On July 1 the Minnesota family farm law project (MFFLP) opened its doors to Minnesota's family farmers. The farm law project is a new program which will provide legal assistance to financially distressed family farmers throughout the state.

The farm law project is a statewide cooperative project of three of Minnesota's established civil legal services programs — Southern Minnesota regional legal services, Mid-Minnesota legal assistance, and Northwest Minnesota legal services — and the Farmers' Legal Action Group (FLAG). The project is funded by an appropriation from the Minnesota legislature as part of the bipartisan family farm legal assistance act, through a contract awarded by the Minnesota supreme court.

legal services offices in Mankato, Winona, Worthington, Marshall, St. Cloud and Moorhead, and a statewide support office located in St. Paul, as well as through some contracts with private attorneys.

A statewise toll-free information and referral number (1-800-233-4534) has been extablished to provide referrals to local project offices and other agencies as appropriate. Basic information on farm legal and financial problems will also be provided through the toll-free line. To be financially eligible for services, a farmer must (1) be a Minnesota resident who is farming or has farmed within the preceding 24 months; (2) have a debt-to-asset ratio greater than 50 per cent; (3) have a reportable federal adjusted gross income of $15,000 or less; and (4) be unable to retain legal counsel.

Because the amount of funding is limited, priority for services will generally be given, within statutory requirements, to cases involving foreclosure on family farm homesteads; repossession of equipment, livestock or crops necessary to a viable farm operation; and cases to secure the release of farm income or the extension of credit to pay family living expenses and farm operating costs.

The Minnesota family farm law project, in cooperation with FLAG, will also coordinate workshops and seminars for lawyers, farmers and other interested persons, develop materials on farm law, and provide support and back-up for lawyers and advocates representing farmers.

Family farmers in Minnesota are facing a financial and legal crisis of unprecedented proportions. The Minnesota family farm law project is a first step in responding to the critical legal needs of Minnesota's financially distressed family farmers.

Farmers or others in this area interested in knowing more about the project can call or write to Northwest Minnesota Legal Service, P.O. Box 714, Moorhead, MN 56560, phone 1-800-452-3625.

Anderson Earns Army Promotion

Arlen G. Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Anderson of Thief River Falls, has been promoted in the U.S. army to the rank of specialist four.

Anderson is a radar operator at Fort Bragg, N.C., with the 4th Air Defense Artillery.

IT'S A DIRTY JOB, BUT SOMEBODY'S GOT TO KNOW HOW TO DO IT.

It takes a strong National Guard and Reserve to help defend our country. Keeping that strength at its peak takes training — one weekend a month and at least two weeks a year. Fully trained and ready, the Guard and Reserve make up one-third of our nation's defense.

So when your employees ask you for time off to train to keep our defenses at their strongest, give them that time. They'll be getting a tough job done, and you'll be getting back a better employee.

Summer Meals Served In Minn. By USDA Program

Summer vacation doesn't mean the end of nutritious school meals for children in low-income areas in Minnesota. Nearly 16,000 children are eating healthy meals and snacks in schools, playgrounds and parks this summer through the USDA's summer food service program.

Approximately 25 sponsors will serve nearly 1 million breakfasts, lunches, suppers and snacks to children at more than 200 sites throughout Minnesota this summer.

The summer food service program is targeted to school-age children in areas where poor economic conditions exist and where there is a high concentration of working mothers. In Minnesota, the program is administered by the USDA food and nutrition service, Midwest regional office.

Any child up to age 18 and some handicapped persons over 18 may receive meals.

Monroe Woods, Midwest regional administrator, reports that sponsors received nearly $1 million to operate the program last year in Minnesota.

Sponsors who prepare their own meals are also eligible to receive surplus commodities such as cheese, butter, dry milk, honey, rice and flour from the USDA.

Other USDA food and nutrition service programs include food stamps, women, infants and children program (WIC), national school lunch, school breakfast and various commodity food programs. USDA spent more than $20 billion nationally on food programs in 1985.

U.S. Rep. Says Bill Will Help MN Rural Areas

Rural and small-town Minnesota will benefit from a supplemental appropriations bill signed into law by President Reagan yesterday, Congressman Arlan Stangeland (R-MN) said today.

"The bill includes three specific provisions which will help our area. It scraps the President's plan to sell federal power marketing administrations which provide low-cost electricity to Moorhead, Ada and other local communities," the congressman said. It also provides badly-needed funds for disaster relief and the Commodity Credit corporation. This is vital for our embattled farmers."

"A third advantage in the new law is that it delays for a year a fixed-price system for making capital improvements in Medicare hospitals.

"It often costs a great deal more to install a new operating room or intensive care unit in a rural clinic or hospital than to make the same improvements in an urban facility," Stangeland said.

The one-year delay will allow Congress to seek advice from hospital administrators and health-care professionals about the best way to restructure the funding system for improving Medicare hospitals.

"Your health is one of your most vital concerns, and it would be wrong to rush into a fixed-price system for improving hospitals if that plan hurts clinics and hospitals in our area," the congressman added.

Entertaining Value With Alaska Canned Salmon

The spring entertaining season with all its festive occasions from Easter to graduations and weddings is here. For parties and open houses, a few good appetizer recipes can make the host role simpler and more enjoyable. Cheesy Salmon Appetizers made with Alaska canned salmon is such a recipe.

Easy to prepare, the appetizers are baked in a large rectangle and cut into individual squares for serving. The filling is a savory mixture of canned salmon, Swiss cheese, green onions and olives, spread on pie pastry.

Delicately flavored Alaska canned salmon is available in several can sizes and varieties to suit all needs. The different varieties of salmon vary mainly in color and oil content. Canned Alaska Pink salmon is an especially good value now and works well in recipes from soups, salads and entrees to hors d'oeuvres such as Cheesy Salmon Appetizers.

Cheesy Salmon Appetizers

1 can (15-1/2 oz.) or 2 cans (7-1/2 or 7-3/4 oz. each) Alaska Pink salmon
2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1/2 cup chopped green onions
1/3 cup mayonnaise
1/2 teaspoon oregano, crushed
Dash bottled hot pepper sauce
Pastry for (9-inch) double crust pie

Drain and flake salmon; combine with cheese, green onions, mayonnaise and seasonings. Roll out about 2/3 of pastry to line bottom of 15-1/2 x 10-1/2 x 3/4-inch baking pan. Spread salmon filling over pastry. Roll remaining pastry 1/8-inch thick; cut into 1/2-inch strips. Arrange diagonally over salmon filling. Bake at 375° F. 18 to 20 minutes or until pastry is golden. Cool slightly. Cut into squares to serve. Makes about 3 dozen appetizers. Recipe can be halved using 1 can (7-1/2 or 7-3/4 oz.) salmon and 9-inch square or 7 x 11 x 2-inch baking pan.

Stand In The Gap

God told Ezekiel: "I sought for a man... who should build up the wall and stand in the gap before me and for the land... but I found none." (Ezekiel 22:30)

And God still looks for people who will "stand in the gap" and build up the wall on which He can build His kingdom. He looks for good people, people of vision, those who will not sell their souls for a mess of potage, nor sacrifice their birthrights on the altar of expediency in the marketplace.

Pompey, Roman general and statesman, put it: "It is a small matter that I should move forward and die. It is too great a matter that I should take one step backward and live."

Following the bloody years of the Civil War, the name and character of Gen. Robert E. Lee never faltered nor waivered. This great general stood taller in defeat than most generals ever stood in victory.

One day a group of men approached him about heading a business enterprise of questionable nature. They offered him $50,000. "You will have to do nothing. All we want is the use of your name," they told him.

Gen. Lee stood tall behind his desk: "Sirs, my name is the heritage of my parents. It is all I have, and it is not for sale."

The gaps are all around us. People, men and women, go and stand!

Satisfying Stuffed Potatoes Dieter's Delight

Potatoes are a perfect diet food. Their natural taste goes with a wide range of flavors and seasonings. Packed with essential vitamins and minerals, totally fat-free and with only 100 calories in a medium-sized potato, health conscious Americans are rediscovering this versatile vegetable.

Washington State's Russet potatoes are world famous. Ideal growing conditions and constant attention from planting through harvesting results in consistently high-quality potatoes. Washington Russets are high in solids and low in water. That means they bake up fluffy and flavorful.

Calorie Conscious Stuffed Potatoes combines the baked potato contents with a sprightly mixture of dill-flavored cottage cheese, chives, parsley and tomato. The stuffed potato shell gets a final sprinkle of Parmesan cheese before being heated through.

Calorie Conscious Stuffed Potatoes

2 medium Washington Russet potatoes
2/3 cup low-fat cottage cheese
1 tomato, chopped and drained
1/4 cup minced parsley
2 tablespoons minced chives or green onions
1/4 teaspoon each salt and pepper
Dash dill weed, crushed
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

Scrub potatoes; pierce with fork. Bake at 400° F. 50 to 60 minutes or until tender. Remove lengthwise slice from each potato, scoop out pulp leaving a 1/4-inch shell. Mash pulp; stir in cottage cheese, tomato, parsley, chives, salt, pepper and dill weed. Fill shell with cottage cheese mixture; sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake at 400° F. 15 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Makes 2 main dish servings.

Each serving has approximately 250 calories.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

"The minimum wage," Ronald Reagan said in 1980, "has caused more misery and unemployment than anything else since the Great Depression."

Truer words were never spoken. It would be difficult to name any one law or program that has done more to deter economic growth and impeded job creation than the minimum wage.

The purpose of the minimum wage is noble — to raise the standard of living for poor working people. But as happens so often with well-intended social programs, the downside more than cancels out the benefits. The advantage of a few is purchased by the disadvantage of many.

There is a direct correlation between the minimum wage and the unemployment rate. Every 10 per cent increase in the minimum wage results in a 1 per cent increase in unemployment. Though some benefit from increased wages, others pay through forfeiture of any wages at all.

Perhaps most important, the jobs eliminated by the minimum wage are of the low-skill, entry-level variety that are so badly-needed to relieve the plight of the hardcore unemployed. Many of these are in service industries, such as fast food shops and retail stores, that traditionally provide the first employment experience for our nation's youth and immigrants from other countries.

In addition to eliminating jobs, the minimum wage has been a major factor in inflation, forcing employers to raise product prices to keep pace with rising labor costs in that deadly cycle we once knew so well.

Critics point out, correctly, that the current minimum wage of $3.35 per hour has not been raised since 1981; and the minimum wage workers have lost about 20 per cent of their purchasing power. But it is also true that stability of the minimum wage has been a major factor in bringing inflation under control, and also spurring the rapid job creation we have experienced in recent years.

If the minimum wage were adjusted to keep pace with inflation since 1981, it would lose their jobs and the inflation cycle would be off and running again.

Rather than raise the minimum wage, we should enact President Reagan's proposed youth differential for disadvantaged kids in ghettos and other areas of high unemployment. The National Conference of Black Mayors supports it, not because they want to undercut the wages of poor working people, but because they want inner city kids to get that all-important first job.

The liberals who are demanding an increase in the minimum wage regard themselves as friends of the poor. But with friends such as these, the poor have no need of enemies.

MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

Why would you buy a new dishwasher without a warranty when, for the same price, you can buy a product with quality and service guaranteed in writing? You face the same choice when you're looking for a new home. You can get more for your money by checking the quality of the home and the integrity of the builder. Just ask to see the builder's warranty.

A written warranty can help ensure quality construction in a new home.

There are builders who are willing to go another step toward customer satisfaction by backing their construction with a written warranty and protection against major structural defects for 10 years. They belong to the Home Owners Warranty Program, and will offer you a copy of the HOW Builder Limited Warranty to examine before you buy. Their insured warranty incorporates HOW Approved Standards which outline the construction standards to which the home must be built.

—Builders are evaluated for HOW membership in three important areas: financial stability, competence in construction, and customer service. After acceptance into the program, builders are periodically monitored by trained HOW construction investigators for their adherence to industry standards.

cancer answers

Q. I heard on the news that the F.D.A. has approved interferon for doctors to prescribe to treat cancer. Does it work for all kinds of cancer? My dad has colon cancer.

A. The Food and Drug Administration has approved one form of interferon for use in treating hairy cell leukemia, a rare cancer of the blood.

Research testing various forms of interferon against many types of cancer has been going on since the late 1970's. So far, interferon alone has not been effective against most types of cancer, including cancers of the colon, breast, and lung.

Advanced colon cancer patients who received interferon did not have remissions from their cancers. They also did not feel better or live longer than other similar patients who did not receive interferon.

Interferon may prove more useful in combination with chemotherapy agents. Researchers are continuing to test these combinations.

Q. Our son is getting chemotherapy for leukemia. We've heard of special summer camps for children with handicaps. Is there any kind of camp open to children with cancer?

A. In Minnesota the American Cancer Society and Courage Center are sponsoring a special camping program again this summer for children with cancer. The dates are August 17-22 at Camp Courage on Cedar Lake near Maple Lake, Minnesota.

Campers can go horseback riding, swimming and boating. They can also learn videotape photography, study nature and try a variety of handcrafts.

Specially trained young adult counselors will supervise the campers, and a pediatric oncology nurse will be on hand at all times.

Any child or teenager, ages 6 to 17 who has or has had leukemia, any other form of cancer or serious hematologic disorder, is welcome. Families are asked to pay a $12 fee for registration and insurance. All other costs for campers from Minnesota will be provided by the American Cancer Society, Minnesota Division.

For more information and registration forms, write the Camping Department, Courage Center, 3915 Golden Valley Road, Minneapolis, MN 55422 or telephone (612) 588-0811.

Come Take A Look

It isn't very often area people will have an opportunity so close at hand to see an assemblage of top quality cattle as they will at the Minnesota All-State Holstein show at the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls Friday and Saturday.

The Red River Valley Holstein club is hosting the state show with nearly 300 cattle pre-registered for entry in the parious classes of judging. Jerry Muzzy of Thief River Falls, district chairman for the show, has been working with assistance from area Holstein producers for a long time in preparation for the event. We're sure that Jerry, his assistants and the cattlemen who will be hauling their prize animals up to 400 miles to take part in the show would appreciate public interest demonstrated in the event.

The number of cattle entered will tax the capacity of fairgrounds buildings to house them all. Since many of the animals will be in production, special arrangements have been made to provide milking system and bulk storage tank to handle the milk produced. This is only one of the many contingencies which have to be considered in show sponsorship.

Junior show for members of the association under 21 years of age will be held on Friday, followed by one of the feature attractions — the Golden Gopher Classic sale at 7 p.m. Anyone who believes a cow is just a cow should attend at least part of the auction for an eye-opening experience. Cattle have been consigned from five states and two Canadian provinces and buyers are expected from coast to coast.

Motels in the city are filling rapidly if not already filled for the event as dairymen will begin arriving as early as Wednesday morning to prepare their animals for the show. Most breeders are also receptive to discussion about their cattle, and persons who wish to learn more about the dairy business could have some interesting one-on-one discussion by visiting the fairgrounds on Wednesday or Thursday before the show.

The area dairymen working to host the state event deserve a lot of credit for their courage, perseverance, enthusiasm and hard work. Support from the community and its organizations has been excellent so far, according to show officials, and a display of public interest at the show and sale itself would be appreciated.

Go Slow Attitude

"Look beyond today's bitter harvest of failing farmers and you'll find a new crop emerging of young seedlings rooted deep in the soil. Look closely because these new farmers are not like their most recent predecessors. They spurn the 'get big fast' approach for one that says 'easy does it.'

"This go-slow attitude prevails in spite of the fact that the investment cost of starting or expanding an operation is lower now than at any time in the past 10 years. Gone are the days when landowners held auctions for the right to lease their ground — good tenants are in the driver's seat today. So are potential buyers of equipment and land."

These are the first two paragraphs of a lead article in "Farming" magazine, a financial agricultural business journal published by Johnson Hill Press, Inc., at Fort Atkinson, WI.

Agricultural economist Dannl Klinefilter of Texas points out several ways young farmers can capitalize on today's opportunities as follows:

(1) Custom farming. With a lot of land falling into the hands of farm managers, and fewer farmers able or willing to buy or lease land, custom farmers are in demand. "I think a young farmer could go out and buy some cheap, big equipment and make some good money custom farming right now. After two or three years of that, he may be in a position to rent or buy."

(2) Leasing. There are many opportunities right now to lease ground at unusually low prices. Klinefelter cautions that you must be very thorough and conservative in analyzing leasing and rental candidates. "In some cases, using a marginal-cost, add-on analysis — where you are concerned only with returning variable costs plus a return to management — is acceptable. In other situations, you can't do that because some return to fixed costs is needed. This depends a lot on the size of operation you are running and what kind of ground you are considering renting."

(3) Owning. Some land could pay for itself plus return a profit. That means the land has to do better than cash-flow itself. "The thing you have to remember with today's land market is that it is an extremely local situation. That means you can hear just about anything you want to hear about land prices. It's very important right now to be objective," cautions Klinefelter.

(4) Part-timing. The trend to part-time farming is growing tremendously. According to USDA figures, over 75 per cent of all farmers had off-farm income.

Young farmers today are telling us there's also another way. It's the approach that says, "Pencil in a profit before you buy. Don't worry about being the biggest farmer in the valley." They don't believe in rolling the big dice. And chances are they'll be around to explain that philosophy for some time to come.

Borrowed Nonsense

A man reading the classified ads in a bar left after several drinks and drove to the address on one of the ads. "I read your ad about wanting someone to accompany you to Florida," he said to the person answering the door. "I wanted to tell you that I can't go."

Astute Observations: Lots of folks are forced to skimp to support governments that won't....It is harder to be poor without complaining than to be rich without boasting....One of the most common mistakes in life is to believe that others know more about the problem than you do....Some people are willing to pray for more than they are willing to work for....Working mothers are guinea pigs in a scientific experiment to show that sleep is not necessary to human life.

While roughing it with his son on a camping trip, the father cupped his hands, scooped water from the lake and put it to his mouth.

"You're not going to drink that are you?" the boy asked.

The father swallowed first, then replied: "Of course, son. We're roughing it. We'll be drinking lake water."

"I didn't mean the water," the son explained. "I meant the tadpole."

A manufacturer confided to a friend at lunch that he was losing his best salesman because he was diagnosed as having an incurable illness. "That's terrible," the friend said. "I can understand why you feel so bad. What does he have?" The manufacturer signed: "North and South Dakota and the west half of Minnesota."

Information you never needed to know: A man's beard contains about 15,000 hairs, grows an average of five and one-half inches a year and covers about a third of a square foot of his face, according to a maker of shaving products. The shaving process removes about a pound of hair every 16 years. During an average lifetime a man will spend about 3,350 hours removing 27½ feet of whiskers from his face.

A tourist crawled through a fence to pick some wild flowers in a pasture when he noticed a large bull grazing nearby.

"Is that bull safe?" the tourist asked a passing farmer.

"Well," replied the farmer, "I'd say he's a lot safer than you are."

To The Editor:

Fairness is a popular watchword, but it may be tricky to achieve and quirky in its consequences. The Supreme Court was trying to be fair when it struck down a New York state law that gave employment preference to certain veterans, namely those who served in wartime and were residents of the state when they entered the military. The job preference was not granted to war veterans who later became residents.

In its majority opinion, the court said the state's residency requirement for this benefit violated other veterans' right to travel and right to equal protection under the law. Three of the nine justices disagreed, reasoning that a state certainly could award medals to the state's veterans or erect memorials to those who represented the state in the military. Thus, the dissenters wrote, it was "hardly irrational" to give returning wartime veterans "a more tangible and useful" expression of gratitude.

One can see both sides of this argument. Local pride in the courage and patriotism of native sons and daughters is rooted in antiquity. On the other hand, as the high court majority reasoned, the war veterans who entered service from points outside New York's borders did just as much for the state as did the preferred vets.

A disturbing delemma, but one settled conclusively by the court ruling. Now, the state of New York and other states with similar laws presumably will either extend job preference points to all war vets who are current residents, or they may choose to deny the preference to all.

However, the court's decision may have repercussions. Let's begin with the matter of the long-expired state bonuses paid veterans for war service, in some cases ranging up to $1,600 for an individual veteran. Bonuses for Vietnam service were paid by 18 states. Twenty states did the same for veterans of the Korean conflict. Twenty-four states paid bonuses to veterans of World War II. All those bonuses were restricted to pre-service residents. Will we now see a flood of retroactive claims, based on the decision? Some states use the pre-service residency test to restrict other state-supported benefits, such as special tuition rates at state universities for the dependents of deceased veterans. Will such restrictions stand?

On the recent restrictions going into effect at all U.S. Veterans Hospitals, dated July 1, 1986, all the patients will be expected to pay for hospital expenses. There are certain exemptions: service-connected pensioners, WW I veterans and mental disability patients. These regulations contradict the principles and the positions of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion.

My good comrades in the VFW-Military Order of the Cooties, will have to search for a new slogan for their organization. Before July 1 they proudly proclaimed that their purpose was "to keep our veterans smiling in beds of white." The Cooties did an excellent job in the VA hospitals. This week there is nothing to smile about in the hospitals. What a cruel joke, but typical of the Reagan administration.

In any future war, the states probably will dismiss the idea of granting any special rewards for war veterans as too costly. They may no longer be able to show gratitude in a substantial way, and at the same time be fair. Fairness is a tough, popular watchword.

Good Mattress May Aid Wedded Bliss

Can a comfortable bed help you stay married longer?

The American Innerspring Manufacturers says a comfortable innerspring mattress can't guarantee wedded bliss, but there's no doubt that the quality of rest you get makes the difference between a happy and productive person and a grouch.

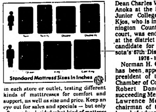
If you and your spouse have been waking up on the wrong side of the bed lately, maybe it's time to think about buying a new innerspring mattress. Or, if you are soon to be a newlywed, these hints might help in the choice of that first, very important purchase of a bed.

Size counts, so choose wisely. Most people are opting for the queen or king size mattresses today because they offer enough space for comfortable, restful sleep. A standard double bed only gives a couple 26 1/2 inches of sleeping space per person — just about the same room a baby has in a crib. Since sleep scientists have determined that most people move between 20 and 40 times per night, a larger bed gives each person more "elbow room."

Test for proper support. When lying on your back, try to slide your hand under the small of your back. A good, firm innerspring mattress should allow for the space made by the natural arch in your back. You should be able to slide your hand in, but not too easily.

Mattresses that don't provide this correct kind of support for the spine cause back aches in two ways: by causing the back muscles to work when they should be resting, and by putting strain on the spine itself.

Take your time. Plan to visit at least a few different stores whose reputations you trust, to get a feel for prices and delivery and installation charges. Take your time in each store or outlet, testing different kinds of matttresses for comfort and support, as well as size and price. Keep an eye out for sales and specials — but only after you've decided what kind of mattress you want. In other words, don't shop for price alone; otherwise, you might end up with a mistake you'll have to replace — and that's no bargain.



Standard Mattress Sizes in Inches

ASR

Take your mate. Although you may want to do the initial comparison shopping yourself, the final decision should be made by both of you. After all, your idea of comfort may differ from your mate's. The time to find this out is before the delivery truck arrives, not after.

Don't be embarrassed to lie down on the display mattresses — that's why they are there. You should also try out your usual sleeping position on each of the models you're considering.

Don't break up a good thing. A premium innerspring mattress and steel wire box spring are designed to work together. An innerspring mattress should last nearly 70-percent longer if it's paired with a steel wire box spring. In fact, a worn box spring can ruin a new mattress in as little as six months. Putting a new mattress on an old box spring could severly limit its supportive capabilities.

REPORT

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

The state-funded interest buydown program is assisting a growing number of Minnesota farmers.

As of June 23, the department of commerce had processed 5,814 applications for operating loans at reduced interest rates. This amounted to a total state contribution of $16,689,343 to provide low interest loans.

The program was designed to provide affordable loans for farmers with some financial difficulties. Without this state help, many farmers would have been unable to plant this spring.

Participants in the interest buydown program may obtain reduced interest operating loans, because the state pays a portion of the interest charges. The farmer must also pay part of the charges, with the lender absorbing the remaining interest costs.

The original buydown appropriation of $5 million was quickly depleted by the overwhelming response of lenders and farmers. Governor Perpich, in an unusual move, ordered that the program remain available, counting on an appropriation by the 1987 Legislature to cover the shortage.

The governor's decision, which was supported by leaders of the House and Senate, was justified because of the severe economic conditions in rural Minnesota. The exceptional response from Minnesota lenders is clear indication of their willingness to cooperate with the Legislature and to do their part to keep Minnesota farmers in business.

Farmers and bankers are reminded that the program is still open, and applications are still being accepted. Any farmers wishing additional information should contact their local banks.

STRAIGHT TALK

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

About 12 per cent of our population is over 65. Traveling throughout the southeastern part of the United States, you see many of these retirees enjoying the "good life." Florida, California, Texas, Arizona and the other sun-states are loaded with "snow birds" every winter. These snow birds fly back north each spring and stay around until fall's cold and snow hit, again. Some, who don't have the money, do endure a 12-month climate wherever they happen to live.

Many of these over-65 Americans receive social security retirement payments, including cost of living adjustments that have exceeded the true increases in the retired's cost of living. The question is no longer one of fairness in our social security system, but avarice, just another word for greed. This greed could pay off in a "war" between the generations which all senior citizens would lose.

At one time social security receivers were supported by 10 to 15 tax paying workers. The taxes were not adequate to pay the benefits, but our people died at an earlier age, and most of the taxed never received any benefits. There was a time when eligibility at 65 was a joke because our American life span was 62. Today the life span of a new born baby girl is about 78 and a baby boy is about 74.

For years benefits were enlarged and there were adjustments for increases in the cost of living, based on a bread basket of purchases by younger Americans. Younger Americans do not have the same consumption patterns as older Americans. Younger Americans use up cars, clothes, homes and furniture faster. Developing a cost of living based on new cars, new clothes, new homes, new furniture and other purchases, during our periods of high inflation, for older Americans who didn't buy a new car, new clothes, new homes with 17-18 per cent mortgages, developed higher than deserved cost of living adjustments.

I am not saying that older Americans could not spend that extra money on a bigger and better life, but their improved living standard was at the expense of social security trust funds and caused the social security taxes, once just $30 per year, to become larger than income taxes.

Because we are an aging nation, there are fewer workers supporting each retiree. From the 10-15 in 1935, we are now down to 3-5, and that "tax paying support group" is getting smaller each year. By 1990, there will be only two workers for every retiree.

Older Americans have a number of pressure organizations lobbying against fairness in social security payments. The groups threaten to politically kill any politician who says that the old have been getting more than their share of the economy's benefits. Grey power let's congressmen know what will happen if fairness is legislated.

The problem is simple. The retirement, medical, housing and other subsidized activities are burdens imposed on future generations. Our national debt and ongoing commitments to the elderly are so burdening that even loving young Americans will find that their sacrifices to the old will be so burdening that they will enjoy a lesser standard of living for what they see as ungrateful senior citizens unwilling to concede anything in efforts to reduce the national debt and the national deficit they helped create.

Younger Americans are just beginning to understand fully what older Americans have done to them. They are beginning to recognize the magnitude of living standard reduction they must endure. They will react. That reaction will significantly reduce benefits and programs for the elderly. That's why a sound solution to this problem is a joint re-evaluation of social security benefits based on the real cost of living increases of the 1970's and 1980's. The senior citizen pressure and lobbying groups must stop fighting and start cooperating before extreme problems cause extreme reactions.

Illustrating the problem and reaction, a landlord offered a rent discount to get some younger tenants in his apartments. One senior citizen sued, claiming discrimination, and won. A young couple countered with litigation claiming senior citizen discounts and benefits are discriminatory. This expanding class action suit evidences that we have a latent "battle of the generations" ahead unless senior citizens are willing to understand and be reasonable.

That's Straight Talk!

Counting Our Blessings

THINGS MY MOTHER TAUGHT ME

Any day of any month is a great time to salute our mothers. Here's a tribute to mom that really takes flight. It's from Captain Anne E. Martin, one of the first female flight examiners in the U.S. Air Force.

There may be a natural inclination to assume independent, accomplished individuals don't need their moms. According to Captain Martin, however, and the 12,000 doctors, lawyers, homemakers, teachers and others who entered the Wisk/Good Housekeeping "Things My Mother Taught Me" contest—without mom, they wouldn't be the happy, successful people they are today.

Captain Martin pilots one of the world's largest jet cargo planes, commands her own unit for the U.S. Air Force and still recognizes the importance of one basic tradition—the relationship between a mother and daughter. As the National Grand Prize Winner of the Wisk/Good Housekeeping "Things My Mother Taught Me" contest, Captain Martin has expressed her gratitude to her mother, the person who followed and furthered her every advance, from first step to first flight.

Writing a moving 50-word essay on the influential role her mother played in her life clinched Captain Martin the National Grand Prize. She won $10,000 for herself, a legendary Blackglama mink coat by Antonovich International for her mom, Donnie H. Martin, and a trip to New York for them both. They will also be featured, along with 50 state winners, in the June issue of Good Housekeeping magazine.

"By her example, I saw the importance of setting and reaching goals. She worked her way up from secretary to high-level manager and was an ideal role model for me. I realized that she succeeded with a smile, by not putting too much stake in what other people think and by enjoying life to its fullest."

"Mom taught me a lot of survival techniques — strength through determination and how to be successful in a man's world. She allowed me to make my own decisions, and to make my own mistakes. Her best advice was to 'be prepared to meet your goals, never think otherwise.'"

The Martins may be an inspiration to us all. Their relationship symbolizes what must be the most rewarding part of motherhood: The delight and warm satisfaction that comes from watching your children grow into productive, secure adults.

Career Opportunities

PRIVATE CLUB MANAGEMENT

A new video tells how to get into the often lucrative field of private club management.

Private clubs: No longer the sanctum of just the very wealthy or socially prominent, these days they're places that provide recreational and social activities for just about everyone. That's why the career opportunities abound in management positions at America's private clubs.

Of the 11,800 clubs in operation today—country clubs, military clubs, athletic clubs, university clubs, yacht clubs and private luncheon clubs, to name a few—8,500 are "total facility" clubs. These have a club house, facilities for food and beverages and, in the case of country clubs, golf courses and other recreational facilities as well as many planned programs for members. Each type of club requires a manager with special interests and skills—a luncheon city-club manager, for instance, may have to be familiar with the scholarly arts. Your first position in club management is often as a worker, supervisor or assistant in a multiple facility country club operation.

There are some 1,150,000 full and part-time employees at these clubs with a total payroll of $3.8 billion annually. The total membership is 7.5 million, but when you include spouses and children, you have some 14 million people using their clubs' facilities each year.

With all this interest and record of expansion and growth, the man or woman who chooses club management as a career today, armed with the proper skills and aptitudes, can look forward to a rewarding future. Most club managers get their start by graduating from a four-year program at a school or university with programs in club management. The next step for many is to get professional accreditation from The Club Managers Association of America (CMAA). This designation signifies a person of professional achievement in the highly demanding and competitive private club management field.

The Club Managers Association *has prepared a 12-minute video*tape called "Club Management: A Lifetime Journey." It follows the steps a young club manager must take while preparing for certification. For free brochures on the film or careers in club management, you can write to CMAA, 7615 Winterberry Place, Bethesda, MD 20817.

State Holstein Show and Sale at Thief River Falls . . .

Embryo Transfer Brings $24,000 At State Sale

WINNING TOP HONORS as the senior champion female and grand champion female at the Minnesota state Holstein show in Thief River Falls on Saturday was Reynolds-Hope Q U Mona-Twin, owned by Karl Mueller of Elginvue Farms of Arlington. Mueller, who also won the junior champion title and a number of class honors, was named the premier exhibitor of the state show.

TOP SELLING ANIMAL at the Golden Gopher Classic Holstein sale in Thief River Falls Friday evening was a calf yet to be born. A syndicate of breeders put together solely to purchase the embryo transplant calf bid $24,000 to out-bid another similar syndicate organized for the same purpose. Consignor of the calf was Pembrook Lane Ltd. of Willow River, represented in the front row by (left to right) Julie Pemberton, her mother Grace and Brother John. Also in the front row are M. Howard Swenson (right) and Jeff Snyder, representing the buying syndicate. Left to right in the back row are Paul Tande, state chairman of the Minnesota Holstein association and representative of the contending bidder; John Hager and Mike Snyder, auctioneers from Waukon, WI, and Baraboo, WI. Successful bidder was given a choice of one of seven embryo transfers due August 12 or one of five due November 15. John Pemberton holds a picture of the dam of the yet-to-be-born calves, a cow ranked 10th nationally with production records of 28,695 pounds of milk and 1,036 pounds of butterfat as a two-year-old and 34,220 pounds of milk and 1,425 pounds of fat in her second lactation. Both are 365-day records.

Karl Mueller of Arlington showed the grand champion female, Daleford Holsteins of Thief River Falls had the grand champion male and Pembrook Lane Ltd. of Willow River sold the top-selling animal when the Minnesota state Holstein show and sale were held in Thief River Falls Friday and Saturday.

A syndicate of breeders formed to purchase the top-selling animal paid $24,000 for the embryo transfer calf, receiving the option to choose one of seven transfers from breeding to Whittier Farms Ned Boy and due August 12, or one of five transfers from breeding to Lekker Valiant Royalty and due November 15. Pembrook Lane Ltd. is owned by Grace Pemberton, her daughter Julie and son John.

Dam of the yet-to-be-born calf is Pembrook Pete Democracy, ranked number 10 as premier performer in the United States. As a two-year-old in 365-day test she produced 28,695 pounds of milk and 1,246 pounds of butterfat, increasing that record to 34,220 pounds of milk and 1,425 pounds of butterfat in 365 days in her second lactation.

Second high selling animal at the Golden Gopher Classic sale Friday evening was Ralma Rotate Cheer, consigned by Ralph Schmitt of Ralma Holsteins at Rice. Born May 20, 1983, she has an incomplete record of 16,475 pounds of milk and 668 pounds of butterfat in 254 days of her first lactation. Her dam is rated Excellent 90 with Excellent mammary and has a top production record of 25,593 pounds of milk and 940 pounds of butterfat. The cow was purchased by Mark and Sue Titera of Bagley for $10,000.

In total 42 head were sold for $93,375 at the sale, averaging $2,223. Apart from the top two animals, the remaining 40 head brought $59,375 for an average of $1,484.

Elginvue Farms of Arlington, owned by Karl Mueller family, won the premier exhibitor award at the state show Saturday by gaining the greatest total number of points for placing of animals exhibited. Included were the senior champion and grand champion female and the junior champion female. The latter was a red and white Holstein, one of very few among the more than 200 entries.

Premier breeder award went to Bill Eustice of Exodus Holsteins at Hutchinson. That award was based on points won at the show by animals which were produced within the breeder's own herd.

Best uddered cow of the show was shown by Conrad Kvamme of Orbit Farms of Little Falls and his daughter, Kathy Garrison. Kvamme also had the best bred and owned entry with the same animal.

Daleford Farms of Thief River Falls, owned by James R. Muzzy and sons, had the grand champion male of

John Conlee

Conlee Has Long String Of Album And Single Hits

Country singer John Conlee, who has been contracted to replace Johnny Lee in a pair of dual concerts with Sylvia Friday evening at the Pennington county fair in Thief River Falls, has a string of singles, albums and award nominations that would do credit to most top entertainers.

Beginning with "Backside of Thirty" in November of 1976 through "Old School" recorded in September of 1985 and "Harmony" released in January of this year, Conlee has had 26 single releases and 12 albums available. Among the hit singles have been "Rose Colored Glasses" in 1978, "Before My Time" in 1979, "Miss Emily's Picture" in 1981, "Busted" in 1982, "In My Eyes" in 1983 and a number of others during that 10-year period.

In 1983-84 Conlee was ranked fifth overall among top artists (males, females, duos and groups) behind Alabama, Kenny Rogers, Hank Williams Jr. and Ricky Skaggs.

Conlee and Sylvia will be featured in separate concerts twice on Friday evening. The first pair will begin at 7 p.m. and the second set at 9:30 p.m. Tickets at $11 or $9 are available in advance from Larson Music company and Godfather's Pizza in Thief River Falls or will be available at the gate on the night of the performances.

Rodahl Selected Pennington Co. King Agassiz

David Rodahl of route 2, Thief River Falls, has been selected Pennington County King Agassiz for 1986-1987. Dave, his wife Barb, and their two children, Mandy and Michael live on a farm northeast of Thief River Falls. This year's coronation will be held Friday at the Pennington county fair during the second showing of the John Conlee and Sylvia program. Will Dekkers, Red River Valley King Agassiz and present Pennington County King, will be on hand to crown Dave and to present him with a western hat, the traditional King Agassiz symbol.

David Rodahl.

Following graduation from St. Cloud state university, Dave has been an active farmer raising small grains, alfalfa, corn, sunflowers and beef cattle. He also is on contract with the Northwest Regional Development commission working on a biomass cash crop production project with the University of Minnesota, Northwest Experiment station and the department of energy.

Rodahl, whose selection as King Agassiz is based on his involvement in agriculture and community affairs, is a member and vice president of Our Savior's Lutheran church, chairman of the Thief River Watershed Development association, serves on the Thief River advisory board to the Red Lake Watershed district, and is a member of the Minnesota Crop Improvement association.

As the Pennington county King, Dave will represent Pennington county at the Red River Valley winter shows. Dave and Barb will also have the opportunity to participate in the "Emerging Leadership" program that includes exposure to state government, university functions, private businesses and courses directed toward developing leadership skills.

Outstanding Senior Citizens Recognized

Outstanding senior citizens for 1986 are Mrs. Harold Peterson and Constance M. Driscoll. The two Thief River Falls citizens will be recognized on Senior citizens day 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Pennington county fair in the curling building.

Outstanding senior citizens are chosen because of their voluntary community involvement after reaching the age of 65. Judges look for; diversification in accomplishments; variety of services; quantity of accomplishments; number of active years; quality of activities, especially innovative services; amount of service performed after 65; and total scope of activities. Nominees must also be Minnesota residents and over 70 by county fair time. Both seniors have an outstanding list of volunteer service in the community.

Mrs. Harold Peterson, was born in Starbuck, MN, in 1902. She has five children. At one time she was a country school teacher and also a clerk in a general store, but now she spends her time helping others. Before she turned 65 she was recognized as a founder of the American Legion auxiliary in Starbuck and was presented service awards from the Women's Missionary Federation and American Legion auxiliary.

After turning 65 she continued to participate in a variety of programs, most of which involved music. The friend who nominated her wrote, "Mae has a great musical talent which she has used since she was 12. We have been fortunate to have her for 25 years, playing the organ or piano, organizing groups, accompanying them, and transposing music so it was easier to sing."

Music is obviously an important part of her life. Since turning 65 she has continued to involve herself in music with chapel choir, women's chorus, sub-organist at Trinity Lutheran church, the weekly hymn sing at the CNC unit of Northwest Medical center, and others.

She has contributed her time and efforts to meals on wheels. As a coordinator she planned routes, arranged for special diets and en-

Nine candidates will compete for the title August 2 at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium. Winner will advance to the Miss Minnesota pageant.)

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Debra Sue Erickson is no stranger to competition. She has competed in piano contests, forensics, typing contests and a couple of pageants, winning the title of Miss Webster in Webster, WI, and placing as second runner-up in the Miss T.E.E.N. Wisconsin competition in 1984.

DEBRA ERICKSON still considers playing piano a hobby, although she has taken lessons for the past 13 years and been accompanist for elementary through college concerts and performances. The daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Carroll Erickson, she will play "Capriccio, Opus 116, Number 3" by Brahms as her pageant talent number.

Debra, 20, is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Carroll Erickson of Thief River Falls, a 1984 graduate of Webster (WI) high school and has completed her second year at Bethel college in St. Paul. She is five feet 10½ inches tall, weighs 123 pounds, has blonde hair and hazel eyes. For her pageant talent number, she will play Brahms "Capriccio, Opus 116, Number 3" on the piano.

Born in Milwaukee, WI, Debra moved with her Baptist minister father and family to Humboldt, IA, Denver, CO, Rothsay, MN and Webster, WI, before coming to Thief River Falls last October. She graduated in the top 10 scholastically at Webster high school where she was involved in band, choir, swing choir, jazz band, forensics, Future Business Leaders of America, annual staff and pep band and served as accompanist for virtually all school concerts from elementary through high school.

She has studied piano for 13 years, including the past year with Mrs. Carolyn Nordquist at Bethel college, and has taken four semesters of music theory, history and literature at the St. Paul school. She was also a member of the women's choir which toured to California and Arizona and chosen to play piano during the tour. She has played flute for seven years and served as accompanist for the swing choir and jazz band at college. In high school she was a student band director and competed in three state piano contests, winning one second and two first places.

As Miss Webster she appeared in 14 area parades and even participated in the fishing season opener festivities with Wisconsin Governor Earl. At Bethel she was selected to serve as St. Lucia during the Christmas festival reception and to be accompanist at welcome week activities.

Hobbies include playing the piano, reading the Classics, racquetball, bowling, table tennis, travel and sightseeing and trying recipes for fancy desserts. She has one sister, Marcia, who is 13. She intends to continue her liberal arts education at Bethel and earn a degree with a major in communications and minors in business and music.

couraged other volunteers. Between 1979 and 1985 she was a member of the board for meals on wheels.

Some of her activities include: assisting with vacation bible school; participation in bible study; and taking Golden years groups to Halma, Goodridge, Viking, Oslo, Warren, and Newfolden with programs she planned and directed.

The nomination submitted by a friend also heralds her as friend also heralds her as a lady with passed a course in auto mechanics at the Thief River Falls AVTI.

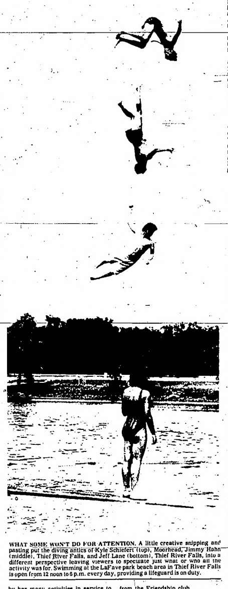
Constance M. Driscoll was chosen as another outstanding senior citizen. She was born in Fairfax, MN, May 3, 1912. She has two children and five grandchildren. Her church, St. Bernards in Thief River Falls, and ability to help others is important to her.

She belongs to several organizations, including the American Legion auxiliary, V.F.W. auxiliary, Lioness, Eagles auxiliary, meals on wheels, friendship club and area food shelf. She has performed several different functions in each, from driver to president. She is a willing worker to all.

The first sentence of the summary paragraph written about her by a friend states, "Connie is a quite neat lady who is always concerned about others." This is amply demonstrated by her many activities in service to others. She has been a volunteer for the blood bank, cancer society, concert association and Kidney foundation.

In recognition of her accomplishments she has received a life membership award from the American Legion auxiliary, the outstanding workmanship award from the American Legion auxiliary, the outstanding volunteer awards from Valley Home and Oakland park nursing home, and a county award from the Friendship club.

In a summary of Constance M. Driscoll, her friend writes, "She cares about people and is not afraid to show it in her quiet way. She is a person who is always ready with a helping hand, and I think is a very good candidate for Outstanding senior citizen."



WHAT SOME WON'T DO FOR ATTENTION. A little creative snipping and pasting put the diving antics of Kyle Schiefert (top), Moorhead, Jimmy Hahn (middle), Thief River Falls, and Jeff Lane (bottom), Thief River Falls, into a different perspective leaving viewers to speculate just what or who all the activity was for. Swimming at the LaFave park beach area in Thief River Falls is open from 12 noon to 6 p.m. every day, providing a lifeguard is on duty.

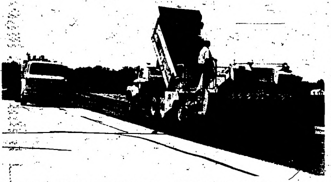
Dear Readers,
Studies indicate that in the U.S. a child may view 10,000 or more deaths on TV from birth to 20 years of age. In cartoons, an actor may be killed and resurrected several times in the same sequence giving a distorted impression of the finality of death. Parents should explain to the young that once a person dies he or she does not return to this life.
Respectfully,
Belmont Funeral Home
LARRY R. BELMONT



FAST MOVING OPERATION. Hi-Way Surfacing, L.G. Moorse and Sons of Marshall, put an asphalt and water emulsion down, covered it with sand and packed it down almost in one motion at the Thief River Falls airport Wednesday. Resealing of the runway began Tuesday and will be completely finished early next week, weather permitting. After the sand is packed and has dried for 24 hours it is all vacuumed up. The only thing to slow the fast-moving operation Wednesday was getting sand and oil ready.

Meet Candidates Picnic Planned In Roseau County

A "Meet the Candidates Picnic" is being planned by the Roseau County Independent Republicans for Sunday, August 3 from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the Sheldon Erickson farm near Badger.

The event will provide an opportunity to meet I-R slate of candidates, including gubernatorial candidate Cal Ludeman, Secretary of State candidate Myron Nysether, Congressman Arlan Stangeland, Minnesota House District 1-A candidate Sheldon "Snooky" Erickson of Badger and Minnesota Senate District 1 candidate Jim Butler of Salol.

In addition to candidates' speeches, a picnic supper, booths, balloons and entertainment will contribute to an old-fashioned rally atmosphere for the family. Tickets for adults and children will be available at the I-R booth at the Roseau county fair and from I-R county board members.

The Erickson farm is two and one-half miles west of Badger on County Road 2, then one mile south. Roads will be marked the day of the picnic.

Agriculture And The Seaway Are Conference Topic

A two-day conference linking the agricultural communities of northern and central Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana and northern Wisconsin to the world Port of Duluth-Superior is scheduled for September 26 and 27 at Duluth, according to the planning committee for the four-state conference. The conference is scheduled for both youth and adults interested in gaining a better understanding of the Great Lakes Seaway and Port of Duluth-Superior and international agricultural trade establishments with Upper Midwest production.

The Port of Duluth-Superior is located at the western end of the world's greatest freshwater inland lake connected to the 2,000 mile St. Lawrence Seaway system. The largest trade through the Duluth-Superior port system is agricultural trade.

Conference seminars will include "Grain To Foreign Markets — How Do We Get It There?," "Rebuilding World Grain Markets" and "The Seaway, Its Promise For The Future."

This conference is for agriculture producers, agribusiness leaders, community leaders, extension and vocational agriculture personnel, Future Farmers of America, 4-H members and students interested in agriculture trade, policy and careers and others from Montana, North Dakota, Wisconsin, or Minnesota who have an interest in agriculture and how it relates to the Seaway and world markets.

For more information about the agriculture Port of Duluth-Superior conference, and how to register, contact the St. Louis county extension service in Duluth, Minnesota, at (218) 726-7512, or the conference coordinating committee by calling (toll free) 1-800-432-2884 at Duluth, on how you can participate.

Small Business May Challenge State Regulation

Starting August 1, small businesses may be able to recover part of their costs if they successfully challenge arbitrary state government actions which they feel adversely affect their operations.

State Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls says that a new law passed by the 1986 Legislature recognizes the difficulties that small businesses sometimes face with certain state regulations or laws which impact negatively on their businesses.

"In the past, small businesses had to accept government decisions because they could not afford the costs of challenging them," Sparby said. "Beginning August 1, small businesses will be able to recover court costs and legal fees under certain conditions. The federal government has a similar law."

To qualify, a business must have a maximum of 50 employees and annual revenues of less than $4 million. If a civil action or a contested case against the state is won by a small business, and it is shown that the position of the state was not substantially justified, the business will be awarded court costs, attorney and other fees associated with the case. Tort actions are not included in the provisions of this new law.

Sparby said the new law will apply to any civil action or contested case pending or commencing on or after Aug. 1, 1986.

First In Telephones

According to Northwestern Bell Telephone company's publication "Megabits", Minnesota led all 50 states in percentage of households with telephones in 1985. According to a report from the Federal Communications commission, based on data collected in the census bureau's current population survey, the national average was 91.7 per cent and Minnesota a 96.1 was the only state above 96 per cent.

Other high-ranking states were Connecticut, 95.8; Maryland, 95.7; Iowa, 95.6; Massachusetts and Nebraska, 95.3; Pennsylvania, 95.1; and North Dakota 95. Northwestern Bell operates in four of the leading states — Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and North Dakota — and in South Dakota, which showed 92.9 per cent penetration.

The figures represent an average of responses to a question asked three times in 1985 of a nationwide sample of 58,000 households. The question: "Is there a telephone in this house-apartment?" The average of the three responses must be treated with some caution. For example, when the question was asked last November, Minnesota registered only 95.3 per cent of households with telephones, and five other states tied or exceeded that level. But a year ago in March, Minnesota showed 97.1 per cent penetration and led the pack.

The report also shows percentage of households with telephones by income level for March 1985. For the fifth percentile and below, 70.7 per cent of the households had telephones. For the 95th to 100th percentile in income, penetration was 99.2 per cent. The report is entitled "Telephone Penetration and Household Characteristics" and is available for sale from International Transcription Services at 202-857-3800.

It's The Law . . . Isn't It?

Considerable discussion has been heard lately regarding state law which requires drivers to have proof of insurance in possession. Most of that discussion has been to the effect that on a scale of one to 10 for stupid laws, this one must rate at least a nine.

The assessment appears to be about right. Not that the intent of the law is bad, understand. It is entirely proper that motor vehicle owners be able to provide proof of having the insurance that the state requires them to have. The trouble results from careless wording which causes legitimate confusion.

"Every driver shall have in his immediate possession at all times when operating a motor vehicle evidence that insurance covering the vehicle is in effect," the law states. "On demand of a peace officer, an authorized representative of the department of public safety, or an officer authorized by law to enforce the laws relating to the operation of motor vehicles on public streets and highways, the driver must produce proof of insurance in the form of a valid insurance policy or an identification card issued by an insurer."

To that point the law appears quite clear. Persons who read it and wish to comply with it would expect to either carry their insurance policy in their vehicle (it might be a little bulky to stuff in the waistband of your shorts) or to carry an identification card from the insurance company (if the insured's company actually issues such a card).

Carrying the actual insurance policy is the main complaint about the law's stupidity. A policy is too bulky to conveniently carry on one's person, and frequently covers more than one vehicle. It is a valuable document which should not be shuffled around from one vehicle to another where it is subject to damage or loss. For that matter, a vehicle involved in an accident when proof of the policy would most likely be requested by a peace officer, may well be severly damaged or burned. It would be unwise to have your insurance policy in the glove compartment of your car which burns, follows your boat down a ramp into a lake, falls through the ice or is stolen. If your wife drives one car, a child another and you a third, do you draw straws as to who gets to carry the policy?

Realizing this, the writer of the law continued on as follows: "No person shall be in voilation of this section if the person provides the required proof of insurance to the officer within seven days or to the court on or before the date set for appearance." (Nothing is indicated as to what the court appearance would be for, but presumably it would be for failure to produce the evidence of insurance — or maybe for some violation which led a law enforcement officer to question insurance in the first place.)

The law further states: "The commissioner of public safety may suspend the license of any operator who violates this section."

What we have here, in four sentences of the same section, is a law that says (1) we must have evidence of insurance in our immediate possession and (2) present it on demand to anyone authorized to ask for it, but that (3) we can wait a week to give it to him or her or until a court appearance; but if we don't comply, (4) we may lose our license to drive.

What could be clearer than that?

What is the answer? This is what we would suggest. Contact your agent and ask him or her for company-issued identification cards with your policy number for as many drivers or vehicles as covered by your policy. If he or she can't supply you, write your insurance company's name and policy number on a slip of paper and put it in your purse or wallet or your glove compartment(s). Keep your policy in your safety deposit box or other secure area as you always have. Count on having a week or more to produce the actual document if it becomes necessary. And ask your legislator to get the law re-worded at the next session so you don't have to go through the hassle of trying to interpret it in the future.

Next thing you know the state will pass a seat belt law that requires use but has no penalty for non-compliance. That would probably beat a nine rating on the stupid law scale.

A Publisher's Viewpoint...

Following comments are from Bob Cary editor of the Ely Echo:

Last month at least three newspapers in Minnesota ceased publication. Presumably they fell victim to the economy, the decline of rural populations, and other factors.

The time of the two newspaper town has become a rarity. Economically, it is no longer feasible to have two separate newspaper staffs compete for advertising and duplicate news, even in the largest of cities.

With the passing of last week without a publication, The Ely Minor lost its legal status. Minnesota law requires that a legal newspaper be published no less than 50 times a year.

Competition for any newspaper does not just come from other newspapers. Competition comes from old community habits...from lack of awareness...and, at its worst, not answering the needs of the communities the newspaper serves.

And there's the rub.

When a newspaper neglects the needs of communities it serves, the newspaper becomes humdrum. And not a vital part of the growth of the area.

There's a bit of the "which came first, the chicken or the egg" problem. In order for a newspaper to improve its news coverage, expanded advertising sales have to result in revenue to offset the expense of salaries for news coverage. Advertisers, in turn, want larger circulation than many newspapers have to offer. The historical result became the advent of "shopping guide" publications, apart from newspapers. The "no-hassle" answer to the issues which newspapers have to deal with: the issues which are the backbone of community growth.

Without an active town newspaper, life isn't quite that simple. It usually takes only one time of being stepped on by some official to concede that newspapers, whether weekly or daily, are an important source of news on government at all levels.

There are two jobs most publishers dream about: being a millionaire and running a newspaper for a hobby, or, if no millions are in the future, just publishing a shopping guide without the hassle, demands and expense of news coverage.

Which finally brings me to a funny (from a publisher's point of view) story. If it's happened once, it has happened at least 180 times in my tenure at the Echo. There's a request for a photographer or a reporter at an event. "We'll even give 'em dinner," the requester says.

"Please don't," is now my reply. Just be ready for the photographer or reporter when he or she arrives. The subscription and advertising rates would have to be raised very high for the Echo to be able to afford to pay people to sit down and eat on the job. If that Echo person has to wait 15 minutes for someone to get ready for them, that time will show up on the payroll sheet.

Yep, it would be a lot easier to just run a shopping guide, and ignore the news. No responsibilities for the growth of the community. No bother with taking the wrong side on a controversial issue. No responsibilities other than distributing the advertising news.

Borrowed Nonsense

Boy: "I don't believe anyone ever did."

To The Editor:

Thank you, to all the people of Thief River Falls, from the University of Minnesota medical schools in Minneapolis and Duluth. Through your very successful Thief River Falls United Way campaign, you supported important research projects into the causes and cures of kidney disease with a contribution to the Minnesota Medical Foundation.

Our researchers depend upon the contributions of friends like you to support their "start-up" grants. These are special grants, funded for one year, that give researchers an opportunity to test a new, innovative idea about the causes and cures of disease. Each quarter, a committee of our medical faculty and other practicing physicians review proposals from researchers. About half of the proposals submitted are able to be funded.

That is especially why your contributions are valued. Our hope, of course, is that each new discovery brings us closer to understanding the mysteries of disease and improving the medical care available to all citizens of Minnesota.

You helped us move closer to that goal, and we thank you.

Sinerely,
-s- David M. Brown, M.D.
Dean
Professor of Laboratory Medicine and Pathology and Pediatrics
University of Minnesota Medical School

To The Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all law enforcement officers (sheriff, deputies, highway patrol and city police) from Pennington county and the surrounding counties on the concern and care they take when severe weather is in the area.

It is a comfort to know they are out there during those times, watching the weather, so that they can give us early warnings before severe storms hit.

It can't be an easy job being out there at those times. So again, I'd like to say thank you and may God bless you all.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Avis M. Frazer

NW Bell Receives Citation For 'I'm OK' Program

Northwestern Bell has received the President's citation for private sector initiatives for its "I'm Okay" senior citizen reassurance program in Minneapolis.

Approximately 7,000 elderly and disabled people are currently involved in the "I'm Okay" program in Minnesota which is sponsored by Northwestern Bell. Under the program, residents living in 65 apartment buildings and senior citizen high-rises place signs on their doors every evening to indicate that they're "okay." Every morning, they remove the signs. The doors are then checked each morning and evening by a resident who serves as a volunteer checker. If a card is not replaced or removed, the volunteer tries to contact the resident by phoning or knocking at the door. Should that fail, the caretaker on duty is summoned.

While the program is simple in concept and design, it provides psychological reassurance and emotional support to elderly and disabled individuals living alone in a common residence.

There have been a number of cases where the program has proved to be a lifesaver. Flakne recalls the night a south Minneapolis woman suffered a stroke while sitting in her armchair. Her card was not out at 10 p.m. check, and after there was no response at her door, the "I'm Okay" checker called the caretaker. The woman was sitting in her chair, unable to move. Her daughter and emergency medical service were called. She is fine now and is grateful that she did not have to wait hours or days until someone discovered her.

Further information on the "I'm Okay" program is available from Northwestern Bell at (612) 344-5121.

The East Grand Forks A's were seeded No. 2, followed by No. 3 Crookston Gold, No. 4 Crookston Blue, No. 5 East Grand Forks Blue Jays, No. 6 Red Lake Falls and No. 7 Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola Bottling.

Games originally scheduled today (Monday) have been moved to Tuesday when the East Grand Forks A's will play Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola Bottling and the East Grand Forks Blue Jays take on Crookston Blue in 8:30 a.m. tournament-openers, while Crookston Gold plays Red Lake Falls at 11 a.m. Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods receives a first-round tournament bye.

Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods will take on the East Grand Forks Blue Jays vs. Crookston Blue winner at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. A pair of games at 4 that afternoon will match the East Grand Forks A's vs. Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola Bottling and the Crookston Gold vs. Red Lake Falls winners and losers.

Play continues Wednesday.

Top two finishers advance to the Lake Agassiz District tournament July 18-20 at East Grand Forks, where they will be joined by two representatives from the Lake Agassiz North Sub-District, which includes Warroad, Roseau, Baudette, Williams and Sprague, Man.

TRF Babe Ruth Teams End Regular Season

Pepsi-Cola Bottling and TG Sporting Goods changed places Thursday in regular season-ending Babe Ruth baseball action at Crookston.

Throughout the year, the Pepsi-Cola Bottling squad, staffed mostly by 14-year-olds, found winning difficult, while their Thief River Falls counterpart, TG Sporting Goods, manned mainly by 15-year-olds, compiled an impressive record.

But Thursday, Pepsi-Cola Bottling beat Crookston Gold 9-6, while TG Sporting Goods fell to Crookston Blue 4-3.

Corey Poole scattered four hits and five walks to pick up the Pepsi-Cola Bottling pitching win, and also went 2-for-3 at the plate in a seven-hit attack by the winners. Adam Lane had a double and four RBI for the winners.

Crookston Gold had five of the game's seven errors.

Losing pitcher Dean DuChamp permitted just one base hit, but TG Sporting Goods still lost a 4-3 game to Crookston Blue. DuChamp struck out six and walked seven and was also 2-for-2 at the plate for the losers, who had just four hits themselves.

Crookston Blue was charged with four errors; TG Sporting Goods had two.

Pepsi-Cola Bottling takes a 6-13 record into the Lake Agassiz South Sub-District tournament, scheduled this week at Crookston. TG Sporting Goods is 15-5.

TRF 13-Year-Olds Lose Two Games At Roseau

Roseau snapped a tie with a run in the bottom of the seventh inning for a 12-11 win in Game 1, then added an 8-5 victory in Game 2 Wednesday for a Babe Ruth Prep baseball doubleheader sweep over the Thief River Falls 13-year-olds.

Thief River Falls produced those 11 first game runs on just four base hits — two of them from Robert Canfield, who was 2-for-3, walked once and scored two runs. Roseau had eight hits. The errors were even at four-apiece.

Roseau spotted Thief River Falls a 2-0 headstart in the top of the first inning, but came back with a run in the bottom of the inning, then scored four more in the second and once in the third for a 6-2 edge. Both sides scored single runs in the third and three runs in the fifth to maintain a 10-6 spread. Thief River Falls came up with five runs in the top of the sixth for an 11-10 lead, but Roseau tied it in the bottom of the sixth and won it in the seventh.

Mike Swanson was the losing pitcher.

Thief River Falls' base hit production fell to three in Game 2, and Kyle Evenson had two of those in three at-bats in the five-inning affair. Roseau had five hits. Both sides had three errors.

Roseau scored twice in the first inning, doubled the margin to 4-0 in the second and doubled it again to 8-0 in the third. Thief River Falls scored two runs in the fourth and three runs in the fifth inning.

Troy Coltom was the losing pitcher.

Thief River Falls' record fell to 7-13-1 with the double setback. The Thief River Falls' 13-year-olds will take a week off as a Lake Agassiz all-star team is assembled with players from Thief River Falls, Crookston, East Grand Forks and Roseau to compete in the 1986 Babe Ruth Prep state tournament in St. Paul this weekend.

Regular season play resumes Wednesday, July 23, when Thief River Falls hosts Roseau in a 12-noon doubleheader.

Russell's Bar remained unbeaten in the Thief River Falls Women's Slow Pitch Softball League Wednesday, but the Division I leaders went into extra innings before beating Hair Dynamics 8-5 in a doubleheader opener.

It was a 5-5 tie through the regulation seven innings, but Russell's Bar broke it open with three runs in the top of the eighth. Dorene Larson homered for the winners. Kari Hanson was 3-for-4 for the losers and Brenda Russell played a strong game in center field, registering six putouts.

Russell's Bar stretched its record to 13-0 by beating Rainbow Nursery 7-2 in Game 2.

American Legion-Arcticwear was also a doubleheader winner, beating Wilson Brothers 4-2 and Purdy's 10-0.

Hardees stopped Purdy's 8-2 as Sandy Orr homered and Jan Milliard pitched six innings of shutout ball.

Legion Schedule

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team is scheduled to wind up its 1986 regular season slate of games this week with three single 7 p.m. outings — tonight (Monday) at home against East Grand Forks, Tuesday at Halstad against Norman County West and Thursday at Crookston.

Games against East Grand Forks and Crookston will determine Thief River Falls' positioning in the Ninth District Class AA playoffs July 24-27 at Crookston.

A six-team, double-elimination affair, the Class AA Ninth District tournament pairings are determined on a North and South Sub-District arrangement, with East Grand Forks, Crookston and Thief River Falls grouped in the North, while Moorhead, Fergus Falls and Detroit Lakes make up the South trio. In earlier playoff seeding-counting meetings, Thief River Falls beat Crookston 6-4 but lost to East Grand Forks 9-8.

Moorhead is the likely top seed in the South, but Fergus Falls will have to be reckoned with. Southpaw Dave Johnson pitched a no-hitter last Monday, striking out 13, to lead Fergus Falls past Detroit Lakes 7-0.

"Johnson completely handcuffed us," Detroit Lakes coach Mitch McLeod told Ralph Anderson of the Detroit Lakes Tribune. "He struck out 13, walked only two and our only players who hit the ball hard were Roy Campbell and Mark Nodsle."

Detroit Lakes, 5-8 with the loss, dropped an earlier 4-3 decision to Fergus Falls.

It was Johnson's first no-hitter, and the first no-hitter for a Fergus Falls American Legion pitcher since Bob Roers blanked Thief River Falls in 1984. Johnson has struck out 27 batters in 20 innings this summer.

East Grand Forks is the defending Class AA Ninth District American Legion baseball champion.

Fergus Falls Squabble

Mike Carroll's recent decision to resign as head hockey coach and head baseball coach at Fergus Falls Community college actually dates back to something that happened in April, according to Gary McVey, sports editor of the Fergus Falls Journal.

Back in May, the 13-member board of directors of the Fergus Falls Hockey Association fired Carroll as manager of the Fergus Falls Fairgrounds Ice Arena. McVey reports that six directors voted for firing Carroll, five voted to retain him and two abstained from casting ballots.

Carroll, according to McVey, liked Fergus Falls and wanted to stay, but he and his wife and two children are moving to Red Wing, where Carroll has been named to manage the Red Wing Ice Arena. Carroll also has applied for the position of head hockey coach at the University of Wisconsin-River Falls.

In commenting on his being fired as arena manager at Fergus Falls, Carroll told McVey: "The really hard thing about the meeting was that they couldn't tell me why. Basically, there were six or seven volunteers who didn't like me and it was either they go, or he goes. They wanted a puppet, not a manager."

It was also reported that there was friction between Carrol and Tim Cullen, head hockey coach at Fergus Falls High School. Carroll told McVey he had "real problems" getting along with Cullen.

Roger Eberle has subsequently been signed as manager of the Fergus Falls arena and Dave Balfour has been named the new head hockey coach and head baseball coach at Fergus Falls Community College.

Hockey Seniors In Sections 7-8 Meet At Baudette Arena

A group of seniors from the high school graduating class of 1986 from Sections 7 and 8 will be matched Saturday, July 19, in a challenge hockey game at the Baudette Civic Arena.

Headlining the rosters, compiled by Lake of the Woods High School hockey coach Doug Nosan, is Bemidji's George Pelawa, a No. 1 draft choice of the Calgary Flames in the 1986 National Hockey League amateur draft.

He will be joined on the Section 8 squad by Bemidji teammates Steve Peters and Darren Fossand; Scott Foster, Warroad; Chad Grassel, East Grand Forks; Paul Carlson, Rich Anderson, Todd Davis and Mike Hunter, Hallock; Mike Delorme and Rich Majores, Red Lake Falls; Doug Hasbargen, Indus; Darrin Mjoen and Brad Epema, Crookston; Keith Pieper, Mike Swentik and John Gillie, Lake of the Woods.

Section 7 roster features five players from sectional champion Hibbing, including Cal Husman, Joe Gaustad, Paul Gherardi, Pete Wohlers and Tom Passcussi. The will be joined by Tom Metsa, Brian Maki and Mike Callister, Virginia; Dave Hernesman and Bob Walstrom, Grand Rapids; Dean Treboyovich, Greenway; Pat Mismash and Dave Niemi, Aurora-Hoyt Lakes; and Travis Shold, International Falls.

Two of the four goalies on the Section 8 roster — Gillie, Carlson, Foster and Peters — will suit up for Section 7.

Tickets for the event, priced at $2 for adults and $1 for students, will be available at the door.

An afternoon cruise and fish fry will take place Saturday on the Leonard C, offering people a chance to visit one of the beautiful islands on Lake of the Woods. The cruise will leave the Rainy River Marina dock at 1 p.m. and return by 5 p.m. The trip is priced at $12.50. For reservations contact Nosan at 634-1938.

Legion Tops Grafton 15-5

Bill Dicken hit a two-run home run in the bottom of the sixth inning to close out a ten-run rule 15-5 Thief River Falls American Legion baseball win over visiting Grafton Wednesday.

Rain began to fall just as the game was completed, wiping out the second half of the scheduled doubleheader.

It wasn't a real exciting night of baseball, admitted Thief River Falls coach Mark Lundin. Grafton brought just a 3-16 record to Thief River Falls, including a 23-2 loss to Post 117 in the West Fargo Invitational earlier this summer.

But a less-than-inspired Thief River Falls performance, said Lundin, allowed Grafton to carry a 4-3 lead into the fifth inning before a pair of six-run Thief River Falls frames made it one-sided. Thief River Falls had scored once in the first inning and twice in the second before producing those 12 runs over the final two at-bats. Grafton had a two-run second inning, a two-run fourth and added a single run in the sixth.

Joel Swanson pitched the first four innings for Thief River Falls, but the win went to John Azure, who pitched the fifth and sixth. They combined on a three-hitter.

Thief River Falls collected 10 hits including 2-for-3 performances by Chris Nelson and Mike Anderson.

Grafton was charged with five errors; Thief River Falls played errorless ball.

A similar weather pattern had surfaced earlier in the week when rain began to fall on the second half of Monday Thief River Falls doubleheader with Bemidji. The two teams played through the second game rain though, as Bemidji completed a 15-2 19-9 sweep. Wednesday's rain came down harder, though, forcing the teams to scrap the nightcap.

Agassiz Wildlife Refuge Is Big On Water Management

by Ron Bell
Assistant Manager
Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge

Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge, administered by the United States Department of the Interior, occupies 61,449 acres in eastern Marshall County and is 11 miles east of Holt on Marshall County Road 7. The primary purpose of the refuge is to produce waterfowl and to maintain the area for the benefit of migratory birds. Water manipulation within the 40,000 acres of wetlands is the most important management tool used at the refuge.

The refuge wetlands comprise 65 per cent of the total land base and are subdivided into 18 impoundments or pools. The water level in each pool is individually regulated. This wetland complex may be visualized as a large spoked wheel with the 10,000 acre Agassiz Pool, the largest impoundment, being the hub of the wheel while the remaining impoundments are the spokes. The majority of the pools drain into Agassiz Pool.

Each winter the refuge staff reviews management objectives for each pool and establishes appropriate water levels for the upcoming year. For example, a strategy for a pool might be to maximize diving duck nesting habitat by flooding emergent vegetation such as cattail while the goal of another pool may be to encourage the growth of sago pondweed by dewatering or lowering the water. In either example, the primary reason for these strategies is to enhance waterfowl habitat. After these proposals are developed, they are submitted to a regional supervisor for his review and approval.

As spring temperatures rise and the snow melts, runoff begins to enter the refuge. The two primary sources of water entering the refuge are the Thief River from the north and the Mud River from the east. Runoff is also received from many other ditches and field drainages adjacent to the refuge boundary. The refuge receives inflow from a watershed in excess of 400,000 acres, an area equivalent to one third the size of Marshall County.

Agassiz utilizes this runoff to achieve the water level for each of the pools. Excess water is discharged into the Thief River. Outflows are monitored and controlled to prevent downstream flooding but sufficient freeboard must also be maintained within each of the refuge pools to prevent dikes from washing out. The maximum water holding capacity for the 18 impoundments is approximately 50,000 acre feet.

As water levels begin to increase, refuge managers closely monitor each pool and either raise or lower water levels by manipulating individual water control constructures. There are four types of water control structures. The most common is the stop log structure, a single or double culvert blocked on the upstream side by wood logs which slide into slots. When stacked atop each other, the logs act as a dam which lets water flow over them until the proper elevation is reached on the upstream side of the pool.

Another control structure is the screw gate. This is a cast iron door or flap which blocks the culvert and slides up or down over the culvert. The screw gate is manipulated using a hand crank. In the case of both the stop log and screw gate controls, the culverts vary in size from 18 inches to 48 inches in diameter.

Largest control structure on the refuge is the radial gate located on Judicial Ditch 11. The two 14-foot gates are raised or lowered using a hand crank. Water is released from the bottom of the gate and is discharged into the Thief River. This structure has the capacity to discharge water in excess of 1,100 cubic feet per second or approximately 2,200 acre feet each 24-hour period. (One acre-foot is equivalent to an area one acre in size and 12 inches deep).

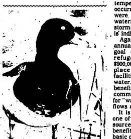
Each of the 28 pools has an additional structure called a spillway. When water cannot flow out of a pool fast enough through the control structure, it flows out through the spillway when the pool rises to the elevation of the spillway. A spillway is actually a low spot in a dike which is reinforced with large rocks or steel sheet pilings that water flows over. Spillways actually function as "relief valves."

An attempt is made to stabilize water levels in each of the 18 pools to the approved elevations as soon as possible in the spring because waterfowl, such as Canada geese and mallards, begin nesting as soon as the ice begins to melt. Successful waterfowl nesting is dependent on stable water levels during the nesting season. This is particularly true of overwater nesting ducks such as canvasback, redhead and ringnecks, that are sensitive to changes in water levels. Upland nesting ducks, such as mallards, teal and gadwall can also be adversely affected when rising water levels flood upland nesting sites.

AN AERIAL view of one of the wetlands at Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge. One of the goals in managing wetlands, according to refuge personnel, is to provide interspersion of water and aquatic vegetation.

By mid-summer pool levels gradually decline due to the loss of water from evaporation into the atmosphere and to the large amount of water required by actively growing aquatic plants. During long, hot dry periods, pool levels may drop as much as an inch per week. This process is called evaportranspiration.

In early fall, water levels in many pools are lowered to expose aquatic vegetation for food for fall migrating waterfowl and to provide resting and loafing areas. This also provides an additional benefit for flood storage for the following spring.



ONE OF the ducks that occur on the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge in large numbers during the spring and fall migration is the scaup, or bluebill.

In 1985, a record amount of water was discharged from the refuge approximately 324,800 acre feet. This is five times the maximum storage capacity of the refuge or equivalent to one foot of water over 324,800 acres. Eighty per cent of this outflow was released from Agassiz Pool through the main control structure on Judicial Ditch 11. Nearly one-half of the water that entered the refuge came from the Thief Lake Wildlife Management Area via the Thief River.

Recent cleaning of Judicial Ditch 11, the Mud River east of the refuge boundary, plus many miles of lateral ditches draining into these systems caused abrupt and rapid increases in the volume of water and siltation entering the refuge after every major rainstorm in 1985. This caused the water levels in all pools to increase dramatically despite continuous monitoring and manipulating by refuge managers.

As a result, waterfowl production was the lowest in many years since both overwater and upland nesting waterfowl nests were flooded. The accelerated ditching and cleaning of old ditch systems continues to contribute to increased flows into the refuge which has an adverse affect on our ability to effectively manage wetlands for waterfowl

In December of 1985, only 23,000 acre feet of water was in storage in all 18 refuge pools. Saturated soil conditions in the fall combined with early winter snow accumulations were indicators of potential flooding conditions this spring. However, ideal temperature for snow melt and runoff occurred and water levels in all pools were at ideal elevations for nesting waterfowl. Barring any major rainstorms, an excellent waterfowl hatch is indicated in 1986.

Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge annually attempts to meet its primary goal of producing waterfowl. The refuge has spent approximately $900,000 since 1970 to improve and replace deteriorated water control facilities to more effectively manage water. These improvements not only benefit wildlife, but also the local communities by preserving wetlands for water retention, slowing flood flows and recharging aquifiers.

It is recognized that wetlands are one of the most valuable natural resources in the United States. Wetland benefits can be divided into three basic categories: (1) fish and wildlife values, (2) environmental quality values and (3) economic values. Some of the fish and wildlife values include habitat for fish, waterfowl, a variety of other birds, furbearers and other mammals.

From the environmental aspect, the wetlands serve to filter pollution, remove sediment, recycle nutrients and produce oxygen, to name just a few. Some of the economic values include flood and erosion control, groundwater recharge, fishing, hunting, trapping and other recreational pursuits.

Unfortunately, wetlands have been one of the most abused of our resources. They have been drained, dredged and filled. There once were approximately 215 million wetland acres in the United States. By the mid-70's only 46 per cent (99 million) remained. Minnesota originally contained 18.4 million, but now has less than 8.7 million, a loss of 53 per cent.

In northwestern Minnesota the only significant wetlands that remain are in public ownership. To some these areas are referred to as "swamplands or wastelands," but to many more they are considered a precious resource that provides a vast array of benefits not only for wildlife but also for people.

Fast Pitch Softball

Coors handed the Schmidt Old Timers their first loss of the year, a 5-3 Thursday decision, but then fell to United Satellite Systems in surprising 15-4 fashion Friday in the Thief River Falls Men's Fast Pitch Softball League.

Schmidt-Coke handled Melvies 12-4 in Friday's doubleheader opener.

Coors vs. Old-Timers

Playing a limited schedule, the Schmidt Old-Timers had won two previous outings, but Thursday lost a well-played 5-3 game to Coors.

Schmidt Old-Timers grabbed a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning on Kjell Melvie's two-out triple and Dennis Bakke's single.

Coors came back in the bottom of the inning with a two-run double by Jeff Hendrickson, then went up 3-1 in the second inning.

Back-to-back fourth inning doubles by Jim Weckwerth and Dean Lawrenz pulled the Schmidt Old-Timers within 3-2.

Hendrickson drilled a solo home run during a two-run Coors fifth inning, while Marshall Vagle responded for the Schmidt Old-Timers in the sixth.

With two on and one out, the Schmidt Old-Timers threatened in the seventh, but Hendirckson struck out the last two batters to preserve the win.

Al Erickson and Hendrickson shared the pitching duties for Coors, with Erickson getting the win. Lawrenz went the distance for the Schmidt Old-Timers, out-hit 9-6. Vagle had three hits. The Schmidt Old-Timers also had three of the game's four errors.

Schmidt-Coke vs. Melvies

Schmidt-Coke jumped to an early 5-0 lead and went on to beat Melvies 12-4 Friday.

Rick Kofstad's three-run third inning home run cut the gap to 5-3. The two teams traded fifth inning runs, but Schmidt-Coke blew it open with a six-run seventh.

Mark Lundin, Kevin Sanders and Mike Drury had three hits apiece for the winners, while Kofstad had three for Melvies, out-hit 15-10. The game's only error was charged to Melvies.

Drury was the winning pitcher. Erv Melvie the loser. Greg Harder also homered for Schmidt-Coke.

USS vs. Coors

United Satellite Systems jumped all over Coors pitcher Al Erickson in a 15-7 upset win in Friday's late game.

Fourteen United Satellite Systems batters paraded to the plate in the first inning, producing nine runs. Rick Kofstad, filling in for a shorthanded USS squad, hit a towering three-run home run in the inning that included three walks, six hits and four Coors errors.

The winners made it 10-0 in the second before the stunned Coors team touched Todd Ortloff for five runs in the third, two of them on a Bruce Johnson home run.

Coors got a run in the fifth to make it 10-6, but Kofstad hit another towering home run in the bottom of the inning to maintain the USS lead.

Out-hit 10-7, Coors got another run in the sixth, but United Satellite Systems came back with four more in the bottom of the inning. Kofstad proved to be an adequate fill-in, collecting three hits and five RBI for the game. Coors was charged with nine errors; USS had three.

Johnson hit two homers and Mark Lundin added one.

Legion Is 1-3 At EGF Invitational

Involved in three one-run decisions, Thief River Falls lost three of four starts in the five-team East Grand Forks Invitational American Legion baseball tournament over the weekend to fall to 10-16 for the year.

Play started Friday for Post 117 with a 3-2 seventh inning loss to Audubon-Lake Park. Rain played havoc with the tournament schedule Saturday when Thief River Falls lost an 8-7 nine-inning contest to Groten, SD and edged Red Lake Falls 7-6. The Thief River Falls-Groten game, originally scheduled to start at 3 p.m., got underway at 7, and the Thief River Falls-Red Lake Falls match-up, planned for 8 p.m. started at 12-midnight.

Thief River Falls' string of one-run games ended in prompt fashion Sunday when Post 117 was shelled by Host East Grand Forks 15-5 in six innings.

East Grand Forks wound up with a 4-0 record in the round-robin event, while Groten and Audubon-Lake Park both went 2-2 while Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls finished 1-3.

"It was a long weekend," reported Thief River Falls coach Mark Lundin. "The two best games we played (Audubon-Lake Park and Groten), we lost. The timing Sunday (for the East Grand Forks game) had a lot to do with the 15-5 score. Even if we won, we knew we couldn't finish any higher. There was no enthusiasm, no incentive."

Ironically, Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks are scheduled to meet tonight (Monday) in a 7 p.m. regular season encounter at the fairgrounds diamond here. "It won't be 15-5," promised Lundin.

TRF — Audubon-Lake Park

Audubon-Lake Park, trailing 2-1 with two-out in the bottom of the seventh inning, struck for two runs and a 3-2 tournament-opening win over Thief River Falls Friday afternoon.

Thief River Falls, after spotting Audubon-Lake Park a fourth inning run, took a 2-1 lead in the fifth on a bases-loaded bloop single by Kory Joppru.

Audubon-Lake Park out-hit Thief River Falls 9-4. The errors were even at two-apiece.

Chris Nelson was the losing pitcher. Dean DuChamp had a pair of hits for the losers.

TRF — Groten

Thief River Falls let another potential win slip away when Groten, SD scored twice in the bottom of the seventh to gain a 6-6 tie, then scored two more runs in the bottom of the ninth for an 8-7 second-round win Saturday night.

Dean DuChamp, Chris Nelson, John Azure and Jason Lane all had two hits as Post 117 jumped out to a 5-0 lead in the top of the first and carried a 6-4 lead into the seventh, giving up a run in the bottom of the first and three more in the third.

Troy Coltom, who reached base on a fielder's choice and moved up on a single by Azure and a walk issued to Lane, scored on a wild pitch to give Thief River Falls a brief 7-6 lead in the top of the eighth, but another two-out base hit did in Post 117 in the bottom of the inning.

Groten out-hit Thief River Falls 11-7 and the losers had three of the game's four errors. Kevin Nelson, who came in relief of Kory Joppru in the seventh, was the losing pitcher.

TRF — RLF

Thief River Falls avoided a final-inning letdown in the midnight start against Red Lake Falls in Round 3, winning 7-6.

Post 117 scored once in the first inning, then had two-run frames in the second, fourth and fifth to assume a 7-2 lead. Red Lake Falls made it close, though on a three-run home run by Brian Nelson in a four-run sixth that made it 7-6 and got a two-out hit in the seventh before third baseman Bill Dicken caught a line-drive final out.

Thief River Falls had a 9-8 base hit edge. The errors were even at two-apiece. John Azure had two hits and two RBI for the winners, and Kevin Nelson homered. Jason Lane was the winning pitcher.

TRF — EGF

A ten-run first inning explosion by East Grand Forks made quick work of a Sunday afternoon match-up with Thief River Falls, leading to a 15-5 final.

Four Thief River Falls errors and four East Grand Forks hits, including a three-run home run by Paul Szymanski, made it a long inning off starter and losing pitcher John Azure.

East Grand Forks added four more runs in the fourth and closed out a ten-run rule conquest in the sixth after spotting Thief River Falls five run in the fifth.

Mike Bendickson, Chris Nelson and Troy Coltom had two hits for Thief River Falls, with Nelson getting a three-run home run in the process. The hits were even at seven-apiece, but Thief River Falls had seven of the game's nine errors.

Billy Dicken and Chris Nelson also saw mound duty for Post 117.

DNR Explains Details About Bonus Deer Hunt

Minnesota's 1986 deer season will mark the second year of the state's "bonus" deer hunt system, and the Department of Natural Resources is providing preliminary details on how the procedure works and where it will be applied this fall.

An experimental two-deer provision was authorized by the 1985 Legislature at the urging of the Department to provide an additional means of reducing the deer population in selected areas of the state.

DNR Wildlife Chief, Roger Holmes, said last season's antlerless deer harvest increased by an average of 20 per cent in the 23 antlerless permit areas where the bonus provision was used.

He explained that bonus deer licenses would again be available this year in two general types of situations. In the first, bonus licenses will be offered in most undersubscribed antlerless permit areas (areas where there are not enough applicants to take all available permits). In those areas, a separate drawing will be held after the regular antlerless permit drawing to select hunters who will be offered a bonus deer license.

"Hunters will not be required to make another application for the bonus drawing," Holmes explained, "because those who check on their antlerless application that they are interested will automatically be entered in the bonus drawing if one is held for their area."

Those who are selected will be mailed a certificate authorizing purchase of a bonus license. If they choose to participate in the bonus hunt, they must take the non-transferable certificate to any county auditor's office or to the DNR License Bureau in St. Paul, where they may purchase the bonus license for the same fee as the regular license.

Deadline for redeeming certificates to buy the bonus license is Friday, November 7, the same as the deadline for purchasing other deer hunting licenses.

Second general situation where bonus deer licenses will be offered is in certain special permit areas, such as parks and national wildlife refuges. "These special area hunts are established to reduce localized deer concentrations that result in crop depredation problems, vegetation damage, and deer-auto collisions," said Holmes.

Hunters who apply for and successfully draw a permit for one of these special hunts will be eligible to purchase a bonus license at those hunt headquarters at the time of their hunt.

In addition, bonus licenses for hunting deer by bow and arrow will be available in some areas.

No bonus deer licenses will be issued in Zone I in northeastern Minnesota because there are no undersubscribed permit areas or special bonus hunts in that zone.

"No person may hunt deer in Zone I who is in any way licensed to tag two deer. This applies to firearms, bow and arrow, and muzzleloader hunters," Holmes emphasized.

All bonus deer licenses are valid only for antlerless deer. The purpose of this rule, said Holmes, is to put added hunting pressure on females as a means of curbing continuing population increases.

He said the 1986 Big Game Hunting Synopsis will provide additional information, including a list of special hunts and permit areas where bonus licenses may be available. These regulations will be distributed to license agents in mid-August.

Deadline for applying for an antlerless permit this year is September 8.

Move over oranges and apples, bananas and grapes. There's a new fruit in town and it weighs in at 80 pounds. International Wildlife magazine reports that the jakfruit, a tasty treat in Asia, is being planted in orchards all across Florida. The yellowish-green, watermelon-sized fruit is high in nutrition and moderately priced.

Reeve To Leave Command With Mixed Emotions

Minnesota American Legion held its 68th annual convention at the Radisson south hotel in Bloomington last weekend. The Legion auxiliary also held its annual convention at the same time. At the meetings a Warren youth, Randy Votava, received the Boy Scout of the year award and recognition as having also received the National Boy Scout of the year award. But the primary business of the convention were reports and selection of new officers.

Robert Reeve of Thief River Falls, state commander, is leaving the office with mixed emotions. He said it was a lot of hard work, but also a lot of fun. The new department commander chosen to replace Reeve is Duane Redetenning of Anoka, post 102. Reeve said his job as department commander isn't quite over yet. There are a number of functions like the American Legion baseball tournaments that he will have to be at, and as past department commander there are also other functions.

At the convention, an award was presented to Randy Votava, Warren, who won the Boy Scout of the year award from the Minnesota American Legion this year. Votava then took top honors in the nation by winning the National Boy Scout of the year award from the American Legion. He will receive the national award, an $8,000 college scholarship, at the Legion's national convention in September in Cincinnati.

Primary business of the conventions were reports by officers and chairpersons of committees on the accomplishments of the Legion and auxiliary during the past year. Reeve said the Legion hit a 22nd all time high membership record. There are now 127,000 Legion members in Minnesota. One of the highlights of the meetings was the election and installation of new officers. Among the new officers is James Letexier of East Grand Forks as Legion department sergeant at arms and Mrs. Raymond Rapacz of Argyle as first vice president of the auxiliary. Mrs. Rapacz served as second vice president last year.

Several awards were presented at the convention including law officer of the year, a children and youth award, Americanism award, school safety patrol award, education award, Vietnam Veterans survey study and several other categories. American Crystal Sugar company in East Grand Forks received awards for hiring the most handicapped and older workers.

The convention began at 9 a.m. July 10 with general sessions for all delegates and ended on July 12 with a big parade in Bloomington. On Friday there was a competition for color guards, drill teams, bands and drum and bugle corps. The 9th district band, the only district band in the nation, placed first and was selected to represent the department of Minnesota at the National convention.

TRF Swimming Pool Committee Narrows Site List

Possible locations for a new pool in Thief River Falls were narrowed to two sites at a meeting of the swimming pool committee Wednesday night at the occupational development center.

After touring possible site locations and discussing design with committee members and city engineer Dave Kildahl, special guest, Wen Quale, pool consultant of Associated Pool Builders of Bismarck, ND, recommended an open air facility of 6,000 square feet.

Following Quale's presentation the committee voted to narrow the field of possible sites to the Floyd B. Olson park or the western end of Washington school ground, and set a goal to raise $500,000. The next phase will be development of a design and plan. In the next few weeks, the city and school district will be contacted in an attempt to obtain a commitment for the sites.

For more information contact Charlie Oakes at 681-6830.

Discovery Place Receives National Accreditation

Discovery Place in Thief River Falls recently received accreditation by the National Acedemy of Early Childhood programs. The academy is a division of the National Association for the Education of Young children, the country's largest organization of early childhood professionals.

The accreditation program, launched in September of 1985, is a first in the field. Now early childhood programs nationwide can participate in a program designed not only to measure quality, but also to encourage improvement in those programs. Discovery Place is one of 89 programs in the nation and five in the state of Minnesota to receive the accreditation.

The acedemy's standards, which were developed over a three-year period with input for or from educators and administrators throughout the field, are designed to support state licensing and address areas of quality which licensing often cannot. Some of these areas include how teachers interact with children, planned learning activities and materials, and communication with parents. Other areas include administration, staff qualifications, health, safety and nturition.

In order to meet the academy's standards for accreditation, Discovery Place completed a five-month process of self-study. It also successfully completed an on-site visit by early childhood professionals and a review by a three-person national commission.

MN Implements Program Against Drunken Drivers

With one of the best arrest records in the nation, most drivers agree that law enforcement officials in Minnesota already take drunk driving seriously. However, a new program announced today by the Minnesota department of public safety may become the most potent weapon yet in the fight against intoxicated drivers.

Minnesota's three million drivers are being encouraged to put the finger on a drunk driver by dialing the "911" emergency number. The call is quick, free (even from a pay phone), and can be annonymous if the caller chooses.

Margie Sauer, director of the drunk driver reporting program, says the goal of the program is to deter the drinking driver by increasing the risk of arrest. "Similar programs in other states," Sauer says, "account for a growing number of their drunk driving arrests."

Telephone dispatchers say the new program will give state patrol as well as local police and sheriff departments an important edge in the fight against drunk driving because "911" calls are automatically routed to the nearest law enforcement agency. Furthermore, observing any dangerous driving behavior is a reason to dial "911".

"You don't have to be certain the driver is intoxicated," says Sauer. "Look for evidence or erratic or dangerous driving such as weaving, drifting over the center line, driving at extremely slow or fast speeds, extra wide turns, careless passing, driving without lights at night and jerky stops or starts. These are things we have all seen, but probably didn't realize there was a drunk driver behind the wheel."

What do you do if you see a driver who appears intoxicated? Go immediatley to the nearest telephone and dial "911". Then, report as much of the following information as you can: location of the vehicle, direction of travel, description, license number (or portion of the license number), time the driving behavior was observed and description of the driving behavior which concerned you.

22 NCC Students Earn Foundation Scholarship Awards

Twenty-two foundation scholarships were recently awarded to students at Northland community college for the 1986-87 academic year. This award is based upon superior academic background as measured by grade point average and rank in class, as well as participating in student government and student activities.

The foundation scholarship program is made possible through a special grant by Lowell and Marge Swenson to the Northland community college foundation. This is the eighth year of this special scholarship program at the college.

Area high school freshmen who will be entering the college as foundation scholars in the 1986 fall quarter are: Richard Bendickson, Lori Bentow, Jennifer Davidson, Constance Grovum, Jeffrey Hamness, Karin Nelson, David Onkka, Dana Sevre, and Tammy Canfield all from Thief River Falls. Also, Leslie Carlson from Erskine; Paul Estabrooks from Northome; David Rolf and Karen Syverson from McIntosh; and Darrin Peterson from Middle River.

Blood Drive In Goodridge July 21 Seeks Volunteers

Goodridge's next blood drive will be held from 12 to 5 p.m. July 21 at the Faith Lutheran church. This drive is especially important because it is being held during the summer. The goal is to have 74 people signed up with appointments two days before the drive.

United Blood services collected 34,570 units of blood in 1985, and anticipates a need for 36,000 (700 each week) in 1986. Many communities will not sponsor a summer blood drive, because of people going on vacation and farmers being in the fields. If the patient need for blood also decreased in the summer, everything would be fine. But those needs don't decrease at all — patients continue to need blood right through the summer, regardless of vacations or school holidays. That is why the Goodridge Lioness club is sponsoring a second blood drive for area residents.

The demand for blood products is constantly increasing, and volunteers can help meet the demand by donating blood on July 21. Anyone interested in donating can contact Dorothy Wayne at 681-1085 or Sharon Wayne at 681-7531 to schedule an appointment.

85th County Fair Opens 5-Day Program Today

Final pieces are being put in place for the 85th annual Pennington county fair which officially opens today at the fairgrounds in Thief River Falls. Entry day will be Thursday and exhibits will begin arriving then with the outlook for another large number of exhibits this year.

Matt Armstrong Shows will be operating on the midway today and sanctioned three-wheeler races will be conducted in front of the grandstand beginning at 7 p.m. tonight.

Acceptance of entries tomorrow begin at 9 a.m. in both open class and 4-H club departments. Entries for 4-H will close at 3 p.m. but open class entries can be accepted until 6 p.m. An exception is the open class flower division where entries must be made by 4:30 p.m.

Livestock exhibits should again be a highlight of the Pennington county fair, according to superintendents in those departments. LaVerne Hamre, co-superintendent of dairy, beef and 4-H livestock, said this morning that his conservative estimate is for 120 cattle, 180 sheep and swine, 60 horses and 65 dairy goats. Poultry and rabbit exhibitors do not register in advance, but there have been a number of advance inquiries and superintendents Kermit Finstad and David Lee say their main concern is in having enough cages, waterers and feeders.

An American Dairy Goat association sanctioned goat show is again a part of the fair and will start about 10 a.m. Saturday, following the 4-H goat show. A pre-show milk-out will be conducted at 9 p.m. Friday to give all competitors an equal standing for the Saturday show. Goat exhibitors are also required to have their animals on exhibit until 7 p.m. Sunday for public viewing. Entries have been received from as far as International Falls and Battle Lake, according to superintendents Alberta Johnson and Deb Engen. The public is invited to view the milk-out, show activities or goats on exhibit.

Fair visitors are advised to use only the east and west entrances to the fairgrounds throughout the five-day fair. The south entrance off highway 1 and 59 west is an emergency entrance and is to otherwise be used only by livestock exhibitors for bringing and removing animals for exhibit. Admission to the grounds is free but a 50-cent parking fee will be collected.

Grandstand attractions in addition to tonight's three-wheeler races include the following:

Thursday — 6:30 p.m., guard dog demonstration by personnel of the Grand Forks air force base and their German shepherd dogs; 8 p.m., Middle River Hee-Haw show. Free admission for both programs.

Those who filed for the position are: Vicki Bjorgaard, Leo Nelson, Beverly Holm, John W. Olson Sr., Wayne Bjornrud, Judy Geatz, Richard Lee Holmes, Marvin Johnson, Charles Oakes and Carol Johnson.

Society and Clubs

Connie Hume-John Salstrand Wed May 3 At St. Bernard's

Connie Lynn Hume and John Bernard Salstrand were united in marriage May 3 at St. Bernard's Catholic church in Thief River Falls. Rev. Dave Super officiated at the 1 p.m. double ring ceremony. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Hume of Thief River Falls and Mr. and Mrs. George Salstrand of Keewatin.

Friend of the couple, Nicole Brang, was organist, playing "Nuptial March," "God of Love," "Be Not Afraid," "He is the Lord," and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring." Jackie Helms and Jim Hayes, friends of the couple, sang "Forever," "To Me," "The Wedding Song" and "God, A Woman and A Man." The bride's sister, Billie Jo Hume, carried the wedding banner, and the bride's cousin, Mendy Hutfleston, Wadena, and friend of the couple, Kevin Kinsman, Thief River Falls, were readers for the mass.

The bride and groom were escorted to the altar by their parents. Floral arrangements of pink, blue, yellow and lavender roses and carnations with white stephanotis and babies' breath adorned the altar, with aisle decorations of lavender bows.

The bride was attired in a white gown featuring a beaded, princess-style bodice trimmed with embroidered organza medallions, with smaller embroidered medallions encircling the waistline. The full, hooped skirt was composed of alternating ruffles of silk floss lace and crystallette with wire trim, leading to a full, cathedral-length train. Victorian sleeves were the same crystallette fabric as the skirt, trimmed in embroidered organza medallions, and accented by crystallette, wire-trimmed ruffles. Her headpiece was trimmed with seed pearls and sprays of flowers, with both fingertip and blusher veil edged in Venice lace. The bridal bouquet was a large white orchid surrounded by pink, blue, yellow and lavender pixy carnations with white stephanotis, babies' breath and greenery, trimmed with white satin ribbon steamers. She wore a gift from the groom, a diamond necklace.

Shawn Hume, sister of the bride, Thief River Falls, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Kathy Dusek, Thief River Falls; Becky Peterson, Gonvick; and Wanda Sylvester, Crookston, all friends of the couple. Bridal attendants wore gowns of pink, blue, yellow and lavender lallque taffeta, featuring off-the-shoulder ruffles accenting fitted bodice, full sleeves, and hooped bouffant skirt with ruffled hemline and touches of Chantilly lace tucked with satin ribbon. They carried bouquets of pink, blue, yellow and lavender pixy carnations and roses with stephanotis, babies' breath and greenery, and white satin ribbon streamers.

Sara Streiff, niece of the groom from Iowa, was flower girl. She wore a yellow gown identical to that of the bridesmaids, and carried a basket containing the same flowers found in the bridesmaids' bouquets. Jason Hanson, Thief River Falls, served as ring bearer.

Best man was Tom Salstrand, Hibbing, brother of the groom. Other attendants were Pat Salstrand, Keewatin, brother of the groom; and friends of the couple, Greg Olson, Keewatin, and Jim Boben, Los Angeles, CA. Ushers were Jim Kelly, Crookston, uncle of the bride; and Eric Sundquist, Keewatin, friend.

The groom wore white tails, tie and cummerbund, with a blue rose boutonniere. Other gentlemen of the wedding party wore grey tails with cummerbunds matching the dresses of the bridal attendants in pink, blue, yellow and lavender, with corresponding pixy carnation boutonnieres.

Guests of honor were grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Dorothy Kelly, who was presented with a special corsage of pink carnations bound with white satin ribbon, and godparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Danny Hanson, who received a lavender boutonniere and a corsage of lavender carnations, respectively.

The mother of the bride wore a floor-length lavender gown with sweetheart neckline, sheer sleeves, slender satin sash and flounced overskirt with satin bow trim. Her corsage was of lavender pixy carnations, stephanotis, babies' breath and greenery. The groom's mother wore a floor-length mauve gown with stand-up collar, long sleeves and V-shaped belt. Her corsage was similar to that of the bride's mother, but of pink pixy carnations.

A reception in the church hall was presented by the bride's parents following the ceremony. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Danny Hanson, godparents of the bride. Sisters of the groom, Ann Levstek, Denver, CO, and Kathy Streiff of Iowa, cut and served the wedding cake, which was a three-tiered, pillared creation baked and decorated by Mrs. Martin Hanson. Featuring a flowing fountain base, the cake was trimmed with pink, blue, yellow and lavender flowers, green leaves and white scallops, topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Mrs. Clayton Molstad, the bride's aunt, and Mrs. Harold Hanson, cousin of the bride, poured. Punch was served by Lori Hagland and Debbie Molstad, cousins of the bride. The bride's aunt, Janice Kelly, registered the guests, and friend of the couple, Michelle Enerson, was flower hostess. Cousin Shelly Molstad served as the bride's personal attendant. Gifts were arranged by Tammy Salstrand, sister-in-law of the groom, and Dianne Molstad, and were carried by Brian Kelly and Doug Backlund, all cousins of the bride.

Following a wedding trip to the central and western United States, the couple is at home at 1055 Rollins Road, Burlingame, CA, where the groom is employed by United Airlines. Both the bride and groom are graduates of the Thief River Falls AVTI, the bride of the licensed practical nursing program and the groom of the aviation program.

LaVerne Rondorfs Celebrate 40th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne (Olive) Rondorf were guests of honor at an open house to celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary July 6 at Trinity Lutheran church in Thief River Falls, hosted by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Donald (Pamela) Rondorf of Belmond, IA, and their daughter, Barbara of Zion, IL. Mr. and Mrs. Rondorf were married June 26, 1946, at the church parsonage by Rev. G.S. Thompson with attendants, Eugene Rondorf, brother of the groom, and Clara Mae Swanson, sister of the bride, both of whom were present at the open house.

Barbara Rondorf was in charge of flower corsages. Blanche Goethe, sister of the groom, and Burnell Rondorf, a sister-in-law, registered the guests. Punch was served by the Rondorfs' grandsons, Tyson and Jeremy Rondorf of Pillager, and Evonne Moe, a friend of the couple.

A short program was presented with Donald Rondorf as master of ceremonies. His wife, Pam, videotaped the event. After introducing his family, he called on his sister, Barb, to read a humorous history of the bride and groom written by their great-aunt, the late Emily Johnson, that she read at the original wedding reception at Steiner hall. Donald and Barbara presented each of the guests of honor a single rose, then gave a skit for their parents entitled, "Thank You, Mom and Dad." Rev. Josh and Judy Nelson presented a humorous duet with guitar accompaniment and a solo by Rev. Nelson, after which he gave devotions and prayer.

Mrs. Rondorf's circle helped in preparation and serving of refreshments, with Marzella Jorde, the groom's sister, as hostess. The serving table featured a two-tiered cake, baked and decorated in ruby and white by Margaret Rupprecht. Clara Mae Swanson and Edna Rondorf, a sister-in-law, cut and served the cake. The special table for the family was decorated with the rose vases presented to the couple, and vases of silk flowers decorated other tables. Irene Rausch and Anne Kraemer, friends of the couple, presided at the silver service, and sisters-in-law, Mildred Rondorf and Beverly Ranum, were waitresses.

Approximately 170 relatives and friends attended the open house. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Orren Jorde from Grand Forks; Mrs. Esther Hopkins, Leah and Natalie, St. Louis Park; Dennis Rondorf, Cook, WA; Wayne Johnson, Seattle, WA; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Johnson, Detroit Lakes; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Johnson, Warren; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wik, St. Hilaire; Mr. and Mrs. Joe DeHaan, Red Lake Falls; and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Kron, Newfolden.

Farmers Grain Co. At Stephen Shows Facilities

Farmers Grain company at Stephen will hold an open house for its new facilities to load 52-car unit trains Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. A noon meal will be served at the community center.

Built at a cost of $799,000 plus $15,000 for a dust control package option, the facility includes two main silos 36 feet in diameter and 140 feet high, each holding 126,000 bushels, five connecting bins with a combined capacity of 22,000 bushels, 20x72 covered driveway and scale, 10,000 bushel-per-hour high speed leg and 40,000 bushel-per-hour loading valve.

The silos were built by continuous concrete pour on steel pilings driven 60 to 70 feet into the ground. The concrete pouring using slip forms continued on a 24-hour-per-day basis for more than a week. First grain was taken for storage in January of 1986 and the first rail car was loaded May 27. First 26-car unit train was loaded July 7.

Facilities to load 52-car unit trains were considered necessary to be competitive with other elevators since 52-car trains permit the lowest freight rates and allow elevators to pay customers higher prices for their grain.

CCC Announces Extension For 1985 Grain Loans

United States department of agriculture's Commodity Credit corporation recently announced that a one-year extension is now available on all 1985 grain loans as they fall due, according to Kermit Finstad, chairman of the Pennington county ASC committee.

Finstad said that because of the very tight terminal storage situation, the CCC will pay farmers to store their 1985 grain on the farm for one more year to enable a more orderly marketing of the commodity. Storage will be paid in advance at the same rates paid for grain in the three-year reserve program. Interest will be charged during the year of extension, and the grain can be sold and the loan repaid at any time.

If markets do not permit the profitable sale of the grain, it can be forfeited to the CCC at the end of the extension period. Grain in the one-year extension is not eligible for entry into the reserve program, and it cannot be used in the rotation program as a substitute for 1987 crop.

The 1985 grain under loan is also eligible for entry into the reserve program, which is a three-year contract on which storage is paid and interest charged only during the first year.

If more information is needed, producers should contact the ASCS office in the county where they farm.

Sonstelie Argues For Changes In Property Taxes

. . . "There is no doubt that times are tough in rural Minnesota, but reductions in interest rates and property taxes would be a step in the right direction to alleviate some of our problems," according to Gordon Sonstelie, Winger, president of the Minnesota association of wheat growers.

Testifying before the Governor's rural forum, July 11, in Crookston, Sonstelie urged actions that would result in reductions in property taxes and interest rates. The forum, hosted by Governor Rudy Perpich and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols, reviewed the 1986 Minnesota farm bill, and heard testimony on rural economy proposals for consideration during the 1987 legislative session.

Sonstelie testified that the farm credit administrations's recently announced one-half percentage point reduction in interest rates was not nearly enough, and that further reductions would be necessary to aid farmers and to keep the farm credit system competitive.

Sonstelie also submitted a number of the wheat growers most pressing tax concerns, the first and foremost of which was property tax on agricultural land. "Property taxes constitute a large part of a producer's cost of production that must be paid regardless of whether a crop is produced or harvested, and regardless of whether a producer has the income to pay," Sonstelie testified. He said that although the 1985 legislature made a good start in providing some equity in the application of property taxes, more is yet to be done.

According to the wheat grower president, a prime concern is removing the cost of education from property taxes on agricultural land. He suggested that payments for buildings and maintenance should be covered against local efforts, but salaries, equipment, transportation, and instructional material should be 100 per cent state paid.

"Funding education costs from other revenue sources will provide more stability than can be provided through property taxes on agricultural land," Sonstelie said. Funding education entirely through state financing will also be more sensitive to equal educational opportunities for all Minnesotans, regardless of whether they live in the urban or rural areas, he said.

The wheat growers also support the need to provide a more equitable means to value agricultural land for tax purposes. "It has been the position of the Minnesota wheat growers all along that agricultural land taxation be based on productive returns or rental value of the land, rather than on potential sales value," Sonstelie said. He urged the use of the soon-to-be-completed state soil survey as an accurate means of determining productive land values to provide equity in property valuation.

Sonstelie also urged the exemption of farm out-buildings from property taxation, in order to reduce a farmer's property tax burden while encouraging him to keep his homestead in good condition.

In conclusion, Sonstelie urged a total repeal of estate taxes. "With declining asset values, estate taxes are less of a concern now than they once were, but they still can be a problem," he said. "Families may be forced to liquidate all or a part of a farming operation in order to pay the estate tax bill, instead of being able to keep it in the family and pass it on to the children."

Farmers Urged To Complete Survey On Farm Finances

Commissioner Jim Nichols announced today that the Minnesota department of agriculture is conducting a survey of Minnesota farm financial conditions. Some 4,000 Minnesota farmers have recived a farm financial survey form from the department.

"The department mailed questionnaires to a sample of farmers who operate more than 80 acres, to focus on those whose principal occupation actually is farming," Commissioner Nichols said.

He urges farmers who have received the survey to understand the importance of the farm financial information requested, and to cooperate by filling out and returning the questionnaire by July 25. Strong participation in the survey by all farmers will help make the Minnesota report reflect the real situation in today's agriculture. The questionnaire asks farmers about their current financial situation and will measure debt-to-asset ratios, debt structure, cash flow and whether farmers are current with their financial obligations to lending institutions. "I want to assure farmers that the individual survey results will be strictly confidential. Individual reports will be combined with those of other producers, then destroyed," said Commissioner Nichols. The department hopes to receive at least 2,000 responses to the survey.

The survey is being conducted with the cooperation and financial support from the agricultural extension service of the University of Minnesota and the state board of vocational-technical education. The final report will be submitted to a legislative task force created by the legislature to study the farm financial situation. The survey results will be available later this fall.

For more information on this survey, contact: Rollin Dennistoun, deputy commissioner, (612) 296-2810; or Gerald Heil, director of planning, (612) 296-1486.

MN Wheat Growers Favor Changes In Grain Standards

Minnesota association of wheat growers and the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council have gone on record in support of the changes in the United Sates grain standards for wheat as proposed by the Federal grain inspection service. The proposed changes include rounding dockage to 0.1 per cent rather than the current 0.5 per cent and recording protein on export certificates on the basis on 12 per cent moisture rather than on an "as is" basis.

Responding to a request for comments in the May 30 issue of the Federal Register, Minnesota wheat growers President Gordon Sonstelie of Winger and Wheat council Chairman John Oberg of Ulen in a joint letter stated that in adopting the two proposed changes the United States would be taking a good first step in evaluating and modifying its grain standards.

According to the wheat leaders, rounding dockage to 0.1 per cent would be more precise and fair than the current practice and it would enhance the marketability of U.S. wheat traded in the export market. They indicated too that this tightening of the tolerances for non-millable material in wheat would remove one of the major annoyances that the wheat promotion organizations have faced in dealing with foreign customers.

They also expressed the belief that reporting the dockage in tenths of a per cent will ultimately lead to dockage being removed at all points along the marketing chain, which will result in cleaner grain at the export point.

Sonstelie and Oberg also supported the recording of protein on a constant 12 per cent moisture basis as a means to remove much of the variation in protein test results and to eliminate confusion on the part of buyers who receive wheat from the United States with differing moisture levels.

The Minnesota farmers also expressed satisfaction that a recent series of grain quality workshops had resulted in additional recommendations for actions and areas for study to improve the quality and marketability of U.S. wheat and other grains. The recommendations covered such topics as blending, recombination of grain dust, shiplot loading plans, end use value tests, insect infestation and handling foreign complaints.

County Board Proceedings

July 16, 1986
OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS
BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS,
PENNINGTON COUNTY
May 13, 1986

Pursuant to adjournment, the Board of Commissioners of Pennington County met Tuesday, May 13, 1986, at 10:00 a.m. in the Commissioners' room of the Courthouse, Thief River Falls, MN. All members present.

Norman Boucher, County Ag Inspector; [illegible] Bates, MNDOT & John Campbell, State Regional Ag Inspector, met with the Board to discuss weed control on the state trunk highways. Mr. Bates stated that due to the wide area they have to control weeds along trunk highways and that they couldn't take care of all of the highways the state would reimburse any costs the county highway department would incur in controlling noxious weeds along trunk highways. The County Engineer indicated that he also had a shortage of man-hours to do weed spraying but would work with the state and ag inspectors to see what arrangements could be made.

John Nelson representing the NW Private Industry Council gave a slide presentation and answered questions about the Job Training Partnership Act.

A delegation of eight landowners along JD No. 1 and also Eugene Urling and George Dahle from the Red Lake County Engineer's office met with the Board to discuss concerns of the cleaning project scheduled this year in JD No. 1 along the South and East sides of Section 20, Deer Park Township and the South sides of Sections 14, 15 & 16 of Deer Park Township. There had been no easements received for one mile of the 4½ miles to be cleaned. Delmer Nesland suggested that maybe the group would like to hold off spending additional dollars to clean this part of the ditch until the two counties rebuild SA No. 25 than a group ditch could be established from the southwest corner of section 15, Deer Park Township and South to the Clearwater River. The road construction has been scheduled for 1989 in Pennington County. Other discussion was on the need of field ditch culverts to prevent wash into the ditch after it was cleaned. These field ditch culverts would be charged to the ditch. Commissioner Swanson moved, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg that the County Engineer and the Soil Conservation Office draw up a policy on field ditch culverts into legal ditch systems. Motion unanimously carried. The consensus of the group and the County Board was to go ahead with the cleaning of these 4½ miles this year if the field culverts were used. A list of those attending is on file in the Auditor's office.

The minutes of the April 22 & 24, 1986, meetings were read and approved.

Rick Nordhagen, representing Future Fuels, Inc., discussed with the County Board the material in the yard of the solid waste facility. He has started a procedure to pick up any paper that might blow around twice a day. He also mentioned that the cans piled on the west side would be moved. Engineer Olson went over the requests for proposal to analyze and do a market survey of the compost created at the site. The proposals would be sent to the companies interested and the solid waste committee would make a recommendation from those returned. The Board would then review them at the 27th meeting.

At 2:00 p.m. the Chairman called the Revenue Sharing Budget Hearing to order. The purpose of the hearing was to amend the current budget to allow for reduction of funds from Revenue Sharing and also to amend previous Entitlement Period budgets. Commissioner Stenberg moved, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski to approve the Revenue Sharing Budget as follows: General Government Public Building - $129,513.95, Public Safety - $236,270.07; Library - $19,965.00; Education (Historical Society) - $6,000.00; Highway Equipment - $95,000.00; Transportation - $4,162.77; Environment (Solid Waste) - $28,800.00; General Government Capital Expense - $59,046.75. Motion unanimously carried. This budget includes all balances in previous Entitlement Periods. The Revenue Sharing Hearing was adjourned.

Jim Wasgum appeared before the Board to discuss the cans, plastic and paper at the solid waste facility. He had heard complaints about the looks of the site and of paper blowing around. The Board told him they had just discussed this with Rick Nordhagen and that steps were being taken to make the site more agreeable to the residents and businesses near it. The Board thanked Jim for his concern.

Commissioner Hoffman moved, seconded by Commissioner Swanson to pay Tri-Valley Opportunity Council, Inc. $426.77 from Revenue Sharing Funds as appropriated for Pennington County's share of the Region II Bus. Motion unanimously carried.

Commissioner Stenberg moved, seconded by Commissioner Swanson to approve all budgets as presented for 1986. Motion unanimously carried.

Commissioner Swanson moved, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski to release the final $15,000 as appropriated from Revenue Sharing Funds for the Pennington County Council on Aging for the Heritage Center. Motion carried.

The County Board reviewed the 1985 trial court report from the Court Administrator.

Bob Wold, Deputy Sheriff, discussed with the Board computer software for the Law Enforcement Department, Posse VT. The cost of this program is $9,000 and would run on an IBM 36 computer. If the County buys this program before June 24 they could recoup some of the cost as additional county law enforcement centers buy this program. The City of Thief River Falls police department would also use this and could possibly share the cost. They will be going to Beltrami County to look at the system next week.

Auditor Olson then brought up replacing the System 34 with a System 36 computer. Disk space is becoming a problem on the S-34 and most of the new program updates are being written only for the S-36 including the law enforcement program. This stands to reason since only 4 counties in the approximately 46 counties using the property tax system in the Minnesota Counties Computer Coop (MCCC) are using system 34 computers. The Board asked for a complete set of figures for new computer equipment and dates when needed be submitted to the Board at the next meeting.

Commissioner Swanson moved, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski and unanimously adopted that the following property tax adjustments be made:

Parcel No. 09-21-107-00, SW¼ 21-152-41, Frank Nelson & Others - remove homestead credit - +$292.62;

Parcel No. 09-07-024-00, SE¼ 7-152-41; Frank Nelson - Add homestead - -$292.62.

The Board approved an arrangement with the 4-H Clubs to sell the new Pennington & Red Lake County Atlas. The 4-H could keep $2.00 of the sales price of $10.00.

Commissioner Hoffman moved, seconded by Commissioner Garbanski to approve DNR permit No. 86-1188 that allows the Pennington County Highway Dept. to install a larger culvert in conjunction with regrading SA No. 8 along the SW¼ Section 27, Numedal Township. Motion unanimously carried.

Correspondence was read from Steward-Walker, Inc. regarding the 1st Street Bridge.

Commissioner Grabanski introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners has reviewed the Association of Minnesota Counties' 1986 Platform as adopted by the delegates at the Annual Conference, and

WHEREAS, the County Board of Commissioners believes that a united consensus of county officials results in the optimum outcome for county residents and county officials, and

WHEREAS, this County Board of Commissioners endorses and supports the recommendations in the Association of Minnesota Counties' 1986 Platform.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Pennington County Board of Commissioners support the Association of Minnesota Counties 1986 Platform.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Swanson and upon vote, unanimously adopted.

Commissioner Grabanski left the meeting at 4:00 p.m.

Commissioner Hoffman moved, seconded by Commissioner Swanson to approve an easement as presented by the City of Goodridge to allow hookup of the sewer system to the Goodridge Highway shed. Motion carried.

Petitions to clean ditches were presented to the Board. Those put on schedule for cleaning were CD No. 1 S-BR; CD No. 68 BR No. 1; and CD No. 51.

Commissioner Hoffman moved, seconded by Commissioner Swanson to authorize the County Engineer to have motor grader operators enroll in a training class. Motion carried.

Moved by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg to set road, bridge & culvert inspection at 8:30 a.m., May 15. Motion carried.

Commissioner Grabanski returned to the meeting.

The County Board then discussed the County Engineer's salary to be effective May 1, 1986. Commissioner Stenberg made a motion to set the County Engineer's salary at $36,500 for the year ending April 30, 1987. Chairman Koop called for a second twice, then stepped down from the Chair. Vice Chairman Hoffman called for a second and Commissioner Koop seconded the motion. Discussion was heard with Vice Chairman Hoffman calling for a roll call vote: Hoffman, no; Grabanski, No; Koop, Yes; Stenberg, Yes; Swanson, No. Motion failed. The Chair was returned to Commissioner Koop. Commissioner Hoffman made a motion, Commissioner Swanson seconded to set the County Engineer's salary for the year ending April 30, 1987, at $37,000. No discussion was heard and Chairman Koop called for the roll call vote. Hoffman, Yes; Koop, No; Stenberg, No; Swanson, Yes; Grabanski, Yes. Motion carried.

Auditor Olson reviewed the lease agreement with the State of Minnesota for probation office rent. This was a 2 year renewal at the same rate as the last lease — $275-month. The Board decided they could make use of the space for other county purposes and that the County would rent the probation office space in the Law Enforcement Center. The County Auditor was instructed to inform the probation office of this decision. No further action was taken on this matter.

The following bills were presented, audited and approved for payment:

County Board Proceedings

July 16, 1986
OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS
BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS,
PENNINGTON COUNTY
MAY 27, 1986

Pursuant to adjournment, the Board of Commissioners of Pennington County met in the Commissioners' room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls, MN on Tuesday, May 27, 1986 at 10:00 a.m. Commissioner Hoffman was absent.

Auditor Olson discussed the refund of the workman's compensation insurance trust which amounted to $29,328.92. The refund was approximately 23 per cent of the premium paid in 1985.

At 10:30 the Board convened to open bids for replacing the Mavie Bridge and regrading SA No. 8 and SA No. 14. Jack Isaacson, District Engineer for MNDOT, opened the bids with the first one being for SP 57-622-04 replacing the bridge over JD No. 18 on County State Aid Highway No. 22 (Aka Mavie Bridge). The following bids were read: Eagle Contracting, Inc., Remer, MN $97,278.00; Red Lake Builders, Inc., Red Lake, MN - $117,471.00; and Robinson Construction Co., Inc., Burnsville - $121,740.00.

The bid of Eagle Contracting, Inc., in the amount of $97,278.00 appeared to be the lowest bid received, subject to final audit, and on motion by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski it was voted by the Board of Commissioners to recommend to the Commissioner of Transportation, as agent for said County, that said contract be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. Motion unanimously carried.

The Board then proceeded to open bids as advertised and called for regrading SA No. 8 and SA No. 14 under project numbers SAP 57-608-01 and SAP 57-614-01. The following bids were opened and read:

(Allow 20 per cent reduction on total if awarded both contracts)

Graff Construction, Greenbush, SAP 57-608-01, -0-; SAP 57-614-01, $153,320.60;

Donald Conroy Construction, Wheaton, SAP 57-608-01, -0-; SAP 57-614-01, $178,909.42;

Holthusen Construction, Grygla, SAP 57-608-01, -0-; SAP 57-614-01, $229,974.98.

Moved by Commissioner Grabanski, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg that the bid of Red Lake Builders, Inc., Red Lake, Mn. in the amount of $327,450.51 for project SAP 57-608-01 be accepted as the lowest and best bid received and the Chairman and Auditor be authorized and instructed to enter into a contract with said low bidder. Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski that the bid of Graff Construction, Greenbush, in the amount of $153,320.60 for project SAP 57-614-01 be accepted as the lowest and best bid received and the Chairman and Auditor be authorized and instructed to enter into a contract with said low bidder. Motion unanimously carried.

Rick Thomton appeared before the Board to discuss the probation office lease in the courthouse. The County Board purposed to move the office to the LEC building. Mr. Thomton told the Board they would prefer staying in the courthouse and that the Department of Corrections' policy is to not house probation offices in any law enforcement center. Rick has asked the Department of Correction to write the Board a letter stating their policy. The Board took no further action on this matter until they review the letter from the Department of Corrections.

Commissioner Stenberg moved, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski to authorize the Auditor to let out bids on the 1968 Ford truck that was purchased for the solid waste facility for the grapple crane which was mounted on the truck. The truck is now excess equipment. Motion unanimously carried.

The Board discussed the letter from the City of Thief River Falls regarding a County Health Officer. Letters were sent to Dr. Heinrichs and Dr. Langland to see if they would be interested in the County Health Officer position or would recommend someone for the position.

Commissioner Grabanski did not attend the afternoon meeting.

Mike Pauling, Preferable Fuels, Inc. and Rick Nordhagen, Future Fuel, Inc. appeared before the Board at 1:30. Mr. Nordhagen told the Board he had a meeting scheduled with the people interested in taking the steel cans at the solid waste processing facility. Mr. Pauling presented the statement for the final 10 per cent balance of the solid waste processing equipment, dryer system and compost shredder. He also presented a letter from Vernon Lundell of Lundell Mfg. certifying that the equipment has met the requirements of the purchase agreement. The separating equipment and all other equipment sold by Lundell Mfg. are backed by the guarantee of performance contract and also the warranty of one full year from date of final acceptance. An extended warranty is also available.

Commissioner Swanson introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, Preferable Fuels & Systems Inc. and Lundell Mfg. Company have met the conditions in the guarantee of performance specifications and delivery of the solid waste processing equipment subject to the agreement for purchase of equipment;

BE IT RESOLVED that the Pennington County Board accept the agreement as finalized and authorize the County Auditor to pay the final ten per cent in the amount of $52,650 to Preferable Fuels & Systems, Inc. and Lundell Mfg. Company as stated in the purchase agreement.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Pennington County Board also authorize the purchase of the dryer system currently installed at the facility for $25,000 subject to the same warranty as the other processing equipment.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and upon vote, unanimously adopted.

County Engineer Olson reviewed the 2 proposals received by the Solid Waste Committee to do the compost analysis and marketing survey in conjunction with the $6,000 grant received by Pennington County from Minnesota Department of Energy & Economic Development. Those submitting bids were Cal Recovery System - $5,000 and Pope-Reid Assoc. Inc. - $4,100. It was noted that Preferable Fuels & Systems, Inc. did not submit a proposal. Both proposals would provide all the services requested in the request for proposals. The Solid Waste Committee recommended that Pope-Reid Assoc., Inc. be selected as the engineers to do the study.

Commissioner Stenberg moved, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, that Pope-Reid Assoc., Inc. of St. Paul, Mn. be approved as the engineers to complete the scope of work as proposed in the request for proposal at a total cost not to exceed $4,100. Motion unanimously carried.

Discussion was held on replacing the IBM S-34 computer with an IBM S-36. No action taken.

Howard Person appeared before the Board to discuss corrective action to be taken by the University of Minnesota or Pennington County as a result of the salary overpayment on Andrea Nord.

Engineer Olson stated that John Wolbeck will be returning to work the first week of June.

Engineer Olson reviewed a petition to clean JD No. 1 along the south side of Section 26 & 27 and along the west side of Section 34 all in Hickory Township south to the Clearwater River. This will be scheduled for next year.

Engineer Olson discussed upgrading the railroad crossings on the Burlington Northern tracks on SA No. 3 and SA No. 30 (8th Street) with rubberized crossings. Burlington Northern is upgrading their tracks and because of this we could put rubberized crossings in for approximately $250 per ft. — a savings of $600 per ft. State Municipal Construction funds could be used for the crossing on SA No. 3 with an approximate cost of $10,500 with regular SA construction funds being used on SA No. 30 with approximate cost of $11,250. The Board approved both projects.

The Board discussed blacktopping Greenwood Street from Hwy 59 west to existing blacktop and from Hwy. 32 west to Barzen Street. No official action taken.

The Board approved blading of 1½ miles stub of Marshall County's CSAH No. 51 which is an extension of Pennington CSAH No. 21. As it is now Marshall County has to idle 5 miles to blade this 1½ miles. We will bill Marshall County the same as we do Townships.

The Board then discussed County Road No. 65 along the first mile East of the Sportsman Club. This road keeps slipping into JD No. 30. The Board will look at this on the next road inspection.

Commissioner Stenberg moved, seconded by Commissioner Swanson to transfer $107,952.33 from the Revenue Fund to Solid Waste Facility Fund ($67,574.37) and Solid Waste Bond Fund ($40,377.96). Motion unanimously carried.

The petition for cleaning CD No. 51 was discussed. Concerned landowners would like an estimate of the costs. Commissioner Hoffman and Engineer Olson will look into this.

Gary Finke requested permission to put a pipe in across CR No. 62. The Board advised the County Engineer to request the S.C.S. to assist in determining what would be involved in fixing the culverts along the North side of CR No. 62 at private driveways instead of cutting across the pavement. This would determine cost estimates for a group project if undertaken.

WHEREAS, the Governor's Rural Development Council (GRDC) administers the use of annual interest earnings generated by the Rural Rehabilitation Trust Fund (RRTF) and the RRTF began in the 1930s with loans made to Minnesota farmers. Today the interest of the RRTF is used to provide Demonstration Grants, Contracts, Seed Grants and Professional Staff to assist with rural development programs and projects.

WHEREAS, there have been attempts by legislators to alleviate the State Crisis by using the principal of the RRTF to fund various State Departments, whose interests are not strictly rural.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Pennington County Board of Commissioners support the position that the GRDC continue its present practice, that only the annual interest earnings generated from the RRTF be used for their programs.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Swanson and upon vote, unanimously adopted.

TRF Wins 3-2 With Last-Inning Rally

Jason Lane pitched a strong game in relief, Corey Olson was 2-for-3 at the plate and Thief River Falls struck for three runs with two out in the top of the seventh inning Tuesday as Post 117 edged Norman County West 3-2 in an American Legion baseball game at Halstad.

Norman County West, a 5-1 winner over Thief River Falls in the 1986 American Legion season opener back on June 3, got off to a 2-0 start in the bottom of the first inning against starter Joel Swanson.

Lane came on in relief of Swanson, who had trouble with walks, in the second inning and pitched one-hit, shutout ball the rest of the night, striking out eight and walking just two.

"He (Lane) pitched pretty well," acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Kerry Wollin.

Norman County West picked up just two hits in the game, but still carried that 2-0 lead into the seventh when Thief River Falls collected three of its six hits.

Chris Nelson led off the seventh with a single and Swanson reached base on an error. The next two batters struck out, but Olson came up with an RBI single for a 2-1 game and a double steal worked for a 2-2 tie. Lane then singled in the winning run.

Thief River Falls, 11-17, will close out its 1986 regular season schedule Thursday with a 7 p.m. game at Crookston, site of the Class AA Ninth District American Legion tournament July 24-27.

Babe Ruth Playoff Games Underway At Crookston

Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods advanced, while Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola Bottling was eliminated Tuesday in the first day of the seven-team, double-elimination Lake Agassiz South Sub-District Babe Ruth baseball tournament for 14-15-year-olds at Crookston.

Set back from Monday to Tuesday because of wet weather, first day of tournament play found the No. 2-seeded East Grand Forks A's beating No. 7 Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola Bottling 10-4, No. 3-seeded Crookston Gold doubled No. 6 Red Lake Falls 8-4 and No. 4-seeded Crookston Blue outscored No. 6 East Grand Forks Blue Jays 15-10 in opening round matches.

Crookston Gold then upset the East Grand Forks A's 3-2 and No. 1-seeded Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods, after receiving a first round bye, downed Crookston Blue 19-6 in Round 2.

Meanwhile, Red Lake Falls ousted Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola Bottling 14-7 in a loser's bracket elimination game yesterday afternoon.

Play was scheduled to resume today (Wednesday) with 8:30 a.m. games in the loser's bracket matching Red Lake Falls vs. East Grand Forks Blue Jays and Crookston Blue vs. East Grand Forks A's. Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods and Crookston Gold were to meet in an 11 a.m. game that would send the winner to the finals and guarantee them a berth in the Lake Agassiz District tournament later this week in East Grand Forks.

Winners in today's 8:30 a.m. loser's bracket games had a 1:30 p.m. match-up. That winner, in turn, will meet the Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods-Crookston Gold loser Thursday at 10 a.m. for a title shot at 2 that afternoon.

Top finishers will advance to the Lake Agassiz District tournament, scheduled to be played Friday, Saturday, and Sunday in East Grand Forks. The four-team, double-elimination state tournament qualifying event already has Roseau and Warroad as the No. 1 and No. 2 finishers, respectively, from the North Sub-District field.

Pepsi vs. EGF A's

Underdog Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola Bottling battled gamely, but fell to the East Grand Forks A's 10-4 in opening round play.

East Grand Forks had an 8-5 base hit edge. Adam Lane had a pair of hits for Pepsi-Cola Bottling, including a double. Corey Poole was the losing pitcher.

There were 13 errors in the loosely-played contest, seven of them charged against the winning A's.

Pepsi vs. RLF

Thief River Falls Pepsi-Cola tried to stay alive in the double-elimination tournament in the loser's bracket, grabbing a 4-1 lead against Red Lake Falls, but lost 14-7.

Red Lake Falls had a 10-9 base hit advantage and Pepsi-Cola Bottling topped the error charts 4-3. Jon Anderson had two hits and Jeff Feragen had a pair of RBI for the Thief River Falls squad, while Corey Poole, Chad Kleinvachter and Jason Furuseth shared the pitching duties.

"They didn't give up," praised Thief River Falls coach Howard Dalager. "For a bunch of 14-year-olds, they did all right for themselves."

Dalager praised the entire squad for the tournament effort, including Anderson, Feragen, Poole, Kleinvachter, Furuseth, Adam Lane, Jason Sauve, Chris Lawrence, Sean Defreece and Brett Larson.

Pepsi-Cola Bottling stands 6-15. The Thief River Falls squad will be idle until a season-ending East Grand Forks Invitational August 2-3.

TG Sporting Goods vs. Blue

Leading just 7-5 through five innings, No. 1-seeded Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods finally put the game away with a 12-run sixth inning that burned Crookston Blue 19-6.

TG Sporting Goods is 15-5 for the year. The Thief River Falls squad lost a 4-3 decision to Crookston Blue in the 1986 regular season finale last Thursday.

EAST GRAND FORKS runner Rick Hartje was tagged out by Thief River Falls catcher Kory Joppru when he tried to score from second base on a single by Blaine Lenoir in the fifth inning of Monday's American Legion baseball game played at the fairgrounds diamond. Leftfielder Chris Nelson made the throw to the plate.

EGF Collects Another Easy Legion Win Over TRF, 13-1

East Grand Forks hammered Thief River Falls 15-5 Sunday in the final round of the five-team, round-robin East Grand Forks Invitational American Legion baseball tournament. The two teams are scheduled for a quick rematch Monday in a regular season Class AA Ninth District encounter on Thief River Falls soil, and Post 117 coach Mark Lundin welcomed the opportunity to make amends for Sunday's blow-out, promising a much better showing by his club.

"It won't be 15-5," he said.

No, it wasn't 15-5. It was 13-1, East Grand Forks in another rout.

Every East Grand Forks batter had at least one hit as the visitors pounded out 16 hits in just five innings of work, first against righthander Mike Anderson and then against lefthander Corey Olson. Garrett Hjelle, Troy Ausmus and Rick Hartje were all 3-for-4 for the winners. Hjelle had a home run and four RBI. Ausmus, the winning pitcher, had a pair of doubles. Paul Szymanski also homered for the 16-15 East Grand Forks squad.

While East Grand Forks took batting practice, Thief River Falls mustered just four hits, two of them by Jason Lane. Only five Thief River Falls balls even made it to the outfield — a double by Lane, singles by Chris Nelson and Anderson, and a couple of fly ball outs. Lane's second hit was of the infield variety.

East Grand Forks got 10 runs in the first inning of the Sunday tournament meeting. The winners got only three in their first at-bat Monday, but it was enough to set the singe for another one-sided win. Ausmus started the game by beating out an infield single and Matt Christianson bounced a single into right field. A ground-rule double down the left field line by Hartje plated the first run. An infield ground-out by Hjelle made it 2-0 and an error on a ball hit by Blaine Lenoir gave East Grand Forks the 3-0 headstart.

Four East Grand Forks hits and a pair of Thief River Falls errors drove Anderson off the mound in the second inning as the margin climbed to 8-0. It started with a home run by Szymanski over the left field fence and ended with a two-run homer by Hjelle, also to left. In-between was a double by Ausmus, that scored a run.

Thief River Falls' lone run came in the bottom of the second when Anderson singled to right and Lane followed with an RBI double into the right-center field gap.

Hartje singled with one out in the fourth, moved to third on an infield single by Hjelle and scored on a throwing error on a delayed double steal for a 9-1 game.

East Grand Forks went home early by scoring four runs in the fifth inning. The winners padded their base hit total that frame with six hits, but it wasn't exactly an assault. Tom Hagen started it by beating out an infield single. Ausmus came up with the only solid blow of the inning, an RBI double to right, then Christianson dropped a bloop single into right field and Nelson walked to load the bases. Hartje and Hjelle then had identical RBI bloop singles behind second and Lenoir singled through a drawn-in infield to make it 13-1.

With the win, East Grand Forks assured itself of the No. 1 seed from the North Half in the 1986 Class AA Ninth District tournament July 24-27 in Crookston. East Grand Forks, Crookston and Thief River Falls make up the North Half of the six-team, double-elimination set-up, with Moorhead, Fergus Falls and Detroit Lakes forming the South Half. Thief River Falls, 10-17 with the loss, completes its regular season schedule Thursday with a 7 p.m. game at Crookston.

Plan To Organize Sharptail Grouse Society Chapter

Organizational meeting of a Northwest chapter of the Minnesota Sharptail Grouse society will be conducted Sunday, August 17, at 11 a.m. at the Best Western inn of Thief River Falls. All sportsmen and others interested in survival and resurgence of the sharptail grouse are encouraged to attend.

The society hopes to work with the Minnesota department of natural resources, farmers, sportsmen's groups and others in attempts to increase sharptail numbers from the historic lows of recent years. With passage of the Reinvest in Minnesota (RIM) bill the DNR has allocated $100,000 specifically for shaprtail grouse habitat management in northwestern Minnesota.

The RIM program, along with thousands of acres enrolled in the federal conservation reserve program, are expected to help in the effort. Public support is needed, however, to encourage a continuing effort on behalf of the sharptail which once was the major game bird in the northern part of the state.

For more information about the grouse society and formation of the Northwest chapter, contact Gordon Forester at the DNR office in Thief River Falls city auditorium or call 681-7789.

DNR Foresters Direct Tree Planting Work

Late April and May is traditional tree planting time in northern Minnesota, a busy time of the year for forestry agencies. Agencies such as the Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Forest Service, County Land Departments and the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources all coordinate tree planting on agency lands.

Use of containerized planting stock has even extended planting well into the summer months. In addition the DNR advises and assists with planting trees on private lands.

Spring planting season coincides with spring fire season. This complicates an already busy season. Last spring the abundance of moisture minimized the demand for time suppressing wildfire. Those conditions were also ideal for good survival of tree seedlings.

Wet conditions did make access to many sites difficult. ATV's were a must for hauling in trees and tree planters. The seemingly continuous rain and cool weather made it miserable for the planting crews.

Most tree planting on state land is contracted and done by hand. These contract tree planters are professionals. Some have planted continuously since last January in the southern U.S., slowly working their way north to Minnesota. These people average 3,000 seedlings a day each. Contractors use a tool called a Hodad. The Hodad resembles a grub hoe, quite unlike the traditional planting bar or spade shovel.

Total number of trees planted for the state this year in the Warroad area was 1,225,700. Seedlings included Norway pine, jack pine, white pine, white spruce, black spruce, white cedar, tamarack, green ash, and wildlife packets of honey suckle and caragana shrubs.

Sites ranged as far west as Middle River, north along the Canadian border and south to Grygla. State land planting is coordinated by forestry personnel located at Warroad, Clear River, Wannaska and Grygla.

In recent years, tree planting on state and county lands in northern Minnesota has been financed with BWCA funds. This in money allocated by the federal government to compensate for the ban on logging imposed within the BWCA.

Commercial forest acreage is diminishing due to urban sprawl, agriculture, and recreation. The use of computers, photo-copiers and other written material is causing the demand for forest products to increase faster than the rate of population growth. Other wood uses increase more or less in line with population growth. As under-developed countries approach our economic level, we can also expect their demand for forest resources to escalate.

Our resources will be very much in demand in the export market.

Forest managers must compensate for nationwide predicted shortages of timber. The goal is to grow the most suitable tree species to the site. This considers soil, drainage, PH, wildlife needs and other factors. If natural regeneration methods fail, artificial planting or seeding must be considered.

Trees planted today may be ready for a merchantable thinning in 25 years and some may be ready for harvest in 40 to 60 years. Just as our predecessors planted trees in the CCC and WPA projects that are now being thinned and harvested, we must plant trees for our children and grandchildren.

AN ALL-STAR team will represent the Lake Agassiz District 13-year-olds at the 1986 Babe Ruth Prep baseball tournament beginning Friday in St. Paul. The all-star concept will represent northwestern Minnesota at the 11-team, double-elimination state tournament for the first time, eliminating the need for a season-ending district tournament in early July. Thief River Falls, Roseau, Crookston and East Grand Forks will resume their regular season games next week and extend the 1986 season into an August 2-3 district tournament in Thief River Falls. Members of the state tournament-bound Lake Agassiz All-Stars are, front row left to right, Mike Swanson, Dale Martell, Jamie Harder, Troy Coltom and Steve Sabo of Thief River Falls; Shane DeMarais, Chad Wardner, Rusty DeMarais, Doug Johnson and Joel Shaffer of Crookston; back row left to right, coach Howard Dalager of Thief River Falls; Brian Bakke, Corey Quirk, Nate Carlin, Jason Hearn and Matt Meyer of East Grand Forks; Bobby Schwehr, Mike Huglen, David McDonald, Todd Wensloff and coach Steve Huglen of Roseau. Coaches in the four communities made the all-star team selections.

EXPLORE Minnesota STATE PARKS

Friday, July 18, Hayes Lake State Park welcomes wildflower slides and a presentation by area botanist, Milt Sather. The program will begin at 8 p.m. indoors at Park Headquarters.

Sather has identified and photographed wildflowers in Roseau County for many years and now features the best of this collection in his presentation.

Although the program is indoors, visitors are advised to bring lawn chairs for more comfortable seating. Coffee and lemonade will be served.

On Sunday, July 20, join the park naturalist for a program featuring Rockpile Geology beginning at 2 p.m. at Hayes Dam. From red hot volcanoes to ancient oceans, this program ventures back in time to discover the exciting origins of many of our area rocks. Visitors are invited to bring any interesting or unusual rocks from their rockpiles to add to the program.

All park programs are free of charge although a vehicle permit is required on all vehicles entering Minnesota State Parks. For more information, contact Hayes Lake State Park at 425-7504.

It looks like an excellent year for all the berries in the park. Blueberry picking is well underway with chokecherries and pincherries just beginning to ripen. Please remember that vehicle permits are required on all roads in state parks with parking permitted in designated parking lots only.

Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has announced the following information of interest to Duck Stamp artists, collectors, and purchasers:

Aspiring artists may submit entries for the 1986-87 Federal Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp Contest. The contest opened July 1 and closes October 1. Judging will be held November 4-5 at the Interior Department in Washington, D.C. The winning design will grace the 1987-88 Federal Duck Stamp. This year's contest features a number of important changes:

+ Entry fee has been increased to $50 and must be submitted in the form of a cashier's check or money order (no personal checks will be accepted). Proceeds are used to offset the cost of conducting the Duck Stamp contest.

+ Image size for entries has been increased to 7 inches by 10 inches in horizontal format. Entries must be matted on a single, 9-inch-by-12-inch white or off-white mat. This increase in size is designed to allow artists additional space for waterfowl designs that emphasize habitat backgrounds.

+ Judges will be instructed to look for designs that feature waterfowl in action — birds in flight, moving on water, or otherwise active within their natural habitat.

Complete copies of the rules and regulations for the 1986 contest are available from the Duck Stamp Coordinator, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Room 1025A, Main Interior Building, Washington, D.C. 20240.

Ten sheets of the 1984-85 Golden Anniversary Duck Stamp will be auctioned to the general public beginning September 1 in the second and final bid offer for these prized collector's items. Sealed bids must be received by October 31, and successful bidders will be announced at the 1986 Federal Duck Stamp Contest judging on November 5 in Washington, D.C. Submission of payment by successful bidders must be received within 10 days of that date.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has set a minimum bid of $2,000 for each sheet of stamps. Each sheet contains 120 uncut stamps and bears the words "1934-84 50th Anniversary" in gold lettering on the selvage of each of four panels. Sheet numbers 5 through 14 are being offered for sale out of the original limited press run of 15 sheets; sheet numbers 1 thourgh 4 were auctioned in 1985 and sheet number 15 will be given to the Smithsonian Institution.

Bids must be submitted to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (OPUM), Room 554 Matomic Building, 18th and C Streets, N.W., Washington, D.C, 20240, Attn.: Duck Stamp Sheets. Complete information regarding bidding procedures appears in the May 9, 1986, Federal Register.

Charleston, SC artist Burton Moore's rendition of a fulvous whistling duck appeared July 1 as the 1986-87 Federal Duck Stamp sale began at most post offices and many national wildlife refuges throughout the United States. The $7.50 revenue stamp raises funds for the creation of new refuges and waterfowl production areas. Waterfowl hunters must purchase a Federal Duck Stamp before they can hunt ducks, geese, and swans; many non-hunters and other conservationists also buy Duck Stamps as a convenient and direct way of contributing toward protection of habitat for a variety of wildlife species.

The Work Experience and Career Exploration Program helps 14-and 15-year old youths likely to drop out of school, according to the Labor Department's annual report for fiscal year 1985.

— News From Minnesota DNR —

Hunters who have applied for permits through computerized drawings conducted by the Department of Natural Resources must notify the DNR's License Bureau if their name has changed and if they have been issued a different driver's license number or public safety identification number. (A name change commonly occurs, for example, with a change in marital status.)

Officials explained that the numbers are used to identify persons who have entered the computerized drawings for permits to take bear, moose, turkey and antlerless deer.

Preference in some drawings is given to those who have applied in previous drawings but were not selected, or to those who have waited the longest to receive a second permit after receiving one in a previous drawing.

Unless the Lincense Bureau is notified, a person who has married and changed their driver's license or public safety ID number would be treated as a new applicant in any drawing and would lose whatever preference rating they would otherwise have acquired. Persons reporting a change should include their former name and number and their current name and number.

All applicants should use their name exactly as it appears on their driver's license for all permit applications.

DNR' License Bureau is in the DNR Building, 500 Lafayette Rd., St. Paul, MN 55155-4026, and the phone number is (612) 296-4509. For outstate, call toll-free 800-652-9747 (ask for DNR).

Itasca State Park Bike Trail

Visitors to Itasca State Park this summer will find that a new paved bicycle trail, located away from the park road, has been built from Douglas Lodge to the Headwaters site on Lake Itasca.

The new trail segment was built through the cooperative efforts of the Department of Natural Resources Division of Parks and the DNR Trails and Waterways Unit. Blacktopping was done by Clearwater County with funds allocated under the Great River Road program.

With construction of the new trail section, bicyclists can now ride completely around Lake Itasca, using the Wilderness Drive, and be able to view many of the major points of interest within the park.

Entire circular loop through the parks is 16 miles in length, although segments of almost any length may be traveled, said park officials.

Persons who do not bring their own bicycle may rent them at the park.

State Park Programs

Department of Natural Resources has initiated two new programs this summer designed to increase the quality and satisfaction of the visitor's state park visit.

DNR State Parks Director Don Davison said several parks have established "Trading Posts" where visitors may purchase souvenir state park button, lapel pins, mugs, calendars, posters, guidebooks and state park permits.

"All of the items sold at the trading posts make excellent souvenirs and gifts," he said, "and as an added benefit, all revenue from sales issued to maintain and preserve state park resources."

Another innovation this year is a "Passport Club" in which club members receive a special passport and earn awards and recognition for visiting Minnesota's 64 state parks.

Club members have their passports stamped at each state park, providing them with an official record and souvenir of their visit. Members who visit 8, 16, 32 or all 64 parks will earn free patches, posters, nights of free camping and a plaque.

"Passport Club kits are available at all state parks," said Davison, "and cost only $4.95. They include a passport, club bumper sticker and park directory. In addition, members receive special mailings of state park publications. A member visiting all 64 parks receives over $30 in awards."

He said purchases at state parks may be made with cash, check or money orders, and three state parks — Itasca, Tower Soudan and William O'Brian — will accept VISA or MasterCard.

"By fall, said Davison, "all parks will be accepting credit card purchases."

Further information on the Passport Club and Trading Post programs is available by contacting DNR Parks and Recreation, 500 Lafayette Rd., St. Paul, MN 55155-4039, or call (612) 296-4776.

New RIM Act Donation

First donation of land by private individuals under the Reinvest In Minnesota (RIM) Act passed by the 1986 Legislature has been made announces the Department of Natural Resources.

The Act provides for private donations to the "Critical Habitat Private Sector Account," and the first donators are Mr. and Mrs. Dan Roberts of Concord, MA.

Their gift consists of 434 acres of land bordering the Willow River in Aitkin County, according to Kim Hennings, DNR Section of Wildlife. He said the acreage includes forest wildlife habitat with the potential for managing the property's open fields and brushy areas for sharp-tailed grouse.

Sharp-tailed grouse populations have declined in recent years due to changes in habitat brought about by intensive agricultural and forestry practices.

Hennings said the tract of land received from the Roberts will be designated the "Roberts-Wickstrom Wildlife Management Area."

Critical Habitat Matching Program provides a means for private individuals and groups to help fund the cost of acquiring and developing critical fish and wildlife habitat. Contributions to the fund are "matched" by state funds appropriated to the account.

The Legislature appropriated $2.5 million from state bond proceeds to the Critical Habitat Account for the current biennium. For the Roberts' donation, said Hennings, the amount of the state's match will equal the value of the property.

He said the Department is in the process of determining priority projects to be funded by the Critical Habitat Matching monies. The types of areas being considered for acquisition and development under the Critical Habitat Program are sharp-tailed grouse habitat, native prairie and grasslands, winter deer and pheasant areas, important wetlands, undisturbed plant communities, habitat for rare plant and animal species, spawning and reproduction areas for fish, water sources for trout streams, and access points for fishermen and management purposes.

Contributions to the account may be in cash, land, or interests in land. The Department will review all proposed contributions in the form of land or interests of land to ensure that they meet the criteria of "critical habitat" specified under the RIM legislation.

Cash donations for the Critcal Habitat Fund are now being accepted by the Department. Checks should be made payable to: "Department of Natural Resources" and should indicate that the donation is for the "Critical Habitat Matching Account."

All cash donations should be mailed to: Department of Natural Resources, Financial Management Bureau, 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155-4035.

Persons interested in donating lands or interests in lands should contact Kim Hennings, Section of Wildlife, Land Acquisition Coordinator, 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155-4007, or by phone at (612) 296-3344.

Between 1980 and 1985 the number of employed wage and salary workers rose from 87.5 million to 94.5 million, according to the Labor Department's publication, Monthly Labor Review of May 1986.

OURS AT LAST!
SOLD

President Clark K. Wallace advises homebuyers not to delay their purchase any longer. He points out that even if rates did drop another half percent, the cost of a median priced home is expected to increase four or five percent this year — thus cancelling out a possible interest rate drop, and resulting in higher payments.

THESE COUNT IN PICKING A HOME

These are the most important considerations to consumers buying a new home, according to a recent survey by "Professional Builder" magazine:
- A good investment and appreciating value — 65%
- Style and appearance — 40%
- Size and number of rooms — 38%
- Proximity to work — 17%

Memoriam
In Loving Memory Of Ingvold and Sheldon

Streams have no ending,
For the ocean never ends;
Roads and pathways wind forever,
Though we can't see around bends;
Our view stops at the horizon,
Yet the sky and earth stretch on;
Though we cannot see our loved ones,
We know they are not gone.
For God has promised life eternal,
Far beyond what we can see.
Knowing streams, paths, horizons,
Need we ask how this can be?

RFA Offers Help To Struggling Farmers

Minnesota farmers, sinking under real estate debt, may now be able to save themselves by restructuring their loans under Minnesota's newly-formed, state-backed Rural Finance Administration (RFA), according to the Minnesota attorney general's office.

Expected to become operational later this summer, the RFA will enable eligible borrowers to lower their annual debt service costs by deferring principal and a portion of interest costs until the end of the restructured loan period. The RFA will be able to purchase 25 per cent (up to $50,000) of a first mortgage restructured loan for the redemption of the farm homestead. The new program's targeted customers are those farmers who have a reasonable chance of financially succeeding if given the time and the relief provided by a restructured loan.

To be eligible, borrowers must:

+ live in Minnesota or be a domestic family farm corporation, as defined in Minnesota Statutes section 500.24, subdivision 2;

+ be the principal operator of the farm;

+ have received at least 50 per cent of his or her annual gross income from farming, and farming must be the principal occupation of the borrower;

+ have a debt-to-asset ratio equal to or greater than 50 per cent. In determining this ratio, the asset value of real estate must be determined by a qualified appraisal of the property's current market value. Such an appraisal considers comparable sales in the area and the reasonable productive value of the property based upon its past production history;

+ be unable to meet projected annual expenses without restructuring the loan.

In addition, the borrower's projected annual expenses, including operating expenses, family living, and interest expenses after the restructuring, must not exceed 95 per cent of the borrower's projected annual income considering prior production history and uniform projected prices for farm production. Eligible borrowers can receive a restructured agricultural loan or a homestead redemption loan, but not both.

Qualified lenders under the Act include any bank, credit union, savings and loan association chartered by the state or federal government, a unit of the Farm Credit System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, and any insurance company, fund or other financial institution doing business as an agricultural lender within the state.

Only first mortgage real estate debts qualify for restructuring under this program, and either lender or borrower may propose restructuring. After the lender determines preliminary eligibility, it must conduct the necessary financial analysis and appraisals and prepare the loan restructuring agreement. The agreement must then be approved by the borrower, the lender and the FRA. The RFA will then purchase an interest in the restructured loan from the lender, effectively reducing the capital commitment of the lender for the term of the loan.

Loan obligations are restructured by dividing them into two parts —

1) a Primary Principal portion, equal t the current market value of the property pledged as security for the loan. It is this portion of the loan in which the RFA will purchase a 25 or 50 per cent interest;

2) a Secondary Principal portion, which is that portion of the current loan which is in excess of the current market value of the real estate.

The borrower would be responsible only for making market rate interest payments on the new primary principal of the loan or an agreed-upon portion of it. All principal payments would be deferred until the end of the new loan. In addition, interest would accrue on the secondary principal at a below market rate and would also be deferred.

At the conclusion of a restructured loan, the borrower owes all primary and secondary principal, and any deferred interest which has accrued. However, if a current appraisal establishes that the market value of the real estate is less than the amount of debt owed on the restructured loan, that portion of the debt which exceeds market value must be forgiven by the lender. If the value is equal to or exceeds the total debt, the entire debt is payable to the lender. This assures that at the end of a restructured loan, a borrower cannot be indebted for more than the current market value of the real estate and will have had a period of improved cash flow. If you want more information about the RFA, call the Minnesota Attorney General's Farm and Home Preservation Hotline, 1-800-652-9747.

Tokyo Agreement On Economics Holds Promise

by Walter W. Heller
U of M Economist

Two weeks ago here, I spoke of the likelihood that some good would come of the Tokyo Agreement on economic policy coordination among the world's leading industrial countries.

Since then, I've been in West Germany and talked with a number of German officials — most notably Karl Otto Poehl, the head of the German central bank. This gave me an opportunity to see firsthand how tough it is to put that policy coordination into practice. Tough, but let me add, not impossible.

The most logical and urgent action called for now is a coordinated move to lower interest rates. But both Japan and Germany — despite their low inflation, high unemployment and plenty of economic slack — are resisting U.S. pressure to stimulate their economies.

Poehl, the German counterpart of Paul Volcker, argues with skill and grace that Germany's economy is really stronger than it looks; that at 3.5 per cent, their discount rate is already low; that their nine per cent unemployment is largely structural, that their negative inflation, like ours, won't last; that the welcome drop in oil prices already provides a nice shot in the arm for German consumers; that Germany is limited in what it can do by the high interest rates of its European partners and so on.

But one detects that behind that tough defense lies a reasonable man who could be persuaded to go that last mile on interest rates, not so much as a world economic locomotive, but for the good of the German economy. And one suspects that, like most central bankers, Poehl may wish that the fiscal authorities in Bonn would run a less rigid fiscal policy.

Europe and Japan have been getting pretty much of a free ride on the back of U.S. expansion. Our huge deficits and strong dollar generated their export booms. Now, as we curb our deficits and bring the dollar down, it's their turn to boost domestic demand and provide offsets to our tighter budget policy and falling dollar — not primarily for our sake but for their own economic health.

If they refuse to do so, even when their unemployment is sky-high, their inflation is so low and their economic engines are idling, what can we do for leverage? We can talk the dollar down some more and cut our interest rates further. That would not only motivate Germany and Japan to move, but would put some starch into our sputtering recovery.

Consumer Group To Stress Safety Near Swimming Pools

Shocked by the drowning of nearly 300 young children each year in residential swimming pools and spas, government safety experts are warning parents and pool owners to maintain constant, alert supervision of children in and around pools and spas.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, lack of constant supervision is one of the reasons why drowning is the fourth leading cause of death to children under five years of age. The agency said that of the 600 drownings in residential pools in 1982, nearly 300 were to children under five, and almost one-third were children below two years of age. Another 3,000 children under five were involved in submersion accidents, some resulting in permanent brain damage.

"It is vital that parents and caretakers be aware of steps they can take now to help reduce the high number of annual child drownings," said CPSC Commissioner Carol G. Dawson. "The most obvious precaution is constant supervision. Children are naturally curious and have the ability to crawl or walk quickly to the water's edge. One moment you have a healthy child, full of life, and the next minute that precious life is lost or damaged permanently. Continual supervision of children around swimming pools and spas is critical."

CPSC offered the following safety precautions for parents and pool owners:

- Never leave a child unsupervised near a pool. Be certain that children do not have access to the pool area through an open gate, open door or through an open window. Fence in the pool area completely, and install self-closing and self-locking gates. Latches should be located out of reach of young children.
- Flotation devices are not a substitute for adult supervision. Don't consider children "drown proof" because they have had swimming lessons. They should be supervised at all times.
- Keep toys and other objects attractive to children away from the pool area because a child playing with such toys could accidentally fall into the water.
- Never use a pool with the cover partly in place. Children could become entrapped under the cover.
- With above-ground pools, remove the steps leading to the pool whenever the pool is not being used.
- Do not leave children unsupervised around a pool. A portable phone near the pool area should be considered during the outdoor pool season.
- Finally, learn how to perform cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) in the event of a pool emergency. Never assume the victim is dead.

"We must all be alert to the dangers associated with pools and spas, and be sure we are prepared to handle an emergency should a drowning accident occur," Dawson added.

Eyes Of Faith

Rachel, age six, was spending vacation with her grandparents out on their large farm. Grandad had taken her for a long tour of the farm. They went over the fields of growing corn, beans, and everything else birthed and nurtured by God's great world.

When she returned, Rachel found her grandmother busy in the kitchen. "I wish I had granddaddy's eyes," she said.

"Why so, honey?"

"Well, he saw God in everything out there. He saw God in the corn, the trees, the little spring of water, even in the birdnest we found. Know what, he even saw God in the cows and horses and pigs. I sure wish I had his eyes."

"Ah, honey," grandmother said, putting her arms around her little granddaughter. "It is not your grandaddy's eyes you want. It is his FAITH."

Then she kissed Rachel, knelt down and looked her straight in the eyes. "One day, if you work at it, you will have his faith. Then you will see God in everything. Because this is His world. And He is EVERYWHERE if you have faith to see Him."

CATARACTS

Cataracts are one of the most common causes of loss of vision. They cause a gradual loss of vision, making it difficult to focus well, and often cause problems in bright light. They can occur at any age, but are more common the older we are. Many people think that a cataract is a film growing over the eye, but actually a cataract is a clouding of the natural, living human lens inside the eye. When the lens clouds over, we call it a cataract. No one knows for sure what causes a cataract, but they are more common with aging and with years of exposure to the sun. They can also be seen after an injury.

Fortunately, modern surgery enables us to safely remove a cataract and replace it with an implant lens, to restore good vision in the great majority of cases. We no longer have to wait until a cataract is "ripe", surgery can be done when vision is [illegible] for everyday activities such as reading or driving. Nowadays an overnight stay in the hospital is not required, and patients are back to their normal routine in a short time.

Food Stamps For Farmers

America is the most amazing nation.

Here we have the world's most skilled, productive and efficient farmers, but we don't let them earn enough money to buy some of the food they raise. So we force them to accept charity. In our greatness and our goodness we 'give' them just enough of their food to keep themselves and their hard-working families alive. We call it food stamps.

The very people who have produced such an overwhelming abundance of riches as to confound our leaders for more than a half-century past, now, are today so exploited, so cheated in the market, that they can't even buy of their own superabundance. This is how America rewards her most productive citizens! What charity! Let's go back to beginnings and see how this came about:

Starvation was the human condition for thousands of years — from the cave times to after World War I. If you'll remember your Bible readings, "a land flowing with milk and honey" was the promised place. Food in plenty was heaven on earth to the hungry ancients.

You'll notice the old Dutch Masters liked to paint pictures of fat women: For a well-fed wife was the same status symbol then that a gas-guzzling car is today: shows you've got it made. You were A Success, then, if you could buy enough groceries to over-feed your wife. Today, you're A Success if you can buy her a week at the fat farm.

Then America happened to the world! Here was land in plenty — totally different from the Old Country. There, the nobles held all the land in vast estates worked by serfs. Or, as in France, you might inherit several tiny plots scattered around. You lived in the village; you and Mom and the kids all walked out to your patch fields to dig and hoe every day.

Then America invented the farm family and the family farm: Here, for the first time, an ordinary family could own land and live on it and work it and enjoy the fruits of their labor without being forced to give most of it to his proud lordship.

Such a startling idea captured the minds and hearts of millions. They flocked to these free shores by the shipload. Generations struggled, endured inconceivable hardships, to earn some land of their very own.

This rugged, free and independent farm life produced a rugged, free and independent type of farm citizen such as the world had never known: People who could think and create, invent and work, fight and produce like no other race of men and women. After every war, after every depression, after every national calamity and world disaster, America rebuilt herself and, after both world wars, rebuilt the world and fed the nations — because she was founded on strong, resilient, productive farm families.

American farm families became the world's most productive because they led the world in inventiveness, in courage to try bold new things like the binder, the steam traction engine, then the gas tractor, the combine, hybrid corn, fertilizers, irrigation, antibiotics, electronics, cybernetics. It was the families selves who supplies the capital to launch these new and more efficient ways of producing food. They did not, like governments, spend taxes. They did not, like corporations, spend stockholders' investments. They scrimped and saved and sacrificed for that new tractor, that new computer.

Now they and their fruits are being destroyed. I'm not saying farmers are totally innocent. Some of them made mistakes. Some got too greedy and got too big too fast. Some of them believed the government, tore up their fence rows and cut down their woodlots to grow more grain. Some were so stupid as to think the markets are honest, fair, competitive and looking out for farmers' welfare. Some were so dumb they thought the government would always look out for them, always take care of them. To this extent, farm families are caught in their own trap.

New national wealth can come from nowhere but the soil. Thus we impoverish ourselves by restricting farm production. Chemurgy has proved it can make almost anything from farm crops — fuels to provide renewable energy, plastics that in large part take the place of metals — using replaceable crops instead of irreplaceable petroleum and minerals. But national policy says no, kill off the farmers and burn up the oil and mine out of the minerals. If we have another war, depression, other national crisis or world disaster, maybe the U.S. can recover without this strong foundation of farm families she's stood upon before now. Maybe the technologists will save us.

Destroy farm families and you destroy America. Food stamps for food producers! — a national disgrace!

Supporting Pay Equity

Following opinion in regard to pay equity was written by Betsy Dick, staff writer for the Post Publications in the Twin Cities suburban area:

Work done primarily by women has been undervalued for a long time.

This is about to change.

The first step in redressing pay inequities in the public sector has been completed. A compensation study determining the relative value of jobs done by city employees shows just what the framers of the state's 1984 Pay Equity Act expected: that in most cities, some female-dominated groups of city employees such as secretaries have been underpaid in relation to some male-dominated groups such as light equipment operators.

Now, it's up to cities to adjust pay rates so that all employee groups are being compensated according to their actual worth to the city. The law gives cities until August 1987 to implement changes.

Many flaws exist in this first attempt at finding a basis on which to value and compensate properly all kinds of work. The system is subjective rather than objective, and therefore subject to challenge. It ignores the marketplace's role in setting compensation rates for all levels of employees. It does not allow for pay raises based on performance or seniority. And, not the least concern, it could be very expensive.

Nevertheless, cities in Minnesota should press forward to implement comparable worth pay systems. For one thing, the law mandates it. For another, the just treatment of all employees requires it. Comparable worth provides the best framework yet devised to correct the serious undervaluing of clerical, secretarial, and other female-dominated work.

Comparing, say, manual dexterity and speed with the skills required to operate a jackhammer is difficult. So is comparing the relative importance of streets and payrolls, or of licenses and traffic tickets. But these comparisons must be made if pay rates are truly to reflect the value of all jobs.

In a society which places a high value on information, employees who process words and numbers should receive compensation commensurate with that value. Without the continual flow of information, from legal contracts to budgets to city council agendas, city government could not function. These jobs have been low-paying not because their importance is small, or because the skills required are minimal, but because they have almost always been done by women.

Now a system exists to order jobs done in a city according to each job's value, not the gender of the person doing it. In spite of comparable worth's obvious difficulties, it can and must be tried. It is an essential beginning effort at solving a serious problem, and cities should approach its implementation with the spirit of the law, not just the letter, in mind.

Challenges to comparable worth are sure to come; revisions, modifications, possibly even major reworking of the system may be necessary. These possibilities should not deter cities from whole-hearted implementation now. The sooner we begin, the sooner the difficulties can be worked out, and the sooner we will have a truly solid, effective means of valuing work.

Borrowed Nonsense

Observing their 50th wedding anniversary, the couple agreed that attention to two books had allowed them to have a very happy marriage. "I handle the cookbook," the wife said, "and he handles the checkbook."

"I'm sorry, honey," the young wife greeted her husband at the door, "but I'm afraid your dinner is a little burnt tonight."

"I'll be darned," the husband replied, "I didn't hear about any fire at McDonald's."

Robust Barley Leads State In Acreage

According to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service, Minnesota farmers planted an estimated 1.2 million acres of barley in 1986, bringing total acreage to the same level as last year and showing a 14 per cent increase from 1984's 1.05 million barley acres.

The major growing districts are estimated to have planted 97 per cent of the total barley acreage in Minnesota. The northwest district is in the lead with 1,017,000 acres and the west central district follows with 144,900 acres of barley. The remaining seven districts throughout the state are estimated to have planted 38,100 acres, only three per cent of the total.

The unseasonably warm days that occurred in March raised hopes for an early planting season, but the cool, damp weather that followed was to prove otherwise. Mid-April rains kept soils very wet in the Red River Valley and central regions of the state allowing very little field work to be done in these two major barley producing areas. In the first week of May the rain continued to fall and surplus topsoil moisture was reported in 83 per cent of the state. Barley planting was estimated as being only 10 per cent complete as compared with 64 per cent which had been planted last year on that same date. Planting and emergence of barley were the latest for the date since 1979. Drying conditions toward the end of May gave farmers a chance to get back into the fields. Barley planted reached 69 per cent complete as compared with the 91 per cent five-year average and 97 per cent planted by the same time year last year. Emergence was a low 32 per cent whereas on the same date in 1985 barley emergence had reached the 85 per cent mark.

June's first week of dry, sunny weather brought planting to completion. Although jointing and heading were still behind the five-year average, June's ideal growing conditions allowed them to close the gap somewhat. Jointing reached 56 per cent and heading reached 12 per cent comparing with 75 per cent and 28 percent, respectively, for the five-year averages. Later in the month heavy rains relieved the dry soil conditions of the northwest district and, combined with hot, humid weather, fostered ideal growing conditions for the crop. Fields in the southeast were reported as having begun to change color.

An estimated 92 per cent of Minnesota's barley acreage in 1986 was planted to varieties recommended for malting by the American malting barley association. Robust, released by the University of Minnesota just three years ago surpassed Morex as the number one variety in Minnesota last year and continues to lead as the most popular variety. Robust now accounts for almost 78 per cent of the barley being grown in the state, or 932,000 acres. Morex, in second place totaled 118,600 acres, or 10 per cent of Minnesota's barley acreage. Both Glenn and Azure have shown decreasing popularity among Minnesota barley growers.

Hazen, though its malting status is yet unknown, is again in 1986 the only variety other than Robust to show an increase in acreage. Hazen has risen from less than one per cent of the barley acreage in Minnesota in 1984 to three per cent in 1985 and this year reached the six per cent mark, with 75,800 acres of the variety being planted throughout the state.

TRF Fire Department Gets Water Tanker

by David Hill
Times Reporter

For the first time in nearly 13 years a new truck has been added to the fire fighting equipment in Thief River Falls. However, the truck was used when it was purchased. And, it was not purchased by Thief River Falls, but by the Rural Fire association. In fact, the last two fire-fighting trucks were purchased by the Rural Fire association, so it has been even longer than 13 years since Thief River Falls purchased any fire trucks.

What is the Rural Fire association? It is a loosely knit group of five area townships which has contracted as a group for fire protection with Thief River Falls and its fire department. The townships in the association are Rocksbury, North, Silverton, Norden and Smiley.

The new addition to the association is a tanker capable of hauling 4,000 pounds of water. The truck chassis was purchased from Land O'Lakes, but the water tank and necessary special fittings were added later by several area businesses. The painting and body work was done by one of the fire fighters, Barry Newton. The total cost of the truck, $25,101.80, has been divided up among the townships.

The Thief River Falls fire department stores the association's equipment and provides personnel and service in case of fires in the townships. Fire calls in the rural fire association areas added up to 26.5 per cent of the 997 calls made in the last 11 years. In 1984 there were 30 calls. The longest distance to any call is 15 miles.

In return for storing the equipment, maintenance, paying for insurance, gas and oil, and providing personnel and service, the Thief River Falls fire department gets an agreed to amount of money and the use of the equipment. So far, the agreement has worked out well — and for many years. No one was sure just quite how long, except it is over 30 years for at least two townships and about 15 for the rest.

Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman said he started dreaming about a tanker three years ago. On Wednesday morning his dream was finally realized. Township and city officials and fire fighters unveiled the tanker and demonstrated how it works.

The new tanker not only carries 4,000 gallons of water but is equipped with a portable pool in which water carried by the tanker can be dumped for use while it goes for more water. The water in the pool is drawn into the pumper with special suction equipment. The tanker thus frees the pumpers from having to constantly search for water and also allows fire fighters to put a constant stream of water on a fire.

Bjorkman believes the tanker is a definite asset to the fire department, especially when making fire calls to areas outside the city limits, where fire hydrants are absent. In the past, the fire department had to rely on what the pumpers could carry (about 500 to 1,000 gallons each) and hope that a fire hydrant or access to a water source was nearby.

The water doesn't last long when the pumpers carry only 1,000 gallons. Sometimes in the past, firefighters have had to stand by and watch fire consume a house or building because there wasn't enough water to squelch the fire.

According to Bjorkman, Mayor Bob Carlson and Alderman Dale Wennberg, the fire department tanker not only provides benefits to fire-fighters and the homes and buildings that will be partially destroyed by fire in the future, but benefits the community. A better fire department, Bjorkman said, can mean lower insurance rates in the community, although there are many other factors to be considered, he added.

Such factors include the number of full time fire fighters, equipment, age of equipment, number of fire hydrants and location, training of personnel (which Bjorkman stresses a great deal) and many other variables. Thief River Falls has six full-time firemen plus the chief and 17 volunteers, four pumpers (one of which is to be sold), two small boats (belonging to volunteers) and a rescue jeep.

Bjorkman said, "Thief River Falls has quite a bit less than East Grand Forks, Crookston, Bemidji and even Warren." But he does not think it is a dangerous situation right now. The city, he said, has mutual aid agree-

30-Year Reunion For 1956 Class Slated This Week

All members of the Lincoln high school class of 1956 are invited to join in final arrangements for the 30-year class reunion on Tuesday and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at 211 Kendall av. N.

Classmates are reminded to place their Saturday banquet orders and picture and class book orders as soon as possible by calling 681-1071.

Chairman Glenda Gausen received a telephone call early Saturday morning from Kiyoshi Tanabe, Tokyo, Japan, and he will be attending this reunion. Tanabe was Lincoln high school's first foreign exchange student and graduated with the class of 1956.

The 30-year reunion festivities will get underway on Friday evening with a get-acquainted mixer at Lon's restaurant with registration at 7 p.m. and mixer starting at 8 p.m.

Saturday's agenda will include a continental breakfast starting at 8:30 a.m. to honor the 1956 Minnesota state high school hockey champions. Many of the members of the team will be present and all hockey fans are invited to this breakfast which will be held at 211 Kendall av. N. Registration will also take place from 8 a.m. until noon.

Saturday events will continue with "lunch on our own," a tour of Lincoln and 5:30 p.m. registration, 6 p.m. cocktails, 7 p.m. banquet and 9 p.m. dance at the American Legion. Friends of the class of 1956 are invited to the Saturday breakfast and after 9 p.m. at the American Legion. The class will have a picnic on Sunday.

Timely Rains Dampen 85th Annual Co. Fair

Scattered showers during the 85th observance of the county fair in Thief River Falls caused several interruptions but resulted in no cancelations as the five-day event came to a successful conclusion Sunday night. Officials and fair visitors alike commented on the large number and high quality of exhibits this year and total attendance was again estimated around the 30,000 mark.

Premiums paid totaled $10,177 — slightly less than the $10,741 paid out last year during the 75th anniversary of Pennington county when extra promotion was geared toward that observance at the fair. In 1984 total premiums paid were $9,791, according to Richard Anderson, treasurer of the fair board.

Premiums in the 4-H club division totaled $2,293.50 this year. Amounts paid out in open class divisions included the following: Swine, $123.50; senior citizens, $84.75; student art, $144.50; arts and crafts, $334.25; dairy cattle, $880; beef cattle, $1,208.50; sheep, $1,416.50; adult sewing, $83; children's sewing, $6.25; adult handiwork, $144.75; children's handiwork, $7.25; rabbits, $73; poultry, $511.50; adult culinary, $567; children's culinary, $77; adult flowers, $267; children's flowers, $66.25; agriculture, $501; horses, $757.50; and goats, $582.50.

In the 4-H club division there were 219 exhibitors from 12 clubs who entered 627 exhibits at the 1986 county fair. Livestock chairmen noted the following total entries in open class competition: Dary goats, 75; beef and dairy cattle, 120; sheep, 110; hogs, 34; poultry and rabbits, 379. No count was yet available for number of entries in other open class divisions.

Treasurer Anderson also noted that 2,611 advance ride tickets were sold for the Matt Armstrong Shows carnival this year, up considerably from the 1,952 sold in advance last year. Largest grandstand attraction was the Sylvia and John Conlee concerts Friday night. Although a light rain shower caused about a 45-minute delay between concerts by the two artists at the 7 p.m. show, both shows were completed. Attendance was placed at about 800 for the early show and 1,200 at the 9:30 p.m. show.

Attendance was estimated at about 1,000 for the Middle River Hee-Haw show Thursday evening, although admission was free and no ticket count was available. About 200 people attended the Grand Forks AFB guard dog show which preceded the Hee-Haw event.

Three-wheeler races on Wednesday evening were the first time sanctioned three-wheeler races had been held at the fair. Attendance included 309 adults and 117 children.

Antique tractor and standard 4x4 pickup pulls on Saturday afternoon attracted 319 adults and 35 students to the grandstand. The Saturday evening grandstand jam with attendance of 540 was the best in the several year history of the teen dance even.. Despite a heavy rain shower around 7 p.m., the event was held outdoors as the muddy layer of track was scraped off and hay spread on the surface.

Demolition derby admissions Sunday night totaled 1,754 compared with 1,648 a year ago, and 1,435 adult this year and 1,337 a year ago. Carnival ride sales were the best ever with gross receipts of $41,526 this year compared with $36,597 last year and the previous high of $38,571 in 1984. The county fair association receives a percentage of the gross receipts.

Hardy fans attending the Jaycee-sponsored demolition derby Sunday evening were doused with a heavy shower early in the program but the action continued non-stop as 88 cars were entered in the event. Nine heats of competition were held with the top two cars from each heat competing in the feature. Enough cars remained operable to necessitate two grand-slam events as a conclusion to the program. Results are listed in a separate story in today's issue of the Times.

Again this year the Times has attempted to photograph all grand champions in 4-H club competition and special champions in open class areas for the fair. Many of the photos are published in today's issue and more will be printed on Wednesday. The photos themselves will be available at the Times on a first-come, first-served basis following publication.

Charges Filed In Alleged Assault At Playland Booth

Charges of second degree criminal sexual conduct are being filed against Cary Leas, 19, Thief River Falls, as a result of incidents at the Playland concession at the carnival operating here during the Pennington county fair.

A parent complained to the Thief River Falls police department that a pre-teenage female child had been assaulted while at the Playland concession. Leas was arrested at the concession where he was employed during the fair. He is in custody at the Pennington county law enforcement center and is expected to make his first appearance in county court on the charge Tuesday.

KARINA KREPP of Thief River Falls won first place and $100 with a character dance at the amateur talent contest held during the 85th annual county fair in Thief River Falls. There were 11 other performances and the 4-H fashion revue Sunday. The following first five places won cash prizes, Karina Krepp, first and $100; Dawniss Johnson of Thief River Falls, second and $75, Michelle Englund of Karlstad, third and $60; Stacie Hansen, Thief River Falls, fourth and $50; and Nicole Brang, Thief River Falls, fifth and $40.

NICOLE BOUGHTON finds playing in the local women's softball league is one of the enjoyable pastimes of summer. A Hugh O'Brian leadership seminar selection, she has been president of the freshman, sophomore and senior classes and vice president of the junior class. Her pageant talent number will be a vocal solo from the musical "My Fair Lady."

Nicole Boughton In Queen Pageant

(This is the seventh in a series of interviews with candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title. The official Miss America preliminary scholarship pageant will be conducted Saturday, August 2, at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium.)

Playing leadership roles is no problem for Nicole Boughton who was vice president of her Lincoln high school junior class and president in her freshman, sophomore and senior years. It was not surprising, therefore, that she was selected to attend the Hugh O'Brian leadership seminar conducted at Hamline university in St Paul.

Nicole is the daughter of Carol Gustafson of Thief River Falls and Gary Boughton of Rice. A 1986 graduate of Lincoln high school, 18-year-old Nicole is five feet five inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has brown hair and brown eyes. Her pageant talent number will be a vocal solo from the musical, "My Fair Lady".

Nicole played percussion instruments in middle school and two years of high school and as a senior was a member of the choir, playing the role of the stepmother in the musical "Cinderella". She was a football cheerleader for three years, including one year for the varsity team, and as a senior was captain of the cheerleading squad for boys' basketball.

Her own athletic interests have centered around softball as she plays in a women's league during the summer months. She also enjoys camping, taking long walks and collecting things for her scrapbook.

One of her biggest disappointments during her high school senior year was being selected to attend the Rotary-sponsored model United Nations in Winnipeg and then being unable to attend because of the measles outbreak here and in that Canadian city.

She was selected to receive awards for most school spirit and leadership at the senior banquet and is the recipient of a $500 scholarship from the LHS Class of 1972 and a $100 scholarship from the Lincoln scholarship fund. She will attend Moorhead state university in the fall, planning to study accounting and eventually to earn a CPA rating.

Nicole has a brother, Jason Boughton, 15, sisters Kristin Boughton, 11 and Kara Boughton, 9, stepsisters Julie Gustafson, 22, Tami Gustafson, 20, and Wendy Gustafson, 16, and a stepbrother Guy Gustafson, 11.

She is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars auxiliary, was a 4-H club member for four years and for the past two years has been employed at the local Dairy Queen store.

Susan Panek And Kevin Johnson United In Marriage June 14

Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Johnson, the former Susan Panek, are at home in Grand Forks following their June 14 wedding at St. Bernard's Catholic church in Thief River Falls. Parents are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Panek of rural Goodridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Johnson of rural Thief River Falls.

Rev. Stan Bourassa presided at the 2 p.m. double ring ceremony. Organist was Mary Anderson, friend of the couple. Song leaders and cantors were Barb Laidley, Rob Raymond and Lisa Bjerken. Musical selections rendered were "God, A Woman and A Man" and "Be Not Afraid" as prelude, gathering song of "Here I Am, Lord," and responsorial of "I Have Loved You." "Love One Another" was sung as the couple lit the unity candle, and final song of thanksgiving, "Let All Things Now Living," was sung before the organ recessional. Mary Rogalla was banner bearer for the ceremony.

Both the bride and groom were escorted by their parents to an altar decorated with red and white carnations and randomly placed live green plants. Friend of the bride, LeAnn Larson of Carrington, ND, designed the floral arrangements for the altar.

For her wedding, the bride chose a white taffeta gown featuring sheer lace yoke, high neckline and ruffled bodice, with full, pleated, three-quarter sleeves. Ruffles encircled the hemline and train. To compliment her gown, she wore a wide-brimmed hat with one side of the brim held by a white satin bow, and illusion net pouf veil falling from the back. Her cascade bouquet was composed of red roses, white lilies and assorted spring flowers interspersed with greenery and white satin ribbon streamers. Her personal attendants were Deb Frislie and Mary Bulger.

Mary Thorstad and Lila Haapoja, both friends of the bride, served as matron and maid of honor, respectively. Other bridal attendants were Tami Johnson, sister-in-law of the groom, and Raelene Stern, Kim Foster and Tammy Bergan, all friends of the bride. Headpieces were wreaths of flowers with back silk ribbon streamers, and they carried bouquets of red and white carnations. All flowers were designed and fashioned by friend of the bride, Linda Helgeland, and pinned by Sue Johnson and Tammy Jorde.

Tia Panek, godchild and niece of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a short-sleeved, ruffle-trimmed, baby doll gown of white taffeta with lace ruffle hem. She carried a basket filled with red roses, white carnations and greenery. Ryan Johnson, nephew of the groom, served as ring bearer. He wore a black tuxedo with red tie and cummerbund.

The groom was attired in white tails with white tie and cummerbund, and wore a red rose boutonniere. Kent Johnson, twin brother of the groom, was best man. Other attendants were friends of the couple, Jim Kohler, Brian Hunt, Darby Barron, Jon Lindahl and Danny Thorstad. Ushers were Dwight and Dave Johnson, brothers of the groom, and Kent and Dean Dokkin, friends of the couple. All gentlemen of the wedding party wore black tuxedos with red ties and cummerbunds and red rose boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride wore a street-length gown of fuchsia with pearl grey accessories and pearl earrings. The groom's mother wore a pink, street-length gown with matching earrings and black accessories. Their corsages were of red roses and white carnations.

Guests of honor were Mrs. Helen Russell and Mrs. Frances Panek, grandmothers of the bride; Ethel Panek, great-aunt of the bride; and Joe Sorteberg, special friend of the couple.

Following the ceremony, approximately 225 relatives and friends were guests at a reception in the church hall, hosted by the parents of the bride, at which a family style dinner of turkey and ham was served. Host couples were Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Rogalla, friends of the family, and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Johnson, brother and sister-in-law of the groom.

Marlys Hruby, friend of the bride, and Dorothy Olson, godmother of the groom, cut and served the wedding cake. The three-tiered cake was centered with a flowing fountain, with an open Bible cake by the side. Special feature was a bridal staircase with miniatures of the wedding party, topped with the traditional miniature bride and groom.

Friends of the couple, Jackie Hunt and Jeanne Barron, served punch; Michelle Hanson and Jill Walseth registered guests; and Paula Bergan and Georgia Howard arranged the gifts. Waitresses were Lisa Arnold, Marla Erickson, Leslie Weigand, Ranada Erickson, Monica Haapoja, Bobbie Walseth and Jane Walseth, all friends of the couple.

Out-of-town relatives attending the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Panek and family of Deeming, NM; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Panek, Inglewood, CA; Mr. and Mrs. Mike Carnenen and son of California; Nellie Jurius of Oregon; Vivian Krollman, Babbit; Melba Rogers, Hibbing; Mr. and Mrs. Don Larson, Rhonda, LeAnn and Katie, Carrington, ND; Mr. and Mrs. Dale Grondahl, Loren, Kim and Allen, Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jordet, Sioux Falls, SD; and Kathy Grondahl and Orvie Holen of South Dakota.

A groom's supper was hosted by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Johnson, Friday at their home. Sunday, the bridal couple joined other family members at the Robert and Ginger Bendickson home in Thief River Falls for a Panek family reunion. The newlyweds chose to open their gifts after their honeymoon at a private family gathering at the Henry Panek home.

The bride will graduate from the University of North Dakota in August with a degree in business management. She is a supervisor at Pizza Hut in Grand Forks. The groom is a graduate of Lincoln high school and is assistant manager of the Holiday store in East Grand Forks. They are at home at 3425 10th St. S., No. 14, Grand Forks, ND, 58201.

Anita Johnson Chosen As Artist Of The Month

by Joanne Novak
TRF Community Arts Council

"Drawing and painting is something I have always enjoyed doing, even as a child," said Anita Johnson, the Thief River Falls arts council "Artist of the Month."

Anita has worked in oils, acrylics, stained glass and about three years ago became interested in working with watercolors after seeing some of the work exhibited by artists at a Minnesota rural artists' show. Now Anita prefers to work with watercolor and the paintings that are on display at the library attest to her ability to handle that medium.

Anita likes to paint for herself rather than other people and doesn't like to limit her painting to literal interpretations of landscapes, painting flowers or buildings. She paints whatever comes to mind with a free form style.

Above the dining room table in Anita's home hangs a lovely stained glass chandelier that she designed and assembled. It has 216 pieces in it and took her three months to assemble. The intricacy of her art displayed in her home and a piece she is currently working on for someone else, fosters an appreciation for the time, effort and skill that goes into each piece of stained glass art.

Skill is something developed over time. Anita said she tries to paint something every week; "even if it's just a little bit." While she spends much of her time in the summer working on water colors, she spends much of the winter working on her stained glass art. She also continues to take art classes whenever the opportunity arises and also enjoys teaching classes in stained glass through community education.

Anita and her husband Bruce, Thief River Falls residents, have two children, Aaron and Adam. She does not have a studio so she works in her home, usually in the kitchen where the best light is and despite the noise. She said she would like to have a studio someday but feels comfortable right now just working at home.

Anita's painting will be on display through the month of August at the Northwest Regional library.

ments with area towns. Thief River Falls has never had to call for assistance, but has given assistance.

Bjorkman has hopes or dreams of other new equipment. He said many of the trucks are nearing their use expectancy, but Thief River Falls has a more immediate need for aerial equipment. Presently the longest ladder the fire department has is 30 feet long. A ladder only 30 feet long might not be of much assistance if a fire broke out in one of the community's taller buildings like the hospital or grain elevators.

A Russian's Review

A public opinion writer to the Bemidji Pioneer points out some thoughts listed by Joseph Stalin's daughter in an interview in the New York Times:

"No one, with the exception of the privileged class of party bureaucrats, is satisfied today with the conditions of life in the Soviet Union," stated the woman whose most recent move has been from Russia back to the United States.

"Life in the countryside and agriculture are in poor shape. Students are still sent to the villages to bring in the harvest. Life on the collective farm has never been accepted by the peasants.

"Intellects and scientists are frustrated by the ignorant party hacks who rule them and live better than they do. I am not making prophecies but anyone can see that the country needs a profound economic change, that it is in a severe economic deadlock. That is the real reason for all the secrecy about failures, for shows about 'democracy' and 'prosperity,' for all the parades, festivals and speeches. All this reflects fear and insecurity for the ruling party. We saw it every day.

"We also saw a tremendous growth and accumulation of the military forces, the technology, the educated manpower. The Soviet army has brought up strong new commanders who are aggressive and ruthless. We saw an estremely strong and modern army and a weak, outdated ruling party.

"Gorbachev is sincere and serious about his peace initiatives. But are his marshals and generals in agreement with him? Is Gorbachev, an idealist, able to be stronger than they are? I wish him good luck and I sympathize with his efforts to open up the Soviet society, to make it more civilized and really democratic.

"Only time will show whether he and the others like him will overcome the monsters of the bureaucracy, the army and the outdated ideology. I have no answers to these questions, even though after having seen the land of my birth after 18 years, I feel more sad about its fate than ever before. Is it surprising, then, that I have come back to the United States?"

No doubt it is difficult for someone like Stalin's daughter to be critical of her home country. Yet her comments seem objective and her viewpoint not unlike those of others who have studied or experienced the Soviet system.

For all its faults that need correcting, the United States still has the system that allows the people to best determine their own circumstances. Sometimes it takes the assessment of someone from outside our nation to remind us to count our blessings.

Consider Gifts Carefully

The following suggestions by Frances M. Hanna were provided by Farmland Insurance of Des Moines, IA, and published in the current issue of Farmland News:

A very common concern among middle-aged and older parents has to do with the stability of their children's marriages. With the national divorce rate on the rise, the numbers of unstable marriages ending in divorce or dissolution have increased to touch virtually every family in one way or another.

High among the concerns which parents often express is the financial stability of their child following a divorce. They often have more than a passive interest in this subject. It is very comonplace for parents to make substantial gifts to their children, to assist them in major purchases, and to even give them valuable pieces of property after marriage.

When the marriage gets in trouble, one of the most common parental concerns is, "If my child is divorced, will his or her spouse take any part of the property which I have given the child during marriage?" Unfortunately this question looks to controlling state law for its answer, and state law varies substantially across the country when marital property rights are an issue.

If property is given to a child as his or her separate property and it is not mingled or combined with marital property in a way to destroy that separateness, it will frequently maintain its separate character in the event of a divorce.

That is, if the parties are careful to identify the gift as a gift to only one spouse and not to both, and if they thereafter handle the property in a manner to assure separate ownership by that spouse, then most state laws will permit the property to be treated as the exclusive property of the child if and when the couple divorces.

On the other hand, if the gift is not clearly identified as going only to one of the parties, or if, after the gift is made, it becomes intermingled and mixed with marital property, it can lose its separate identity. When this occurs, the spouse of the child will have a valid legal claim against the property and will take a portion of it in the event of a divorce. Therefore it is quite important that the parties have in mind their objectives when property is given to a married child, and that appropriate steps are taken to assure the meeting of those objectives.

If a person is contemplating marriage and already owns separate property, he or she may keep that property separate by a prenuptial (pre-marital) agreement. Though very simple, these agreements are rather technical and must satisfy the very letter of the law in order to be enforceable.

There must be a full disclosure of all of the facts, including all of the property of each spouse. Each party to the agreement must be well aware of what he or she is doing, and it is also wise to have each contact a separate attorney for independent advice.

If the agreement is properly prepared and executed, it will bind each party regarding his or her rights in the other's property upon death or divorce.

Thus if, for example, the prospective wife in a new marriage has separate property which she wishes to insulate from any marital claims of her husband, she may do so by a pre-marriage agreement. Thereafter, upon divorce or in the event of her dying first, the agreement will control with respect to any claim the husband may have on her separate property.

If, as is usually the case, the agreement provides that the other party has given up all of his rights to her property, then upon divorce or death of the wife, he will have no marital rights in any part of that property.

Another means by which parents may protect property which they have given to their children is by use of a mortgage or other security interest.

For example, when parents wish to help their married child purchase a home and want to be sure that their contribution toward the purchase of that home is protected, they may ask for a second mortgage securing that protection. This introduces the complexity of a note, interest and principal payments, but these complications do not remove the effectiveness of a mortgage for the purpose of securing any property that has been transferred to a married child.

This is obviously not a very pleasant topic to raise with a child, especially if it is shortly before marriage. However, because it seems to be a rather common concern after the fact, when it's too late, the subject should be squarely faced early on.

One easy way to handle this delicate situation is to leave it up to the attorney to broach the subject. Since these are matters with which lawyers should concern themselves, it should not be difficult for the attorney to say that, as a matter of good professional discipline the question should be addressed and properly dealt with.

However unpleasant discussing it may appear to be, it is not nearly so unpleasant as the recent experience of a farm couple in Kansas. They had given substantial gifts and considerable help to their only son in the establishment of a farming operation as a part of his new marriage. The wife's parents either were unable or unwilling to lend their assistance, and the giving was all one-sided. The marriage fell on hard times and ended in divorce, with everything the couple owned being sold at distressed prices. To add anguish to hurt, the court ruled that the wife was entitled to half of all of the couple's property, including the property that the husband's parents had given them.

Typical of all planning, timing is as important in this area of estate planning as it is in others. A little careful considered thought at the outset can make a world of difference at the end.

Borrowed Nonsense

New Husband: "Where's today's paper?"

New Wife: "I wrapped the garbage in it and threw it in the trash can."

New Husband: "But I wanted to see it first!"

New Wife: "You're really weird. Who would want to see a couple of steak bones, a banana peel and some coffee grounds?"

Librarian to elderly questioner: "You'll find the book 'How to Live Comfortably on Social Security' over in the corner in the fiction section."

If you think the English language isn't confusing, consider this conversation in a local hardware store. "Do you have any four-volt, two-watt bulbs?" "For what?" "No, two." "Two, what?" "Yes." "No."

Cereal Field Day Set At Stephen On Wednesday

Stephen Seedhouse cereal field day will be held Wednesday, July 23, at the 20-acre research plot outside Stephen.

Researchers will lead research plot tours and field questions on new cereal varieties. Information will be given on a new high protein hard red spring wheat and new barley varieties for malting and brewing.

Last year more than 450 farmers attended the cereal field day. Dinner and refreshments will be provided with the program officially getting under way at 5:30 p.m.

Archie Wilcox To Meet With Senior Federation July 24

Archie Wilcox, president of the Minnesota senior federation, will address the delegate assembly of the Northwest senior federation to be held at 10 a.m. on Thursday, July 24. The assembly will meet in the chapel of Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls.

President Wilcox will talk about his meeting in Washington, D.C., dealing with the problem of senior citizens. He will also take part in discussions of items of interest for seniors in Northwestern Minnesota as well as statewide.

Issues to be discussed include those developed at the May 22, 1986 delegate assembly meeting: nursing homes, health insurance, utilities, transportation (how to fund) and nuclear waste. Nominations for officers for next year, and a discussion of the budget to be acted on at the convention in Thief River Falls on September 25 will also be on the agenda.

The state convention will be held in connection with the metro convention on October 27 and 28. Transportation to the convention is planned for this event and will be discussed at the assembly.

Farm Financial Survey Expects 2,000 Responses

In its last farm finance survey, the Minnesota department of agriculture (MDA) found that 30 per cent of the state's farms had debt-to-asset ratios of 70 per cent or higher and they held over half of the state's debt.

MDA will be updating that information in another survey on farm financial conditions, recently mailed to 4,000 farmers in Minnesota. Farmers' individual responses to the survey are kept confidential and will be combined into a state total to get the latest reading on the economic health of state farmers.

MDA hopes to get 2,000 responses to the survey. Producer cooperation on the survey is important for an accurate report. Results of the last survey were used by the state legislature in formulating farm policy. Results on the survey in progress will be available later this fall.

TG Sporting Goods Wins District Title

Beaten by Warroad 6-4 in the opening round of the four-team, double-elimination Lake Agassiz District Babe Ruth baseball tournament Friday, Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods climbed back through the loser's bracket for four wins and a state tournament-qualifying championship effort at East Grand Forks.

The Thief River Falls 14-15-year-olds rebounded from that first-round setback with wins over Roseau 5-3 and Warroad 5-2 to reach the finals against the unbeaten East Grand Forks A's. TG Sporting Goods beat the A's 9-4 to give both teams a loss in the double-elimination format, forcing a second title showdown, also won by TG Sporting Goods 6-2 Sunday.

State tournament play starts Friday at Moorhead for the 21-6 Thief River Falls squad.

Warroad 6, TG 4

Warroad, the No. 2 seed from the North Sub-District Lake Agassiz tournament, surprised Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods, the No. 1 seed from the South Sub-District, 6-4 in opening round play.

Out-hit 9-5, TG Sporting Goods was also charged with all three of the game's errors. Dean DuChamp was 2-for-3 for the losers. Jared Erickson was charged with the pitching loss.

TG 5, Roseau 3

Rob Coltom was 3-for-4 with a double as TG Sporting Goods began the comeback trail through the loser's bracket by beating Roseau 5-3.

Dean DuChamp was the winning pitcher, striking out six and scattering six hits. TG Sporting Goods had eight hits. Roseau had four of the game's seven errors.

TG 5, Warroad 2

TG Sporting Goods won a rematch with Warroad 5-2 as Jeremy Dicken went 2-for-3 at the plate and Jared Erickson picked up the pitching decision in relief of Jason Kempert, who went five innings.

The hits were even at seven-apiece. TG Sporting Goods had three errors; Warroad had one.

TG 9, EGF A's 4

East Grand Fork's A's had a chance to win the district title with a win over TG Sporting Goods, but the Thief River Falls squad squared the championship series at one loss apiece with a 9-4 victory.

Sean Myhrer was 3-for-4 with a double, while Rob Coltom, Dave Bjerke and Jared Erickson all had two hits as TG Sporting Goods doubled the A's 12-6 in the base hit department to make up for a 3-1 deficit in the error category.

Dean DuChamp was the winning pitcher striking out seven and walking three.

TG 6, EGF A's 2

TG Sporting Goods repeated its win over the East Grand Forks A's 6-2 for the tournament title.

Jared Erickson was the winning pitcher, giving up five hits while striking out four and walking two.

Sean Myhrer had a double and two RBI for the winners, who had just four base hits and were charged with five of the game's six errors.

Tournament Results

Round 1 — Warroad 6, Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods 4; East Grand Forks A's 7, Roseau 3.

Round 2 — (winner's bracket) East Grand Forks A's 8, Warroad 2; (loser's bracket) Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods 5, Roseau 3.

Round 3 — (loser's bracket) Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods 5, Warroad 2.

Round 4 — (finals) Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods 9, East Grand Forks A's 4.

Round 5 — (title) Thief River Falls TG Sporting Goods 6, East Grand Forks A's 2.

Sub-District Title Goes To TG Sporting Goods

After watching TG Sporting Goods out-score two opponents 39-7, the opposition waved the white flag and surrendered the 1986 Lake Agassiz South Sub-District Babe Ruth baseball tournament title to the Thief River Falls 15-year-olds.

TG Sporting Goods, the No. 1 seed in the seven-team, double-elimination event at Crookston, received a first round bye, then belted Crookston Blue 19-6 Tuesday and routed Crookston Gold 20-1 Wednesday to gain a berth in the finals, scheduled Thursday afternoon, and assuring the Thief River Falls squad a berth in the Lake Agassiz District tournament field, since the top two sub-district finishers advance.

But TG Sporting Goods was conceded the title when the East Grand Forks A's and Crookston Gold, matched up in a Thursday loser's bracket final, both agreed to forgo an afternoon title shot if they won that morning. It was a chance, they apparently figured, to give players a rest, particularly pitchers, since wet weather had already shoved the sub-district finals right up to the start of the district event, scheduled to begin the following day at East Grand Forks, where Roseau and Warroad were already set as the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds, respectively, from the Lake Agassiz North Sub-District.

The four-team, double-elimination Lake Agassiz District tournament sends its winner to the state tournament.

TG vs. Crookston Blue

Rob Coltom was 3-for-4 and had two doubles as TG Sporting Goods defeated Crookston Blue 19-6.

The winners had a 14-3 base hit advantage. Sean Myhrer was 2-for-2 with a triple, Dave Bjerke was 2-for-3 with a triple, Jarod Erickson was 2-for-3 and Aaron Tofte was 2-for-4 with a double and a triple.

Erickson was the winning pitcher, striking out six and walking four.

There were 11 errors; six charged against Crookston.

TG vs. Crookston Gold

Dean DuChamp struck out 12, [illegible] limited Crookston Gold to just two hits as TG Sporting Goods won 20-1.

Hunter Boldt was 3-for-3 in a 13-hit attack, including a double. Rob Coltom was 2-for-3 with a triple, Brian Anderson was 2-for-4 with a double.

Sean Myhrer was 2-for-3 and Jarod Erickson went 2-for-4.

VFW Beats EGF, Grand Forks

Thief River Falls VFW baseball team beat East Grand Forks 8-4 Thursday to climb above .500 for the first time this year, and then came up with a 5-2, 9-0 doubleheader sweep over the Grand Forks Reds Saturday to stand 11-8.

The Thief River Falls 16-year-olds are scheduled to host Fergus Falls Wednesday in a 4 p.m. regular season-ending doubleheader at the fairgrounds diamond. Post-season play starts Monday at East Grand Forks.

TRF 8, EGF 4

Joel Swanson was 2-for-2 and Chris Nelson was 2-for-3 with a pair of doubles as Thief River Falls took an 8-4 VFW decision at East Grand Forks Thursday afternoon, then went to Crookston that night for an American Legion contest.

Thief River Falls struck for four runs in the first inning, three more in the third and a final run in the seventh. East Grand Forks mustered two runs in the second and single runs in the fifth and seventh innings.

Jason Lane was the winning pitcher. Thief River Falls out-hit East Grand Forks 9-6 and the errors were even at four-apiece.

TRF 5, Reds 2

Trailing 2-1, Thief River Falls struck for three runs in the sixth inning and added a seventh inning insurance run for a 5-2 win over the Grand Forks American Legion Reds in the first half of the Saturday doubleheader in Grand Forks.

Four Grand Forks errors contributed to the Thief River Falls sixth inning run production.

Winning pitcher Bill Dicken limited the Reds to just two base hits, striking out eight and walking four. Thief River Falls had seven hits, including a 2-for-4 performance by Chris Nelson and a 2-for-4 effort by Kory Joppru.

TRF 9, Reds 0

Chris Nelson pitched a three hit shutout, striking out 14 batters, as Thief River Falls handled Grand Forks 9-0 in Game 2.

Thief River Falls didn't score until the third, but then had a five-run inning, and scored three more in the fifth, before tacking on a seventh inning tally.

Bill Dicken was 3-for-4 for the winners with a pair of doubles and four RBI. Kory Joppru and Jason Lane were both 2-for-4 with two RBI in the nine-hit Thief River Falls attack. All three of the game's errors were charged to the Reds, Grand Forks' American Legion B team.

Crookston Rally Beats TRF 11-10

Thief River Falls blew a 10-1 lead Thursday and lost an 11-10 American Legion baseball game at Crookston.

It was the final regular season outing of the 1986 season for Post 117, finishing 11-18. Class AA Ninth District playoffs start Friday at Crookston.

Thief River Falls, a 6-4 winner over Crookston earlier this summer, appeared to be headed for an easy win Thursday when two runs in the first inning, two more in the second and six runs in the fourth more than offset a single Crookston run in the third.

But Crookston had a six-run inning of its own in the bottom of the sixth to pull within 10-7, then won it with four runs in the seventh.

Thief River Falls used five different pitchers in trying to stop Crookston, without success. Joel Swanson started the game on the mound, followed by Kory Joppru, Chris Nelson, Jason Lane, John Azure, and Nelson again in the seventh for the loss.

Corey Olson was 3-for-5 for Thief River Falls, while Bill Dicken, Joppru, Nelson and Swanson all had two hits. Thief River Falls out-hit Crookston 11-9 and Crookston had two of the game's three errors.

Earlier in the day, the same Thief River Falls squad beat East Grand Forks 8-4 in a VFW match-up for 16-year-olds. The young Thief River Falls players double as the Post 117 American Legion squad.

Tournaments Near

East Grand Forks, Thief River Falls and Crookston will be seeded 1-2-3 respectively, out of the North when the 1986 Class AA Ninth District American Legion Baseball tournament starts Friday at Crookston.

It's expected that Moorhead, Fergus Falls and Detroit Lakes will go 1-2-3 in the South to complete the field for the six-team, double-elimination tournament will continue Saturday and Sunday.

Exact times and match-ups haven't been announced yet, but the No. 1 seeded teams in the North and South will receive first round byes, while the No. 2 and No. 3 teams in both groupings are paired off.

East Grand Forks swept both Thief River Falls and Crookston in home-and-home games this summer to earn the No. 1 seed in the North. Thief River Falls and Crookston split during the year, but Thief River Falls won by a two-run margin (6-4 on June 24) and Crookston won by just a single run (11-10 last Thursday), giving the No. 2 spot to Post 117.

As soon as the American Legion district tournament is completed, the same Thief River Falls squad will compete in the VFW district playoffs Monday and Tuesday, July 28 and 29, at East Grand Forks. Fergus Falls and Moorhead will join Thief River Falls for a four-team, double-elimination tournament.

Athletic Director Changes

Long time teacher and coach at Lake of the Woods, Calvin Troxel, is the new athletic director at the Baudette high school. He becomes the first teaching athletic director since Art Anderson stepped down from the job that he held for 26 years in 1982, according to the Baudette Region.

Since then, the job has been combined with the high school principal's position.

Troxel, who directed the girls basketball program last season after serving for many years as assistant boys basketball coach, will be paid an annual salary equal to the highest paid coach in the school system, and will be allowed one hour per day free from classes or supervisory chores to perform his new duties.

Another change in the area athletic director crowd will take place at Red Lake Falls, where Harold Borg stepped down at the end of the 1985-86 school year.

Meanwhile, six finalists for the position of Thief River Falls athletic director-activities director are being interviewed by school officials who are seeking a replacement for Russ Smith, who resigned from his post this spring.

Miscellaneous

Mark Nodsle, a hockey and tennis letter winner at Detroit Lakes High School and a pitcher-outfielder with the 1986 Detroit Lakes American Legion baseball team, will be sidelined for the rest of the summer after suffering a broken left collarbone in hockey camp July 10.

"Mark's loss is really going to hurt us, especially since we're just a week away from the district tournament," Detroit Lakes coach Mitch McLeod told Ralph Anderson of the Becker County Record.

Detroit Lakes lost a 9-8 decision last Monday against a Bemidji team that hammered Thief River Falls twice the week before. Bemidji scored a run in the bottom of the seventh to shade Detroit Lakes, which overcame an 8-2 deficit with six runs in the sixth inning. Bemidji swept a July 7 doubleheader from Thief River Falls 15-2 and 19-9.

HAROLD HALVERSON was the lone Thief River Falls entry in the Eighth Seniors In Motion Olympiad held recently in Crookston, but he won the team title singlehandedly on a total point basis covering several events. The smaller trophy is his to keep, with the large traveling plaque, inscribed with the community name, on display at the Senior Citizens Craft Shop in the city auditorium. The plaque will be moved to the new Heritage Community Center for display when the project, currently under construction, is completed.

Sr. Citizen Olympiad Title Won By TRF Entry

Harold Halverson was a busy man at the Eighth Seniors In Motion Olympiad held earlier this month in Crookston, and his full schedule of events paid off when the lone Thief River Falls entry in the senior citizens event brought home the team title all by himself.

Designed as a day of fun and activity for senior citizens, the July 8 Crookston Park and Recreation Department event featured rubber horseshoe competition, lawn darts, a basketball free throw shooting contest, lawn bowling, rolling pin toss, ring toss, walk-a-thon, egg toss, bean bag toss, skittles, frisbee throw, hoppala and a physical fitness test in the morning, and after lunch, a softball throw and box hockey, followed by a dance.

Halverson, 62, won first place honors in the walk-a-thon and hoopala events, and picked up points in nine other areas to win the traveling team trophy plaque for Thief River Falls. The prize is currently on display at the Senior Citizens Craft Shop at the city auditorium and will be moved to the new Heritage Community Center when that project, currently underway, is completed.

He also won an individual award, which will go next to his curling and horsemanship trophies at home.

TRF VFW Splits Games At Fargo

Thief River Falls VFW baseball team split a Wednesday doubleheader against the Fargo Bombers American Legion squad, winning the opener 10-2, but losing the nightcap 5-3 at Jack Murphy Stadium in Fargo.

"They were a couple of real well-played ball games," reported Thief River Falls coach Mark Lundin.

Bill Dicken and John Azure were both 2-for-3 as Thief River Falls out-hit Fargo 8-2 in Game 1. Azure had three RBI, while Dicken and Mike Bendickson both drove in a pair of runs.

Chris Nelson was the winning pitcher, striking out 10 and walking five in the full seven-inning performance.

There were only three errors in the game, two charged against Thief River Falls.

The winners began the scoring with a two-run second inning, then won it with a six-run burst in the third on four hits, three walks, an error and a fielder's choice. Kory Joppru placed an RBI double down the right field line to get the inning going. Nelson picked up an RBI on a fielder's choice, Dicken and Azure had run-scoring singles and Bendickson finished it with a two-run single.

A pair of fifth inning runs closed the Thief River Falls scoring. Fargo picked up single runs in the fourth and sixth innings.

Fargo won the second game 5-3 on the strength of a three-run second inning when the Bombers took an early lead on three hits and a pair of Thief River Falls errors.

Thief River Falls picked up a run in the third inning on a single by Bendickson, a stolen base and an RBI single by Corey Olson.

Fargo answered that with a run in the bottom of the inning.

Thief River Falls made it 4-2 in the fifth when Azure singled, Todd Hornseth replaced him on the bases on a fielder's choice and scored on a base hit by Bendickson.

But Fargo answered again with a sixth inning run.

Thief River Falls closed out the scoring in the top of the seventh as Bendickson picked up his third hit in four at-bats, a lead-off double, moved up on a wild pitch and scored on a fielder's choice ground ball hit by Joppru.

Hits were even at six-apiece, but Thief River Falls had four errors and Fargo played errorless ball. Olson took the loss, with Joppru pitching the final four innings.

— Outdoor News —

Framework regulations governing this fall's early migratory bird hunting seasons have been proposed by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The proposed frameworks cover seasons opening prior to October 1 and relate to mourning doves, white-winged and white-tipped doves, band-tailed pigeons, woodcock, common snipe, rails, common moorhens, purple gallinules, teal, sandhill cranes and sea ducks. Also outlined are special experimental September duck seasons in Florida, Iowa, Kentucky and Tennessee, as well as a special sandhill crane-Canada goose season for southwestern Wyoming. The proposal also includes extended falconry seasons.

In general, the proposed frameworks are much the same as last year. Shooting hours will be from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset and daily bag and possession limits remain nearly identical.

U.S. and Canada recently completed a cooperative survey of woodcock breeding populations. In the Eastern Region (Atlantic Flyway), the study indicates an increase of 2.7 per cent in this species since 1985. However, this population remains at a low level and has declined significantly during the long term. As a result, the Service has proposed to continue restrictive regulations required last year for woodcock hunting in the Atlantic Flyway. In the Central Region (the Mississippi Flyway and a portion of the Central Flyway) the survey indicated an increase of 6.3 per cent since 1985.

Frameworks also call for a continuation of experimental early duck seasons in Florida, Iowa, Kentucky and Tennessee. In Kentucky and Tennessee, only two of the four ducks permitted in the daily bag may be wood ducks. The effect of this reduction in the wood duck bag limit will be evaluated.

Because of improvements in the white-winged dove population, the Service has proposed to allow the special four-day white-winged dove season in Texas.

Compete information on the proposals can be obtained from the July 3 Federal Register.

Federal Fisheries Funds

Minnesota will receive $4.15 million in reimbursed federal funds for approved fisheries projects in the state this year, according to Richard Hassinger, chief of fisheries for the Department of Natural Resources.

Funding comes from the Dingell-Johnson program, administered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which provides 75 per cent reimbursement on approved fisheries porjects. Monies for the reimbursements are raised by an excise tax on fishing tackle and allotted according to the size of the state and its number of licensed anglers.

Minnesota currently has five fisheries projects which have qualified for funding with total project costs over $5 million. According to law, 10 per cent of the project costs must be used for boating accesses. This leaves $3.7 million available for approved fisheries projects.

"The projects are aimed at enhancing the quality of the fishery in Minnesota," said Hassinger. "Without the D-J reimbursement, we could never afford to proceed with the projects."

Approved projects include an extensive lake and stream management planning program. This will involve stream, lake and major river surveys, data collection from creel surveys, recreational surveys and radio telemetry studies and advanced database management. Cost of this project is $1.8 million of which $1.3 million will be reimbursed.

Funds will also help improve lakes and streams through rehabilitation, trout stream improvement and northern pike spawning area development and management. This project will receive federal funds totaling $970,500. Total cost of the project is $1.3 million.

A third project, trout and salmon management, will cost $898,000 of which $6,73,500 will be reimbursed. This program will provide stocking of 1.5 million trout in 95 streams and 140 lakes. Lake Superior and 28 of its tributaries will be stocked with 3.8 million trout and salmon.

Purchase and installation of 23 fishing piers on 19 lakes and two rivers is also being funded. Cost to the state for this project is $460,000 with $345,000 being reimbursed. The fishing piers project is a cooperative effort between the DNR, local units of government, sportamen's clubs and lake associations.

Final project, costing $739,000 with $554,250 reimbursed, is a statewide fisheries research program. The research will include a variety of fish species. The project will focus on such things as habitat evaluation and improvement and fishing pressure. It will also study genetics and regulations.

Funds are available to the states based on the number of fishing licenses sold by the state. Minnesota receives the most funds among the midwest states and ranks fourth in the nation in apportionment behind Alaska, Texas and California.

Fishing Fines

Minnesota DNR reports that 10 persons were fined a total of $2,224 in McLeod and Kandiyohi County Courts in April and May for taking game fish during the spring spawning period and taking fish before the season opener.

Howard Lemke of Plato, was fined $550 in McLeod County Court for taking fish from Buffalo Creek with two fish traps.

Daniel Clark of Willmar and Steven Razink of Pennock, were fined a total of $994 for taking 12 northern pike during the spring spawning run near Solomon Lake in Kandiyohi County.

Jose Jimenez of Marshall and Ventra Diaz of Willmar, were fined $103 for taking two northern pike while angling before the season on Little Kandiyohi lake in Kandiyohi County.

Five Sleepy Eye men paid fines totalling $527 in Kandiyohi County Court for taking 12 walleyes and five northern pike on the day before the opening of the walleye season on Lake Elizabeth. The five include Patrick Helget, David Helget, Larry Pelzel, Steven Eckstein and Jerome Weicherding.

In addition to the fines, the fishing equipment used by the men was confiscated. David Helget also paid a fine of $50 for depositing litter (beer bottle) into the lake.

To make the arrests, a conservation officer used a spotting scope to observe the men catch the fish and tie the stringers to roots of a tree along the shoreline. With the use of a borrowed portable radio from another law enforcement agency, a second conservation officer was directed to the violator's boats and to the stringers tied to the tree.

Sportsmen's Club Praised

Oxford Sportsmen's Club of Cannon Falls receives the praise of the Department of Natural Resources for its contribution to the state's trout rearing program.

Club members raised brown trout from fingerlings provided by the state and stock them into the Little Cannon River, according to Larry Gates, DNR area fisheries manager.

Each year, members donate about 220 hours feeding and caring for the fish, stocking them and maintaining the former swimming pool in which the fish are raised. In addition, they purchase feed and equipment and use their personal vehicles for stocking.

"In 1985, they also provided all the manpower required to conduct a creel census on the Little Cannon," said Gates. "Members contributed about 50 hours counting anglers and collecting questionnaires from boxes they had constructed and placed at access locations along the stream. They drove their personal vehicles about 600 miles and dutifully stuck to a schedule that sometimes had them on the stream at 6:00 a.m."

He said the Oxfords are also involved with wildlife food plots, winter feeding program for pheasants and the youth firearms safety program, from which they graduate about 70 youngsters annually.

RURAL FIRE ASSOCIATION, the townships of Rocksbury, North, Silverton, Norden and Smiley, unveiled their new addition to the Thief River Falls fire department, a 4,000 gallon water tanker. The tanker can haul water to a fire, dump the water into a portable pool that it carries, and then find more water while firemen pump a constant stream of water onto the fire. The method was demonstrated early Wednesday morning.

Warmth And Rainfall Beneficial To Crops

The past week's mild temperatures and widespread rainfall were generally beneficial for crops, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Most areas which had been getting too dry received moderate rain showers. Heavy rains blanketed areas which were already excessively wet in the southern counties, and heavy showers drenched scattered localities further north. Topsoil moisture as of July 11 was rated six per cent short, 68 per cent adequate and 26 per cent surplus. The number of days suitable for fieldwork during the week averaged 4.2.

Small grains are near maturity in the southern portion of the state, but have still not headed in some late-planted northern areas. Cool, cloudy weather in the Red River Valley kept this year's late-seeded grains in good condition, though maturity is still slightly behind schedule compared with recent years.

Cutting of oats for grain is expected to begin during the coming week. Rust infestations are reported from the Red River Valley through east central Minnesota. Small grain insect problems have generally been minor, but some outbreaks of armyworms and barley thrips have been identified as potentially damaging and are being monitored closely.

Row crops generally progressed well, though more drown-out than usual has occurred in flooded low spots, especially in the south central. Contributing to very uneven stands were excess moisture for early plantings, seedbed dryness for late plantings and other factors related to this year's unusual spring conditions. However, the crops still look good on the average.

Field corn is mostly excellent in the southeast and mostly good elsewhere. Soybeans are in mostly good condition in the southern third of the state but mostly fair farther north. Weed control has been poor on a great many soybean fields, so spot-treatment is very active.

Putting up first crop hay is nearly complete in most of Minnesota; an exception is the northeast quarter of the state, where frequent showers have hampered the harvest. Prospects are excellent for the second cutting of hay, which got underway in many localities during the week

Pastures continue to provide good midsummer grazing all across the state. In Roseau and Lake of the Woods counties, bluegrass seed is mature and harvest is beginning.

Spring wheat is 85 per cent heading compared with 92 per cent a year ago and 90 per cent for the five-year average. Spring wheat is turning ripe on an estimated six per cent of the acreage versus 13 per cent for the same date in 1985 and 15 per cent for the five-year average. Condition as of July 11 was rated 34 per cent fair, 58 per cent good, and eight per cent excellent.

Oats are 89 per cent heading compared with 94 per cent for both last year and the five-year average. An estimated 24 per cent of oats turning ripe compares with last year's 39 per cent and the five-year average of 26 per cent. Barley is 86 per cent heading and 12 per cent turning ripe; five-year averages are 92 per cent and 26 per cent, respectively.

The state average height of field corn rose one foot over the week, to 48 inches; this progress surpasses last year's 45 inches and the five-year average of 40 inches. An estimated six per cent of field corn acreage is tasseling versus eight per cent a year ago and four per cent for the five-year average. Field corn condition is rated one per cent poor, 24 per cent fair; 55 per cent good and 20 per cent excellent.

Intended first cultivation of soybeans is 89 per cent complete, equalling the five-year average. Average height of 14 inches exceeds 1985 and five-year average measures of 13 inches and 12 inches, respectively. Soybeans are blooming on an estimated 22 per cent of their acreage versus 23 per cent last year and 15 per cent for the five-year average. Condition is rated five per cent poor, 37 per cent fair, 53 per cent good and five per cent excellent.

Grain Storage In Face Of Bumper Crop Discussed

Concern for the growing problem of where to store 1986 grain and corn crops in the midwest prompted the Minnesota Agri-Growth council to host a meeting of 25 agri-business, government and farm leaders in Bloomington recently.

Russel Schwandt, president of MAGC, called the problem "a result of inept government policies in agriculture which have been designed by the White House to ignore the concerns and problems of America's farmers. This administration is selling America's farmers down the river," Schwandt stated.

"The problems are real and President Reagan's answer is to simply find more storage, rather than to find solutions which will cure the surplus problem once and for all.

"Congress has given the President all the tools he needs to better market our farm commodities world-wide and he refuses to allow the USDA to put those programs into effect," Schwandt went on to say. "As a result America's grain and corn farmers are facing the largest surplus of commodities and the lowest prices in recent history. This administration has allowed our export program in farm commodities to deteriorate to a level where we have lost a major share of world markets which we used to dominate. We must be allowed to recapture those markets or the surplus will continue to mount year after year."

Ralph Klopfenstein, deputy administrator of USDA's commodity credit corporation, told the group that government and its leaders are aware of the problem and steps are currently being taken to find new places to store this year's crop, which is expected to be at bumper proportions of wheat, corn and soybeans.

"The problem keeps growing each week as new reports of this year's crop come in," Klopfenstein said. "However, the administration is directly opposed to the subsidy of new permanent storage facilities because that is counter to bringing production in line with demand."

Klopfenstein stated that the CCC is estimating that it will have to find space for 1.5 billion bushels by the end of harvest this year. All types of temporary storage facilities, such as bunkers, ships, barges and unused buildings are being considered—to place the crops. In addition, grain will probably be relocated from areas of the country which are saturated with past year's crops to areas where there is more room. Currently under consideration is moving crops from this area to Idaho and the Southwest.

Following the meeting Schwandt stated that finding storage for this year's crop is no small task and will be extremely expensive to the taxpayer.

"It will cost 85 cents per bushel to move the grain from here to states in the west and southwest," Schwandt stated. "That will add to the overall price of the grain and make us that less competitive with foreign governments who are heavily subsidizing agricultural efforts of their own.

"Further complicating the problem is our refusal to get competitive with the Europeans who are now stealing markets that were formally ours. The European Economic community (EEC) is obviously willing to pay any price to take and keep those markets," Schwandt said.

In recent months, the U.S. dollar has dropped 20 percentage points in value. This has cost the EEC $2 billion in additional subsidy. In the meantime, we are spending $50 billion of our taxpayers dollars to store crops rather than to fight for the markets which have been traditionally ours. In other words, we are spending money selling grain, and in the meantime the American farmer is going broke because this administration refuses to get competitive," Schwandt charged.

Peterson Assails Policies Affecting Grain Storage

Collin Peterson, DFL U.S. House candidate from the 7th District, drew attention to the upcoming critical lack of grain storage facilities for the fall harvest at a news conference in East Grand Forks.

Peterson assailed the current U.S. farm policies that he said have allowed the buildup of record grain surpluses, but have not provided for sufficient storage for the 1986 grain crop.

"The simple question is, where are we going to put it all?" he asked.

Peterson characterized the administration emergency plans to provide on-ground storage for the 1986 crop as "stopgap," and said, "putting more grain on the ground only degrades the quality of the crop. Then farmers will have to pay an even greater penalty when the price drops again because the quality of the grain is lessened.

Peterson said that tentative administration plans to put grain on the ground on military bases will not solve the problem. "The damage to grain quality will be done, and having the defense department guard the grain won't help the situation at all."

According to Peterson, the ongoing farm crisis and administration farm policies are closely linked by pricing mechanisms and marketing failures. "This administration has all but shouted that the price of farm commodities will be dropping lower in the future," Peterson said. "The overseas buyers are waiting for the market prices to drop even further, while the overseas sellers are simply adjusting their prices to stay a bit lower than U.S. prices.

"Either way," Peterson stated, "it doesn't make any difference. As long as prices stay below the cost of production, there is no way the farmer can make money growing grain."

Peterson noted that federal rates for grain storage are 9.5 cents per bushel less for farmers than for grain elevators, but that the U.S. department of agriculture does not wish to make loans available to farmers to build more grain storage bins.

"I think we should either make the storage bin loans available, or we should make the storage rates for farmers the same as for elevators — 36 cents per bushel. Then the farmers could afford to build their own storage bins," Peterson said.

New Psychologist Added To Staff At Medical Center

Dee Jay Donlin, Ph.D. recently began work as a staff clinical psychologist for the mental health division of Northwest Medical center.

A native of Iowa, Dr. Donlin earned his doctorate from the University of Minnesota and was employed by the Minneapolis Children's Medical center before moving to Thief River Falls from St. Paul in June. Donlin, his wife Cay and their daughters Ayla, 3, and Kylie, 8 weeks, live on the hobby farm they purchased at rural Thief River Falls. Cay will begin teaching German for the local school district this fall.

Dr. Donlin will assume duties similar to those performed by the mental health division's other staff clinical psychologists, Dr. Scot Bentson and Dr. Nancy Rust. According to the division's director, Dr. Steve Levinson, Dr. Donlin's specialized clinical training and experience in working with children, teenagers and their parents "should make him an especially valuable addition to the medical center and the community."

"The addition of Dr. Donlin and the planned recruitment of a fifth psychologist this fall are intended to expand the scope and depth of psychological services offered by Northwest Medical center," Dr. Levinson said. "Demand for our services has been quite high and we are pleased to have the professional resources that will enable us to respond to an ever-widening range of needs and opportunities."
